STORMY WEATHER DELAYS LANDING OF MILITAMEN

Small Boats Headed For New Haven Are Carried to Savin Rock

SEE SWORDFISH AND WHALE IN SEA FIGHT

Cruise Expected to Result in Great Advantage To Militia.

The cruise of the Connecticut naval militia ended when the third division from Bridgeport disembarked in small boats from the battleship "Kentucky" Sunday morning. The passage from the ship which was anchored about four miles off Light-house Point was hazardous in the extreme and resulted in one of the large cutters towed astern of a steam launch unshipping a rudder.

The first boat to leave the Kentucky was carried nearly to Savin Rock before the distance to the breakwater could be gained and the sailors were drenched with the falling spray and rain.

The local division headed by Lieutenant Albert J. Merritt and Ensign Alfred C. Chippendale arrived at Bridgeport shortly before 1 o'clock Sunday and after drying their hammocks, which were wetted through in the rough weather encountered off New Haven, went to their homes.

Though not fully meeting the expectation of many of the enlisted men who had hoped for shore leave at some port enroute, the cruise is believed by the officers to have given the men an insight into real work of the navy, and with additional facilities that may soon be forthcoming from the government is hoped to put the naval militia here on a higher plane than ever before.

As a result of the cruise it is likely that the navy department will be asked to make some slight changes in general routine next year. In the meantime an effort will be made to secure for Connecticut a gunboat of moderate size that will be able to enter harbors here and on which the men may have constant practice.

Commander Eben Hill, Jr., is assured that the department will place at the disposal of the local militia a large ship, but such an adjunct is deemed too hazardous at this time, owing to the fact that the militia would be compelled to board the ship in winter time at danger to themselves from trips onto the sound in small boats.

Another feature which is likely to be taken up when Congress meets is the payment of death benefits to naval militiamen who are injured or killed while in service of the government as was Edward F. Mangen, of New Haven, when a boat fell from its lashings this year in Tangier sound.

A careful survey of the regulations following the death of this popular militiaman, by navy and militia officers, failed to show any clause whereby the relatives of Mangen could secure compensation from the state or government. A collection taken on shipboard by the Massachusetts, Connecticut and Maine militiamen and officers is said to have netted several hundred dollars.

The Kentucky which arrived at Bridgeport on Thursday was delayed but for a few hours in the beautiful waters and islands of the harbor. The men were not given shore liberty and had to content themselves with viewing the forest and summer homes from a distance.

On Friday with the Maine militiamen gone the routine drills of the service were continued. A fight between a grampus and a swordfish while the ship was near Nantucket Light at sea was plainly visible from the ship's side and witnessed for nearly half an hour by the crew.

The spouts of the one attacked and the vicious effort of the swordfish in driving its weapon into the back of the huge denizen of the sea were plainly perceptible as the course of the ship was parallel and the distance not more than half a mile from the ship.

Newport, Rhode Island, was reached on Saturday morning and again secured in the vaults of the United States sub-treasury here today to help pay for Great Britain's huge purchases of war munitions. The gold and securities arrived yesterday from London via Halifax, consigned to J. F. Morgan & Company, purchasing agents for the British government.

The gold was American coin which had been shipped to England in years of trade indebtedness by this country to England and the securities were all American issues. This shipment, it was estimated, brings the grand total of gold and collateral sent here by and through Canada to $172,000,000 since the beginning of the war. During the same period, however, about $90,000,000 was sent from New York to the account of the Bank of England at Ottawa but this was in the early months of the war, before the trade balance shifted to this side of the Atlantic.

CONLIN ENTERTAINS AT SUMMER HOME ON 40TH BIRTHDAY

Former Alderman Is Royal Host at His Long Hill Residence.

Former Alderman James J. Conlin proved a royal host at his summer home, Pleasure Acres, in Long Hill, yesterday when he entertained about 100 relatives and friends on the occasion being the 49th anniversary of his birthday.

Mr. Conlin made provision for the entertainment of his guests in the roomy quarters of his big summer home. Large tables were spread. Plans had been made to serve a dinner and sheep roast in the open, but owing to the weather conditions, the shelter of the roomy structure proved more convenient.

During, and after the dinner, an orchestra provided music, and the extemporaneous speechmaking, an informal program of songs, and the presentation of gifts made the day one of happiness for host and guests.

Mr. Conlin was remembered with many handsome gifts from the women, and from the men he received a diamond studded Elks' charm, suitable for a fob.

The guests included relatives and friends from New York, New Haven and other cities, many of whom came by automobile.

SALOONKEEPER, OPEN FOUR DAYS, RAIDED

Matthew Mihal, who opened a saloon at Stillman and Hallett streets Thursday, after a long and hard-fought battle against the Remington Arms & Ammunition Co. to get the license, was in city court this morning to answer a charge violation of the excise laws.

Police men raided his place at 1:45 Sunday morning. Eleven frequenters were arrested. Mihal was fined $35 and six frequenters forfeited bonds of $15 each and the remaining five were discharged because they were boarders in the Mihal house, in connection with the saloon.
