Coroner Inquires Into Death Of Four Years Old Boy

With Toy Pistol Clutched In Hand Child Runs in Front of Car

Official inquiry into the death of Myer Lazarus, killed yesterday by a trolley-car of the Connecticut lines on Fairfield avenue, was begun this morning before Coroner John J. Phelan. Following the relation of Dr. Thomas Healey and wife, who were passing in an automobile at the time, Motorman Clifford S. Jennings, a man of powerful build and pleasing appearance, was put upon the stand. He testified that he had not seen two automobiles preceding his car, as he had previously related, and that as far as he knew the child had not run from behind one of them. When first he had seen the young boy he was some 33 feet distant from the stoppage-place of the car. He had immediately reversed his car, entirely which with an application of the brakes had done more than air-brakes alone would have done towards bringing the vehicle to a quick stop. The child had fallen on the fender and was carried a distance of about 27 feet.

Jennings testified that his victim "squirreled or rolled off" the fender his life would have been saved and he (Jennings) had called to him to lay still.

Coroner Phelan, expressing himself of the belief that were the fenders on cars wider the child would have rolled completely clear of the wheels which so terribly mangled the little body. Jennings believed the fender on his car was standard size.

From the fact that a clear street gave full view ahead and with a reversal of power the car carried a distance of 33 feet before coming to a full stop, it was the belief of those present at the inquest that the car was traveling at a high rate of speed. A continuance of the hearing was granted until Thursday, and the case in city court, where Jennings is charged with manslaughter is continued until July 13.

Playing at Fourth of July celebration with a new toy pistol which had just been purchased for the occasion Myer Lazarus, four years old, of 2,916 Fairfield avenue, was run down and horribly mutilated yesterday afternoon, by a trolley-car at Fairfield avenue and Jetian Place. The older brother, who was being chased by the younger, had just crossed the tracks in safety before the car, when the little fellow, not observing the danger, ran immediately ahead of the fender. He was thrown from his feet and for a moment seemed to be safe, but lost his grasp and rolled beneath the wheels. The forward trucks passed completely over him before the car could be brought to a stop. Besides a fracture of the skull his right leg was almost severed and his hip crushed. Hurriedly taken to St. Vincent's hospital every attempt was used in an effort to sustain him, but life ebbed until he passed away. The mother, who was highly hysterical, and in need of medical attention upon learning that an accident had befallen her boy, was not advised of the death until the return of the father, who was absent from the city when the fatality occurred.

Motorman Clifford S. Jennings, who was immediately arrested and released upon bonds of $2,000 provided by the Connecticut company, stated that he did not have time to stop his car, so quickly did the boy jump in front of it. Conductor Louis Rosenberg, also arrested, was released. Coroner John J. Phelan today began an examination into the death.

their families and third, as semi-official interpreters. Such practice does not seem to be an aid to the law. John Parrott, who was Saturday last arraigned for assaulting a comrade, asked for an extension of time that he might produce witnesses in his behalf. Richards was in court to explain the situation when the prisoner's witnesses did not appear. The accused was fined $25.

not seen each other since the bloody days of '65. The picture showing the two old vets is characteristic of "the war is over" spirit, which prevailed when northerners and southerners shook hands. A regular army man stood by when these two met. One of the oldest vets, General Wagner, and one of the most prominent vets, Colonel Beath, are also shown as they were snapped on the field. Colonel Beath is often taken for Andrew Carnegie.

HIGH SCHOOL EXAMS
About fifty pupils took the examination for admission into the eighth grade preparatory to High school, Saturday, before the Board of School Visitors. The result of the examination will not be known before July 7th.

GRADUATING EXERCISES
The commencement exercises of the High school took place Friday night before a crowd of friends, who packed the town hall. On the stage with the graduates, were the High school committee, Board of School Visitors, and High school faculty. Rev. T. J. Lee of the Congregational church pronounced the invocation and Rev. James H. George gave the benediction. Rev. Father George T. Sinnott, pastor of St. Rose's church, presented the diplomas and delivered the address to the graduates which was listened to with interest, especially the object and aims of the High school, generally, and our own local school in particular. The history of past efforts in the direction of higher education, and the evolution of the High school in town was succinctly given, and the kindly counsel to the graduates appreciated by the audience as well as those particularly interested. The salutatory by Miss Helen Kilbride was exceedingly well delivered, while the valedictory by Miss Viola Kutscher was all that could be desired. Mr. Frank Johnson's essay, "The Panama Canal" showed great research of authorities and the language was very scholarly as well as original in phraseology. The diplomas were handsome works of art, and the filling in penmanship was by our clever Town Clerk, Oscar Fitzschler. The following first and second prizes were awarded students of the High school for various excellences the last year: senior class, Viola Kutscher, Mary Kilbride; Junior class, Marion Summers, Leonard Wright; Sophomore class, Russell Wheeler, Wilbur Olmstead; Freshman class, Herman Ope, Jr., Maud Summers. Besides these several membership cards of the Beach Memorial library were awarded scholars in the eighth grade attached to the High school of which Miss Lillian Troy is preceptress. The High school graduates for the year 1913 are: Ellis-baeth H. Blake, Anna C. Brenner,

Charles W. Botsford, George G. Canfield, Robert D. Fairchild, Gordon J. Gale, Catherine F. Griffin, Viola P. Kutscher, Mary K. Kilbride, Helen A. Kilbride, Frank L. Johnson. The alumni of the Newtown High school have their annual reunion and banquet tonight at the Inn.

SANDY HOOK SCHOOL
The following pupils of the senior department of the Sandy Hook school completed the work of their grades and are to be promoted at the opening of the school year September next: Eighth grade, Dora Larner, John P. Keating; seventh grade, Mary Clarke, Mildred Corbett, Anna Toohy, Agnes Keane, John McCarthy, John E. Keane, Albert Pierson; second division of seventh grade, Jennie Lundgren, Catherine Lundgren, Amelia Pierson, Mary Carey, Mary McNamara, Francis Keane, Robert Larner, John P. Keane, James D.
