

ARABIAN NIGHTS TALES ECLIPSED IN MILFORD DEAL

In the meantime B. F. Snyder, who had sought the property, had intimation of the New Haven right-of-way men's presence in town and suspecting the deal called Attorneys John Smith of Bridgeport and J. J. McDevitt of New York to the scene. They appeared at the moment Geduldig and Turner were stopping before the Cannia homestead "to fix a heated brake."

Within the house, the opposing factions, by means of oil and candle light, with Cannia's son acting as intermediary jacked Cannia's property up from a paltry $10,000 first offered to $60,000, and the final bid made by President Whitney is said to have been $50,100.

The Cannias could not understand what the sudden influx of wealth and figures meant and in the wrangle over options that followed between the lawyers, Cannia refused to accept the papers unless a more substantial amount than $50,000 was in evidence in cash, was paid immediately.

As far as can be ascertained today proceedings against or purchase of the big Beaver Brook Farm have not been entered on record. They are expected by all concerned and will mean one of the largest condemnation deals or purchases ever recorded in New Haven county.

The Weather:—Cloudy tonight and Tuesday; continued cold.

Spirit of Christmas rules all!

Christmas life and Christmas good cheer. It brings happiness to thousands of little folks—and equal happiness to the grownups who grow young again as they watch the children.

A LITTLE HINT well worth acting on is this:—Holiday shopping is being done earlier; it will pay to be among those doing it—for; My how fast things are being carried away by Santa Claus's helpers.

Bright sweaters! Bright and cheery too! That's the message about sweaters for women with young hearts.

Plain weaves but rich colors, with roll collar or not.—$4. Fanciest of the fancy—with stripes and belts and roll collars and all sorts of touches—light or heavy weight.—$6.

Some Angora sweaters have fancy collars too.—$5. Shetland wool sweaters are of gold or lavender or white or rose—dainty.—$4.

Heavy manly sweaters that are wonderfully warm and have belt and big roll collar.—$6. Heavy Angora sweaters are plain or with a touch of contrast.—$10.

Pure fiber silk and silk-and-wool sweaters in wonderful plain colors and fancy stripes or with fancy collars.—$5 to $12.50.

Second floor. The Hug-me-Tights are just jolly. How warmly they live up to their name! What comfort!

Knitted, gray white or black.—$1.50 and $2. Quilted—white or black; black with white or lavender back of one wishes. Sleeveless; $1, with sleeves, $2.50.

Long quilted jackets for wear beneath short coat, white and black.—$3. Second floor. A robe for the Baby's carriage.

Fresh air is worth as much to Baby in cold weather as in warm. But warmth is worth just as much as fresh air.

To insure both—a fur robe. White sheep or angora or even fine white coney with special trimming of ermine. Squirrel in different and handsome; as in Persian lamb.

Each sort an efficient ward against keen cold wind.—$3.50 to $22.50. Main floor, rear.

Books of rare appeal to boys and girls.

All too seldom are books to be found which have interest for boys and girls and, at the same time, are filled with real information. This holiday season seems to present more such books than usual.

There are numbers of them; books with the right sort of reading in them, with fine illustrations,—but alive with interest.

They are worth-while books. In years to come boys and girls will quote from them. Their message will be impressed deeply. For they have the unusual combination;—interest and instruction.

Judge them from these examples—and take a peep at them, if you would know how really excellent they are.

A Book of the Wilderness and Jungle—by F. G. A. lalo, illustrated in color and in black and white.—$1.50.
