AMERICAN YOUTH FACES DEATH AS SPY OF GERMANS

New York, Oct. 8.—Kenneth G. Triest, a 19-year-old freshman at Princeton, disappeared from college early in last January. No trace of him was found, though private detectives were employed to search, until recently a dispatch came to Wolfgang Gustav Triest at his home, 970 Park avenue, from the state department in Washington. It told the father that his lost boy was a prisoner in London, accused, as a spy, of having enlisted in Great Britain's navy, to learn secrets which he might send to Germany, the birthplace of his father.

Practically day and night since then the father has worked to save his son from death, the fate of a spy. He has employed legal aid, has become his own private detective seeking evidence to help his son, and last night he said he had done what he thought was his utmost. He had presented evidence, the testimony of Charles MacDonald, the acquaintance, to show that his son was mentally unbalanced, to Secretary Lansing of the department of state, and had asked that his boy be discharged and deported to the United States as an unbalanced minor. Now he was waiting for a reply from Mr. Lansing. What more he could do he did not know.

Mr. Triest is a member of the engineering contracting firm of Snape & Triest, with offices in the Woolworth building. He is a German by birth, but a naturalized citizen of this country. His wife was Miss Lillie F. MacDonald, a daughter of Charles MacDonald, the bridge builder, and Kenneth G. Triest is their only child.

Left College on New Year's Day. The boy entered Princeton in the fall of last year, and his father heard from him regularly until about last New Year's Day. Then young Triest left college and did not return. Neither did he visit the home of his parents nor communicate with them, and when his absence became sufficiently extended to be noted by the college authorities they notified his parents.

Mr. Triest made inquiries among his friends. None had seen nor heard from the boy. He was a member of the Sleepy Hollow Country club, the Rumson Country club in New Jersey, where his parents had a summer home at Seabright, and of the Deutscher Verein here. He had been at some of these places, and, fearful that some misfortune had overtaken the boy, Mr. Triest employed the Burns Detective Agency to search for him.

This hunt by detectives was continued from day to day and from week to week, but no trace of the boy was found until last June. Then a letter was received from him by the boy with whom he had roomed in the few months he was at Princeton. This youth communicated at once with Mr. Triest.

"The letter told how my son had gone to England and had enlisted in the navy there," said Mr. Triest last night. "How he got there I haven't the slightest idea. I didn't supply him with funds. I never even saw nor heard from him to do so and, as a fact, I haven't heard from him directly yet. He has never communicated with his mother or with me."

"I applied at once to the State Department, going to Washington myself and trying to see Mr. Lansing. In this I failed, but I saw others and asked that my boy be sent home. At that time, you understand, I did not know he was in trouble, but only that he had performed a foolish boy's trick, and, being still a minor, might be discharged from the navy and returned to me at my request."

Youth Was Unbalanced. "I had no word from the State Department until the first of last month. Then I received the notice that my boy was under arrest and was to be tried as a spy. I hurried to Washington at once, taking my lawyer with me. This time I saw Mr. Lansing. I told him that my son was only a boy in years, that he was of German descent, and enthusiastically for the Fatherland. I told him that Kenneth had been upset mentally for some time, that I and all others who knew him believed that it was this condition that led him to run away from college and go abroad, and I asked that his trial be postponed only long enough to let me get evidence of these statements.

"Mr. Lansing succeeded in doing this much for me. My boy is a prisoner, but they held off his trial until I could get the evidence which I hope and pray may save his life. I want to Princeton and I got affidavits from his roommate, other students, and instructors, testifying that he had showed himself unbalanced mentally when he was in college. These I have forwarded to Mr. Lansing, and I can do nothing now but wait. I pray they may let my boy go. He was not himself or he would never have got himself in such a position. He is only a child, and all I want is to have him back where I can take care of him."

Mrs. Triest, who had listened sorrowfully as her husband talked, broke in excitedly the instant he paused. She was on the verge of tears apparently, and evidently was keeping a tight rein on her emotions.

"Kenneth had Germany on the brain," she exclaimed. "He was trying to get to Germany. I know he was, and he thought he could do it by joining the English navy. Would any one of sound senses do that? Doesn't it prove my poor boy's mind had given out under the great excitement of this

The 1916 Harley Is Here

5300 Harley-Davidson Motorcycles in the Service of the United States Government

5300 Harley-Davidson motorcycles have been sold to mail carriers for use in the R.F.D. service. There could be no more thorough test of motorcycles than this R.F.D. work. The machines must travel over country roads, good and bad, through mud, sand, or snow on schedule time.

That the Harley-Davidson has made good in this test is proven by the fact that now each year nearly 1,000 new Harley-Davidsons are being added to those already in the service.

Harley-Davidson motorcycles are used in nine different departments of the United States Government.
