ers of Basenothwaite Lake and amongst the frowning hills to Cocker-moath.

They did not stop at Cocker-moath but turned into the main road and, passing Bride-kirk—and Botava up to Carlisle.

They did not know that at that turning-off to Annan they were already in touch with the great world.

The run to the outskirts of Dumfries, where the traffic increased, was another wild rush which wrought havoc amongst the occupants of a high pitch of excitement.

To Joy it seemed a sort of realization. On the drive to Carlisle, and from that on, over the moorlands and the fringing hills of the Solway had been dim and mystery-provoking outline.

Between Dumfries and Castle Douglas was a long hill to climb within a stretch of seven miles. But the Deacons-Bellies had it nobly and it went up with unyielding energy.

His kindly act. In a Sunday school class recently the teacher sought to impress upon the small boys the virtue of kindly and helpful deeds.

A Billion. Great Britain clings to its own numerical system and regards a billion as a million times a million.

Wanted. A Postscript. Willie, aged five, had delivered a message from his mother to a lady, but did not seem in a hurry to go.

He lifted off the luncheon basket and unstrapped it. Whilst she took out the plates and packets and spread the cloth he put a bottle of champagne and one of fizzy water in the cool of the running water.

They may have had some delighted picnic on Olympus in the day of the old gods who were so human and who loved so much—and so often.

One of the most remarkable freaks of wind and erosion known in the west is to be found in one of the smaller side canyons of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado river in Arizona.

In a narrow gorge, carved through centuries of flow of water and wind driven sand down the little valley, there lies a huge boulder as big as the average house, moving on a bed of ice.

From the sandy bed of the little gorge to the rock is fully seventy-five feet. The Indians who once roamed over the Grand canyon country have, of course, legends to account for the location of the big round rock, but as a matter of fact it is believed to have rolled off the slope of a rocky and precipitous mountain about five miles distant from the canyon and to have been picked up in the path of some glacially young ago and rolled to its present resting place.

The stone hangs only by a small projection on each side, but it is so solid that it forms a convenient foot-bridge across the gorge over which the pedestrian may take his way.—Kansas City Journal.

There are several methods by which they are treated. Fabrics are waterproofed by impregnating them with metallic salts, by coating them with oil, grease and wax, by coating them with India rubber or by treating them with ammoniacal solutions of copper.

In the third process a solution of India rubber in carbon disulphide, chloroform or other solvent is applied. This process is used for mackintoshes and bathing caps and is applied to thread.

In the fourth process, employed in the manufacture of bookbindings and Willesden canvas, cotton cloth is run through a solution of oxide of copper in ammonia, which dissolves the superficial layer and on evaporation leaves it in the form of a uniform coating of cellulose.

Willie, aged five, had delivered a message from his mother to a lady, but did not seem in a hurry to go.
