CENTRE SCHOOL ROOMS INSPECTED YESTERDAY

Fire Marshal and State Policeman Make Thorough Examination of Building and Reserve Decision.

(Special to The Farmer)
Stratford, Jan. 23.—Fire Marshal Alan Judson and State Policeman Rowley Wheeler made a thorough inspection of the Centre school, yesterday. The condition of the building just as they have been reported in these columns. Supt. Kelsey was not present at the inspection and the decision of the officials will not be made public until he has been notified. It is assured, however, that the number of persons who will be allowed to witness performances in the assembly room will be limited in the future and the conditions of the established rule will be made public by the state police which effectually removes the matter from home influence which would be likely to result in the state police case. It is hardly probable that either the fire marshal or the State policeman will impose any regulations for the government of the attendance at the school hall which are not demanded for the safety of those who attend.

Both are citizens of the town and interested in its welfare, and can have no desire to hamper the school authorities in their efforts to interest the community in the schools. On the other hand, it is hard to believe that a superintendent of schools or a school board would endanger lives of pupils or adults for the sake of maintaining a position of independence. If reports are true the school board has other fire escape and the one in existence needs some repairs. To err on the safe side is more commendable than to take the slightest chance where the lives of innocent children were concerned. If the building is a fire trap it should be remedied immediately. Electric lights should be installed all over the building.

CHARITY SOCIETY WILL WEED OUT THE FAKERS

Demands For Assistance Will Be Investigated Before Aid is Rendered.

The meeting of the Stratford Charity Society yesterday afternoon saw the largest attendance of any meeting since the society was organized. Every lady who came brought a big bundle of clothing and the work of the afternoon resulted in a large amount of clothing put into condition for distribution. The larger part of those present have not attended the last few meetings, which shows that there are enough members in reserve to keep the society in operation even if a large part are unable to be present. The working in reays will make it much easier for all the members. The demands on the society have all been met so far, and the board has been glad to see the visitations of the members of the society. The members have been so busy that some of them have had to be excused from charity in the town are afraid that it is proposed to investigate all applications in the future. It has been discovered that the most deserving and urgent cases are not reported to the society, but are taken care of by some outsiders who discover the desperate conditions by accident. There are many deserving poor in the town and it is proposed to investigate all applications in the future. ## CONNECTICUT DAIRY PRODUCTS ARE GOOD

Butter, Milk and Cream Get Scores in Competition—Bacteria in Milk Away Below the Government Minimum.

The scores on the butter, milk and cream which were entered in competition were announced at the meeting of the Connecticut Dairymen's Association Saturday. That a high class of dairy products is put on the market by the members of the association was shown by the announced scores. The highest score for butter is 100, and while none of the butter exhibited got a perfect score, the scores showed a perfect milk in the article of food, while the milk was away down in bacteria, and the cream stood well.

According to the United States government standard a milk that shows less than 400 bacteria per cubic centimeter is considered a perfect milk, so far as bacteria are concerned. The amount of bacteria found in five samples of milk in competition was 100, 400 and the sample submitted by A. J. Pierpont of Waterbury showed but 110 bacteria, and this sample was said to be the best of the class of any milk ever entered in competition at a convention of the association.

The awarding of the ribbon in the following order: Blue to the highest, red to the next, yellow to the next and white to the fourth.

In the exhibit of milk and cream for market there were substantial prizes. The addition of four ribbon awards and there were ten premiums in this class. The first four, in addition to prizes, got each a registered cow. The fifth, the highest being $20, the next $15 and the next $10 and $5 respectively. The ninth award was one dozen Yankee cow tail holders and the tenth premium was five Yankee cow tail holders.

The butter competition was attractively displayed and, in addition to the premiums offered by the association, there were premiums put up by manufacturers of products that go into butter making, such as salt, and there were also premiums by the manufacturers of butter-making machinery.

In the discretionary class a prize was offered to the exhibitor who had a basket filled with butter, made in imitation of strawberries, and this same exhibitor had also some butter made in imitation of ears of corn. The butter and the other exhibits were tested by Professor C. E. Lee of the University of Wisconsin. Professor Lee said that in scoring the butter, he adhered to the highest standards, and while the butter of some of the dairymen did not score as high as it did a year ago, the record award was one as good butter but he had scored it on a different basis than year ago.
