DILIATORY CITY OFFICIALS.

"Death Trap" Exists at Seaview Avenue Bridge.

Editor Evening Farmer:—Sir: Some residents of the East End wish to know when the city authorities intend to put the Seaview Avenue bridge, which is just north of Connecticut avenue, in proper condition for travel. For several years the bridge has been used as a dumping place and signs of decay are everywhere. It has been placed at both ends, yet it is being used by pedestrians and teamsters continually. One night, there is an open space of about thirty feet where a guard fence used to be. A few misadventures would mean certain death to anyone, and already one life has been lost at this deathtrap of a bridge. When the city officials can afford to give five thousand dollars more to one firm of contractors than the sum of ten thousand dollars to another, it is a safe observance of Independence Day. The police will be instructed to arrest on sight any and all persons who attempt to discharge fire arms before sun rise on the morning of July 5. Explosives will be laid to blow up the explosives on trolley tracks.

M. E. O'BRIEN COMING HERE FOR SUMMER.

M. E. O'Brien, who has been at Washington, D. C., in the interests of the Prohibition party was in Hartford yesterday. He said he is to return to Bridgeport in a few days to pass the summer.

POLICE TO BE ALERT.

The police will be instructed to arrest on sight any and all persons who attempt to discharge fire arms before sun rise on the morning of July 5. Explosives will be laid to blow up the explosives on trolley tracks.

REV. DR. MEYERS WAGERS PROF. FOSTER TO DEFINE FOOD

(Special from United Press.)

Chicago, July 1.—A little sporting proposition has been offered by Rev. Johnstone Meyers, the latest figure to enter the controversy in the Baptist church over the authority of Professor George Foster of Chicago University. Dr. Meyers has offered to wager $50 that the professor cannot give a satisfactory definition of "food," and he adds today that his money was up and ready to be "covered" at any time.

Dr. Meyers says Foster defines "food" as an "appreciation," and wants to find out what that indefinite term means.

Police Have Chinese Murder Mystery In New York

(Special from United Press.)

New York, July 1.—The police are trying to solve the strange murder of Yung Yow, a Chinese laundryman in his laundry in Stanton street. Yung Yow's body was found in two tubs in his laundry this morning. He had been submerged in one tub while his feet were in another.

A silken cord, bound tightly around his throat, showed that he had been strangled to death before being placed in the tubs. That the Chinaman's fighting was proven by the blood staining about the place. Bloody prints of fingers on his body showed that the assassins had been wounded while bloody feet prints about the floor showed the murderer's footprints in disorder. The case may have something to do with the Sigel mystery.
