THE PRICE SOME WARRY What there is Left of it:

Tue last leave of the Berlington Cambin contains a posterior and well-com-Protect, committing from those follows name beet of the Legislature who must now be consisted the only representatives of the Free Soil party of Vermont, those who expossibled there expellements to principles, in opposition to the blandishments of "those who dispense the great correption fund known as the specie." It is gratifying and referency, in these piping times of political. recessary, to behalf the aven, sufficiency, and, we stimut usual raying. Assest determinstless, existed by these men, in deciseing to the world that they still occupy the platfies beenfulies occupied by their conjointly with those whose treachery was instrumental in silvating Loculocolem to place and power to our commonwealth; and that they cannot acknowledge, in the action of the coalitionists, any sympathy with their faith, nor any regard for the ex-*cutial principles of their party.

When it was ascertained that the Free Buil party held the balance of power in our Legislature, many surmison were ventured as to which of the prominent parties its representatives would incline; and, judgeing from the antecedents of prominent men in the Free Soil ranks, the impression obtained quite generally, (and on the ground . of egopothy in principles, was connectly rational,) that the Whig party would enjoy the benefits of their votes, and that, not altogether as a return for the favor, but clivines of the Wings of Vennont, Oscan tors. L. SHAPTER would receive the Whig vote for United States Senator, The whole matter was talked up openly and boidly, and theroughly convasced; but meanwhile, when bonnet Freenoilers were congratulating themselves on the results of a cam paign that was to ensure them a voice in the national councils by the election to the Senste of one of Vermont's most gifted sons, the traitorous propensities of Barber, Field & Co., were at work to underminthe whole scheme, and affinister to the jealous promptings of their political aspirations, by throwing the power into the hands of the Locufocos. The public need not be informed how effectively this thing was secompliefied; the facts are pretty well understood; and we give place to the following deement merely to show the position of honest Prespoilers, and their estimation of the traitors. It is worth reading :

HELES MULDRAVE ; OR, JESUIT EXEC-CTORSHIP. An Autobiography of a Young Ledy, a Secreter from Romanism.. This work, from the press of Messars, De Witt & Davenport, the publishers of "Beatrice," by Miss Sinclair, is a most suitable book succeed that admirable work, the popdarity of which has been so great, that nearly 40,000 copies have been sold, and which has conferred a lasting benefit on the present generation.

"Helen Mulgrave" differs from the former work in many particulars. It is written with less acrimony of spirit, in even a more pleasant style, with more varied and brilling incidents.

While Miss Sinclair paints in glowing alors the baneful effects of Romanism on the physical as well as the mental condison of its votaries, the author of "Helen Mulgrave" dwells more upon the spiritual blindness in which it keeps its victims, and clustrates these facts by the autobiography of a vonne lady who, brought un in the higher walks of life, in the feelingable deotion of Roman Catholicism, finds, by an infutive perception, that there is a hollow void in her heart, an earnest longing after conething more satisfactory to an immoral spars than is furnished by the unmean ng forms and mumperios of the church in which she has been nurtured. She is, berefore, induced secretly to search the Scriptures, and is thereby brought to a knowledge of her error, and to renounce, though not openly, her former belief. Her father having died in the meantime, she is placed in the hands of Jesust Executors, and through them undergoes a series of trials, temptations, and persecutions, the descriptions of which exceed in interest and dramatic power, any work of fiction know not, but if this work does not place him stde by side with our most distinguish ed novelists, we shall be much disappoint-

THE STATE PRISON.

The Report of the Directors of the Vermont State Prison for the year ending September 1853, is printed. The number of prisoners is 75; last year 78; received by sentence during the year, 32. The earnings of the prisoners during the last year had gone to a water-cure establishment, rave fallon short of those of the year preceding by the sum of $1,463.56, -owing to the diminished number of prisoners, and the greater uncount of sickness. The or ty expenses over income have been $155.49; but repairs, change in the condition of debts appraisal, &c., have amounted to $1,861.56, making a balance of $2,- 350.03 against the prison.

The Directors recommend the employment of a Chaplain, who shall be employed exclusively in the duties of that office and also the erection of a hospital, which the physician also reports to be necessary. At present the duties of Chaplain are performed by clergymen in the village, at an ocean of $150 a year. It is stated that Vermont has the smallest number of convicts, in proportion to the equistion, of any State in the Union .-

ONE OF THE UNTERRIFTED

The real, pertinent, and controlling idea. for people of the South to consider is this. If the men in the North who have thus far sustained and upheld, even in the face of defeat and overthrow, the guarantees of the Constitution, are to be sacrificed with the consent and approbation of Southern men, how can the Northern democracy be appealed to? Have defection and treason appealed to? Have detection and freason an elegaent tongue? Will any honest man listen to the appeals of ingratitude? Is there any real honest men south of Ma-son's and Dixon's line who believe that son's and Dixon's line who believe that the South will ever have another friend in the North, if she quietly permits such pat-riots as Daniel S. Dickinson, Greene C. Bronson, and Charles O'Conor to be broken down and crushed to make room for the sen of Martin Van Buren and the nephew of Gerritt Smith? We are glad to per-ceive that some of the Southern journals, that were carried too far by party that were carried too far by party fears or party affiliations, have given some evidence of returning samity.
