POLI'S
B. A. Rolfe contributes another delightful musical comedy to vaudeville in "The Lonesome Lassies," which tops the program at Poli's, the last half of the week. It is a typical Rolfe offering—which is saying a whole lot—for it embodies tuneful songs, dainty dances and presents a big beauty chorus of fourteen ladies who sing to the accompaniment of "Lonesome." Two very clever comedians—Harry Watson and Jere Delaney—are featured in the offering and they very capably handle good parts.
One of the most gripping photoplays ever seen here is "The Song of Hate," a six-part feature starring Betty Nansen and Dot Bernard, the latter a one-time stock favorite here. It is a thrilling story most interestingly unfolded and given wonderful scope to a big company.
The Hicksville Minstrels provided jobs of comedy and their "rube" minstrel show was a big hit. The quartet proved themselves to be excellent singers, both in the solo and quartet numbers.
A very clever comedy playlet is "The Cheater," presented by Bessie Rempel and company. It is a most engaging playlet and found favor with the big audience.
Lee Tung Foo, contributing anovelty as "the Chinese Harry Lauder," was successful in his quaint song numbers and won a big hand. So comely and so clever, in costume and dance, had an offering that pleased mightily, and Bland Marsh and company in a mythical magical novelty brought laughs and wonderment. Altogether, the vaudeville and photoplays of the week are the best seen at the theatre today and tomorrow.
This place was the favorite with Richard Mansfield, the noted tragedian and one of the world's greatest actors.
The story is unfolded in different dramatic love episodes in which the star makes "real" romance with five different types of the most beautiful women of the day.
This story is far out of the beaten track. It features an act one that will prove most entertaining.
Other interesting photoplay subjects will also be shown in conjunction with this masterly feature.

PLAZA
No more intensely dramatic, wholesome or convincing melodrama has ever been produced for the moving picture screen than "The Man Trail," which is being shown in six parts as one of the Plaza's prize attractions for the latter half of the week and yesterday's audiences were greatly impressed with it. It is a story of a man hunt, which Kipling wrote of as the greatest of all hunts—a hunt in which man hunts down man to kill in cold blood. The man from civilization goes to a rough logging camp to prove himself and make good. The boss lumberjack, a primitive, uncouth giant, sneers at his mannerisms. Both fall in love with the same girl and when the hunter comes, the boss is driven from the camp. He later returns and trails his man, the man from civilization, in a hunt to kill. Two fearless men face each other in a battle to the death. The hunter wins the girl and wins his reward—the hand of the girl he loves and the respect of his uncle who had refused to recognize him as a nephew hunter.
"The Dream Dancers," a beautiful dancing extravaganza with eight people, is headlining the vaudeville end of the bill. The act is a decided novelty, handsomely staged and presented and introducing dances of all nations as well as a series of classical and toe dances. The members of the cast display unusual gifts in their art and were highly commended by yesterday's audience.
Orth & Dooley are old favorites here and were remembered. Their offering was a program from start to finish and Dooley's dancing created much favorable comment.
Earle & Bartlett offered fifteen merry minutes of Irish humor that kept the crowd laughing every second.
Castellane had a very clever bicycle offering that well deserved the applause it received.
"Sweetie in Vaudeville" and "The Rival Waiters" complete the bill.

LYRIC
"Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," that charming play of simple country life written by Kate Douglas Wiggin of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" fame, in collaboration with Charlotte Thompson, is to be presented at the Lyric theatre by the Cecil Spooner stock Co. the entire week of September 27, with special matinee Wednesday as well as regular matinees Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.
Refreshment on the breeze that plays over a Maine meadow in June, and wafts the perfume to the passerby, in the story told in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm." And what there is a seriousness of purpose and an engendered thoughtfulness about the comedy that strikes lessons deep into the hearts of those that see the play.
Rebecca presents herself as the golden-hearted, merry-faced girl, filled with the wonder of life and its possibilities. Her pranks, her frolics, her trials, are those that come into the life of every girl and their reality gives the play its value.
No play in this generation has made a more direct appeal to the better side of human nature, and from the very start "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" has been an astounding success that bids fair to endure for many years to come.
Miss Cecil Spooner has played the role of Rebecca before and the other members of the Cecil Spooner Company are also familiar with the play. The result is that a finished performance will be inevitable.
Ed Trenton, Robert Lawrence, Philip Leigh, Edna Villers, Mabel Warner, Gilbert Faust, and other members of the big company will appear in the Lyric theatre production of the play.

EMPIRE
"Peer Gynt," the five-part Paramount Monday feature, featuring Cyril Maude, the late star of "Grumpy," the great New York success, heads the program at the above

WEST END THEATRE
The makers of motion-picture films seem to have no limit to their ambitions, judging from the picture productions now being featured upon the screen. The newest Lubin release, for instance, is "The District Attorney," the famous political drama by Charles Rein and Harrison Grey Fiske, which is being shown at the new West End theatre on State street near Clinton avenue, tonight. This stirring play always attracted big audiences when portrayed on the stage, and it will no doubt bring out the same large following to see the story unfolded on the screen.
"The District Attorney" is a big story—an impelling story—because it takes commonplace incidents out of American political life and galvanizes them into one of the most gripping plays ever produced. The gang, the ward heeler and crooked contracts are familiar terms, but to give them a new meaning is the work of master playwrights. But to interpret this story without words is even a still more notable achievement—an achievement for motion-picture progressiveness and the Lubin players, George Soule Spencer plays the part of "The District Attorney" and Dorothy Bernard that of Helen night. Charles Brandt is seen at Matthew Brainerd, the "boss," and A. H. Van Buren, the dupe—a quartette of capable players that will ensure the success of any play in which they appear.
In adapting "The District Attorney" for motion picture reproduction the Lubin Company emphasizes the new idea in photo-play tendency—that of selecting famous plays by famous authors. There have been numberless photo plays of political life, but in bringing out "The District Attorney" the Lubin Company sets a new high standard. "The District Attorney" is a clean-cut, whole-souled, wholesome show—a show that makes men think and leaves a good impression. It has an abundance of thrills, but thrills of the right kind. It is really worth while.
Tomorrow: Bessie Barriscale in "The Mating," in five parts, Julia S. Gordon in "The City Tigress," and "The District Attorney" in three parts.

DANCING AT THE COLONIAL
Saturday evening the series of socials will be resumed at the Colonial Ball Room in Fairfield avenue and as an added attraction Prof. D. C. Quilty will exemplify the new dances adopted at the meeting of the International Association, Masters of Dancing, at New York. Included in this list is the "Nut" dance, a decided novelty; the cake walk, the tango, canter waltz, one-step, and fox trot, all of which have received some variations and improvements at the recent convention. The socials will be continued every Saturday evening during the season with Bentley's orchestra furnishing the music and the admission kept at the usual popular figure. Classes in Quilty's School of Dancing, teaching all of the modern dances, will be formed during the first week in October both for the public and private classes. The Colonial Ball Room has been thoroughly renovated during the summer and many improvements made. The public is cordially invited and assured of courteous treatment and a good time.
