OFFER GOMPERS BIG BRIBE TO AGITATE MUNITIONS STRIKES

Washington, July 21.—The Providence Journal says today that Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, has been approached twice within the last two weeks by an alleged secret service agent of the German Embassy, who offered him enough money to make him independent for life if he would cause strikes in factories manufacturing munitions of war.

The person who made advances to Mr. Gompers, says the Journal, "was a woman. The proposition was indignantly refused."

"Mr. Gompers could not be reached last night, but the Journal has positive information that the story of his having been approached is true. It is understood that he will formally present the matter to the government, and at the same time make a public statement concerning the entire incident."

ABORN OPERA CO. TO SING AT LYRIC

"The Fortune Teller" Will Be Interesting Vehicle at Local Playhouse.

At the Lyric theatre beginning next Monday evening the Aborn Opera company, under the direction of Milton and Sargent Aborn, will present a limited season of popular comic operas. The opening opera will be that ever popular and charming work of Victor Herbert and Harry B. Smith, "The Fortune Teller." It will be sung by the Aborn company for nine performances, which will include matinees on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

This now famous composition of "The Fortune Teller" was produced originally for Alice Nollgen and afforded here the means of rising to eminence in comic opera stardom in America and Europe, from which she graduated to grand opera. It has proven a potent drawing attraction during former years in the Aborn repertoire, and consequently its revival, after several seasons during which it has not been heard is most welcome.

It is doubtful if there is a competitor from the pens of Smith and Herbert that has been received with more enthusiastic approval or has enjoyed greater continuous popularity than "The Fortune Teller." The music of the typical English broad includes some of his most original and melodious conceptions and has the happy faculty of pleasing not only the admirers of the popular variety but winning the approval of the more musical and critical as well. It varies from the most tuneful and catchy airs to the more dignified numbers which give long life to an opera.

The scenes of "The Fortune Teller" are set in the remote East, Budapest, Pesth, Hungary, and it is very similar in atmosphere to the Viennese operettas which have been produced more recently, and which have become the rage in this country. However, it is not an imitation of those offerings which have come to us from Vienna, for "The Fortune Teller" was written before the Viennese opera craze was started here, and it had a long run in New York and London and several American and English provincial tours before the first of the similar operas from Austria-Hungary, "The Merry Widow" was introduced here.

The cast of "The Fortune Teller" for the coming week will include a number of singers and comedians who have demonstrated their ability here in companion roles in previous years. The most important of the newcomers will be Eileen Castle, the charming little English lyric soprano who came to America to sing in the Century Opera company for which she was specially engaged. Other artists in the cast need little introduction to American opera lovers and include George, Charles, Philip, Brannon, Forrest Huff, Fritz Vonbusing, Mabel Andrews, Madge North and others. Carl Burton will be the musical director while the production will be under the stage direction of Charles H. Jones.

Popular prices will prevail during the engagement of the Aborn Opera company at the Lyric theatre.

INDIAN COPS TO PRESERVE PEACE IN "101" RANCH SHOW

Red Thunder is the Policeman For Miller Bros. Big Enterprise.

When the management of the 101 Ranch Wild West show, which is an Oklahoma product, called upon Iron Tail, the old Sioux chief whose profile is on the new "buffalo" nickel, to appoint a "policeman" to preserve the peace among the many Indians with the show, his choice fell upon Red Thunder, a Sioux brave from the Pine Ridge reservation, South Dakota.

The position of "policeman" in the Wild West Indian village was not a new departure for Red Thunder. Out are not very rarefactions. When he held the position of conservator of the peace for several winters, and he secured his "job" there through the suggestion of the Indian agent, who had very good reason to hold Red Thunder's prowess and cleverness in handling unruly members of the tribe in high regard. Even before he was furnished with a glittering "star" as a badge of authority, Red Thunder had on more than one occasion intervened to prevent feuds among the Indians, and several years ago when some of the young bucks ran amuck through the village and threatened when attacked by a display of physical force, disarming the aggressors and restored peace in the camp.

In the 101 Ranch show, which exhibits in Bridgeport, Monday, August 2, Red Thunder's duties as "policeman" are not very rarefactions. When jealousy is aroused among the young braves over the pretty Indian girls, Red Thunder acts as peacemaker; when an Indian actor shirks his work in the performance, the "policeman" admonishes him and makes him toe the mark; when a quarrel occurs between the Indians of the rival tribes comprising the Indian congress, Red Thunder separates the combatants and incarcerates them in the "calaboose" in the rear of the Indian village. Singularly enough, this "calaboose," which is simply a small teepee or canvas tent, has no guards. When an Indian is incarcerated there is a sense of disgrace and an aboriginal conception of honor that prevents him from making any effort to escape, and he "does time" without a murmur.

The Indian village and the peculiar open-air life of the red men provide an interesting study for the students of ethnology just as Jack Willard, the cowboy champion of the world, who is announced to appear at both performances, compels interest on the part of the fans. Willard will be seen by the students of the sport as a ring fighter. The champion has a company of sparring with him, and they assist him to illustrate how Jack Johnson was knocked out. A lively Wild West performance and a typical street parade are promised.
