WELL BALANCED LIFE MAKES MOST USEFUL CITIZENS

That's Why Uncle Sam Urges His Workers to Take Time for Play and Study.

What profiteth a man that he gain the whole world yet lose his health? Naturalists say that long ago the prehistoric waters were infested with a species of enormous shark which finally became extinct by reason of the workings of its voracious appetite. Thus Nature eliminates the over-fed. The desire for ease of life and plentiful diet is universal and is the great stimulus of man and animals alike. When man becomes greedy and takes more ease and food and drink than is his share, Nature discards him.

In the race for power and place, for ease of circumstance and relief from the stimulus of hunger, the modern man is apt to forget that unless he is careful of his body he will soon be made to suffer for the infraction of Nature's inexorable physical law. With the loss in body tone comes an equal loss in mental acuity and the brain which for a time was able to operate despite the complaints of an over-fed, under-exercised, self-poisoned body, stops working.

Statisticians have discovered that the mortality rate of persons in the United States over 45 years of age is increasing. The strenuous life of today is not alone responsible for this. Lack of health-giving exercise, superfluity of diet, lack of restoring sleep, over-stimulation, the high pressure of the race for power, wealth and position, plus physical neglect, these bring early decay. The goal is reached—wealth is amassed,—honor, position and power are just being grasped when the apple of accomplishment turns to the ashes of dissolution. The brilliant mind becomes clouded, the steady hand is no longer accurate, the eye which once gazed fearlessly on the whole world is dimmed and it is not long before the final break up occurs. All of this was entirely preventable.

Other things being equal it is the man who leads the well-balanced life who lasts the longest, whose work to the end is uniformly the best, he who neither over-works nor over-plays, neither over-eats, over-drinks, nor over-sleeps, he who maintains a standard of simple healthy diet in moderation, who offsets mental work with physical recreation, who is as honest with his own body as he is with his own business. When success comes to such an one his physical and mental condition is such that he can enjoy in peace of mind and contentment of body the fruits of his labors. The regulations of U. S. Public Health Service state: "It is the duty of officers to maintain their physical as well as their professional fitness. To this end they shall be allowed time for recreation and study whenever their official duties will permit." If the government regards it as essential that its sanitary experts shall be safeguarded in this way, is it not equally important to every citizen that he similarly maintain a high standard of physical integrity?

GYPSIES WEEP AT OBSEQUIES OF PRINCESS BESSIE

Wayside Bier Hushes Merry Making of Bridal Party

Waterbury, Sept. 15—When the Rev. John N. Lewis, rector of St. John's church, had finished the funeral services held for Princess Bessie at the gypsy camp on the Naugatuck Road yesterday morning, the pentup grief of the gypsies, who have been gathered around the bier of their Princess ever since her death on Saturday afternoon, broke forth and their weird moaning and sobbing, plainly audible for a long distance from the camp, was heart-rending. In vain did the Rev. Mr. Lewis try to console those big strong, rugged, bronzed gypsies, with the tears streaming down their cheeks. As the funeral procession passed out of sight on its way to the Union station, the gypsies left to guard the camp stood in front of their tents with bowed heads, moaning and crying "My Betty! My Betty! My Betty!"

About 200 persons were grouped around the little tent, pitched between the trolley tracks and the waters of the Naugatuck river near the rye lots. A number of automobiles stood on the road and their curious occupants witnessed the funeral services. The sides of the tent were raised and with the casket in full view of the busy traffic whirling along the road, the Rev. Mr. Lewis read the Episcopal funeral service. Relatives of the deceased Princess and other members of the gypsy camp stood packed closely together in the tent.

Clinging trolleys and thundering autos, passing along the road made the trolley tracks audible at times, but occasionally a low, quiet sob from some one of the mourners was heard. It was not until he had completed the services and Undertaker Bergin had stepped into the tent to take charge of the body, that the gypsies started the loud wailing which is their expression of genuine grief. It started like the droning of bees and grew in volume until it drowned all other noises.

Little Joshua Pinefold, the four-year-old son of the dead Princess, clutched tightly to the side of the casket and tried to stretch himself up on his toes to get a glance at his mother. The gypsy withdrew from the tent while the casket was closed and covered with flowers and wreaths, was placed in the hearse. The immediate relatives of the dead Princess accompanied the body to the station and left on the New York express at 12:05 for Guttenberg, N. J., where other services will be held preceding the burial. Several members of the camp remained in this city and upon the return of the funeral party the gypsies will move their camp to some other part of the country.

A grave lined with brick has been prepared for the Princess at the Gypsy cemetery in Guttenberg. The silver gray casket in which rests her body will be placed in a heavy slate box which will be lowered into the brick grave. A large marble slab has been cut to cover the grave and after this has been set in place the gypsies will return to Waterbury.

Just before the funeral services started a happy bridal party, in three big automobiles, came along from the direction of Naugatuck. Merry laughter heralded their coming. As they drew near the gypsy camp the autos slowed down and it was a silent wedding party that passed the casket and the people standing around with bared heads.

Jacoby Buys I. O. O. F. Building In Norwalk

Frank Jacoby, who conducts the clothing store at 1082 Broad street, this city and his brother, Henry Jacoby of Norwalk, have purchased the "Old Fellows" building in South Main street, Norwalk, which is estimated to be valued at between $20,000 and $30,000. The Jacoby Brothers own a store in Norwalk in addition to the one in this city.

Say Change In Grade Will Damage Property

Before the board of appraisal of benefits and damages last night A. W. Bueritt, representing the lumber company which bears his name, and Judge John S. Pullman, both contended that the company will suffer damages of $4,500 if the Grand street bridge is completed according to present plans. The grade in Arctic street and in parts of Knowlton street along the property of the company, will be raised from two feet and a half to three feet.

The board will visit the property next week for a personal inspection. The board last night considered the proposed Waterman street discontinuance change in East Main street building line; Barnes street layout and building line; Edna avenue building line; Laurel avenue grade and Beechwood avenue building line.

Elm City May Get New Station If Bonds For Million Are Sold

The New Haven road has agreed to give the city of New Haven its long sought new station provided the Chamber of Commerce of that city will agree to dispose of $1,000,000 in 5 per cent. bonds on the road. The Chamber committee met last night with a committee of New Haven bankers and informally voted to approve the general plan proposed by the road. It is believed a market can be found for the bonds.

SIDERMAN MAY RECOVER

Hope for the life of Adolph Siderman, aged 35, a workman employed at the Lake Torpedo Boat Co.'s plant, living at 28 Stratford avenue, is held today by physicians at St. Vincent's hospital. The patient was struck by a swinging beam yesterday and his face was horribly mutilated. He is in a much improved condition today. A fracture of his skull was also suffered.
