Accumulation of Gas In The Stomach

The presence of a small quantity of gas in the alimentary canal may be described as constituting the ordinary condition, as certain foods, such as peas, beans, etc., naturally eliminate and create gas while undergoing digestion.

It is only when this gas accumulates to such extent as to cause inconvenience, and belching, that a person may be said to be suffering from flatulence. This collection of gas becomes in extreme cases so great that a swelling presents itself in the pit of the stomach when this stage is reached.

Attempts are usually made to get rid of this stomach gas by eructation, and immediate relief is sometimes obtained when this is accomplished. Infants are very subject to flatulence, especially when their natural food is taken away too hastily, and when food other than that provided for them by nature is given them.

Charcoal is a marvelous absorbent, and is capable of oxidizing and absorbing one hundred times its own volume in gases. It is applicable to all cases of indigestion or gas in the stomach, and as it is entirely harmless, it can be taken, by any one, with comparative impunity and without doing any harm whatever to the system.

Infants and old people can use it as readily as young persons and those in the prime of life, and nothing but benefit can result from its use. It can also be used in any quantity; and in this respect it differs from drugs, sometimes employed for stomach troubles, as the dosage of these must be regulated by a competent physician.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges should be employed in all cases where the stomach is filled with gases resulting from the fermentation and decomposition of food and also from the use of those vegetable foods which seem naturally to engender and promote the accumulation of gas.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are exceedingly agreeable to the taste, in bringing relief and comfort to the sufferer from the ordinary powdered charcoal, which is a most unpleasant dose to take.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are sold in packages of 25 cents, and send your name and address for free sample package. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 200 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.
