MERRELL & SOULE, Syracuse, N. Y.

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE, 1893.

Greatest of Republican Newspapers.—National in its aims and devoted to the welfare of the masses of the American people.

The New York Tribune concedes the election of Grover Cleveland, but promises to defend the Republican policy on Finance and Protection, with all the ability it can command.

It was the discontent of the farmers which caused the Democratic victories of two years ago. The Weekly Tribune, addressing itself directly to them for the past two years, has carried on a campaign of discussion for their benefit, almost unparalleled in American journalism; and the result coupled with White-law Reid's previous great service to farmers, has been seen in the fact that agricultural communities have stood faithful to the Republican party.

Should not childish preferences have the same respect shown them which we courteously accord to the wishes and sentiments of those who are mature in years and judgment? A child's vanity is far more sedulously cultivated, his self-consciousness and consequent awkwardness far more certainly insured, by exalting clothing into a concern of great importance and by ignoring a child's expressed fancies, than by treating the whole thing as comparatively small account.

SKEWERED AND CURED. "First I was skewered and then I was cured," says Jones, and he laughs heartily over his little joke.

The Tribune confidently awaits the result. Not for one moment, however, will the Tribune yield one inch of ground in the battle for American policies.

Roswell G. How's great articles will be among the features of the Tribune, the coming year. Men of every political faith are invited to read them. They will state the Republican view with frankness, point out the probable consequences of a change in the tariff policy of the country, and evade no issue, and conceal no fact, bearing upon the subjects discussed.

Farming has now become such an enormous interest in the United States, that there is an imperative necessity for making more of a specialty of the various interests of the farmers of the country at large.

A large number of entertaining features of general interest will also appear. "How to succeed in Life," "Village Improvement," special articles by brilliant men and women of high reputation, chess and checkers, and a hundred other things which cannot be recited in a brief prospectus, will appear on the Tribune's pages during 1893.

The Tribune asks for reports as to the operations of Village Improvement Societies, from those who are acquainted with their operations.

An illustrated catalogue of excellent premiums will be sent free on application.

The Semi-weekly is particularly commended to the attention of general readers. It gives more of the keen incisive editorials, book reviews, foreign letters and other valuable features of the Tribune than there is room for in the Weekly. The large type and broad columns of the Tribune make it the easiest paper to read.

To all who subscribe during 1892 for one year, the paper will be sent free for the balance of this year. Sample copies free. Weekly, $1.50; Semi-weekly, $2.

Friends of agriculture, industry and the Republican party, are invited to make up clubs for this paper in their localities. There are four years' of trial, of new experiment, of discussion of great national topics, and of observation and of the effects of Democratic supremacy before the country. The Tribune will lead in the presentation of the Republican view. The friends of the splendid record of the Republican party, can aid in the final triumph of Republican principles by seeing that the people read the Republican side of the story.

A BOY'S ESSAY. A boy in Wichita, Kansas, school has been suspended for reading the following essay on pants:

"Pants are made for men, and not men for pants. Women are made for men, and not pants. When a man pants for a woman, or a woman pants for a man, they are a pair of pants for a man, or a pair of pants for a woman, thinner in hot weather and thicker in cold. The man in the moon changes his pants during an eclipse. Men are often mistaken in pants. Such mistakes make brooches of promise. There has been much discussion as to whether pants is singular or plural. Seems to me when men wear pants they are plural, and when they do not wear any it is singular. Men get on a tear in their pants and it is all right; but when their pants get on a tear, it is all wrong."

—Had Tried It. Winks—"What's the best thing to do when you spill a cup of tea on a lady's dress?" Jinks—"Run. Use Lane's Family Medicine Mover the Bowels Each day. Most people need to use it."

—Stout Lady—"Does a bicycle reduce the flesh?" Mr. Shimpurse (wearily)—"If you buy it on the installment plan, it does."

THE PREFERENCES OF CHILDREN.

There was once a little girl, dark-eyed and intense, who, now that she is a white-haired woman, remembers how unhappy she was made during a whole winter by being compelled to wear a certain odd-looking cloak to school. The cloak was warm and comfortable; it was also quaintly pretty; but it was not in fashion. A thrifty mother, in anticipation of a mode that actually came into vogue twenty years later, manufactured the little maid's cloak out of a gay tartan shawl, matching the brilliant plaids with precision, and trimming sleeves and collar and the garment's hem with long knotted fringe. It was really a very striking garment.

The cloak was wadded and lined and quilted. It was a marvel of comfort. But the child who wore it was wretched, feeling herself a target for every eye, knowing that whole squares of people would say: "There comes Gertrude. She has that odd plaid woolen cloak on, made out of a shawl. Fancy!" She fretted and fumed and cried over her cloak; rubbed it against walls to tear it; with only one burning wish, like fire in her veins, that some fortunate fate would separate her and her torment. The cloak gave the child a miserable winter.

All this was forty years ago, when parents felt that "discipline must be maintained." Secretly, the mother lamented the hour when she had invested her little girl in the clothing which had proved so great a trial, but she felt that it would be weak and silly to indulge Gertrude by the purchase of another cloak. She feared, too, to encourage vanity. The cloak was not laid aside till the snows melted and the spring came. Over the gulf of two score years the child, herself the mother of girls, keenly recalls the experience of that winter, and in her own practice always consults her children's preferences in choosing their clothing. They are allowed to exercise their own taste as to colors and shapes, the mother wisely recognizing the fact that, once arrayed to their liking, they will think little more about the matter.

Should not childish preferences have the same respect shown them which we courteously accord to the wishes and sentiments of those who are mature in years and judgment? A child's vanity is far more sedulously cultivated, his self-consciousness and consequent awkwardness far more certainly insured, by exalting clothing into a concern of great importance and by ignoring a child's expressed fancies, than by treating the whole thing as comparatively small account.

SKEWERED AND CURED. "First I was skewered and then I was cured," says Jones, and he laughs heartily over his little joke.

These are symptoms of Bilious Dyspepsia, or Torpid Liver, associated with Dyspepsia, or indigestion. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will subdue the cause, if taken according to directions, for a reasonable length of time, or money paid for it will be cheerfully refunded.

A WARNING TO WOMEN. A few days ago a stranger, about forty years of age, committed suicide in a boarding house at Los Angeles, Cal. He left a remarkable letter in which he said that he was a member of one of the largest and most prominent families of this country, whose ancestors came from Jamestown.

"During a period of about twenty-one years I have been married to thirteen different women. In every case except the first my sole motive was to secure money, not love or affection. I have three children by my first, and one by all the rest except three. One of the women to whom I've been married had $300,000 in her own right, three others had from $150,000 to $200,000, and none of the others was worth less than $10,000."

"My wife generally was to live with my wife until I got the money in my control, and then I was off for new fields to win another fair bride. I always had plenty of money and went in the best of style, and only operated in and among the aristocracy of the country. In this sphere my vain and giddy victims were easily captured, and it was often a case of 'love at first sight' with them. I have some hesitation about leaving a statement, but for several reasons I have decided to do so."

"First—Those around me of course know nothing of my intentions and are perfectly innocent of what I am about to do, and this statement will relieve them of any suspicion."

"Second—It may be a warning to some good women, who are too often ready to receive and entertain strange men of whom they know nothing more than that they wear a silk hat, display a big lot of diamonds and toy with a gold headed cane. Beware of this class."

"Third—If these would-be detectives and officers of the law will pay more attention to the class of men whom I warn the women against, I can assure them that they will succeed in their business better. I have often seen a poor, dirty and ragged tramp dragged to jail, whose only offence was to beg a quarter or a dime to buy a much needed meal, while perhaps half a dozen of the worst criminals in the country, like myself, were lookers-on, but in the guise of gentlemen whom Mr. Officer would scarcely dare look at, much less attempt to arrest."

TO-DAY Hood's Sarsaparilla stands at the head in the medicine world, admired in prosperity and envied in merit by thousands of would-be competitors. It has a larger sale than any other medicine. Such success could not be won without positive merit.

Hood's Pills cure constipation by restoring the peristaltic action of the alimentary canal. They are the best family cathartic.

—It is surprising how naturally the Democratic party takes to usurpation and lawlessness. The act of the Democratic Governor-elect of Wyoming, in undertaking to assume the duties of his office a month before the beginning of his term and before the canvass of votes has been made, is a fresh illustration of this tendency.

BOOKS AS FURNITURE.

Regarded purely from a utilitarian stand-point, with no reference whatever to their contents, but simply looked at as furniture, the value of books can hardly be overestimated. Although popularity supposed to be dear, books considered as investments, are amazingly cheap. In no other direction does so small an expenditure go so far in returning good value for money spent.

To say nothing of the obvious fact that the presence of books in assemblages, so to speak, at once sets a stamp of cultivation on a household, giving it a certificate of refinement which neither costly bric-a-brac nor beautiful upholstery can confer, books are decorative. They lend themselves to the furnishing of alcoves and corners. They are beautiful in shape and charming in color, and marshalled in rows in bookcases tall and stately or bookcases low and cozy, they form agreeable points on which the eye can rest. A bright red book makes a spot from which other colors radiate pleasantly. It is garnered sunshine in a permanent form.

Books lying about on tables, or placed in quaintly carved racks, or standing on brackets, take away from the bareness of a room, and impart to it an exquisite living quality, a quality of life.

This is inseparable from the idea of a book, which is really a bit of embalmed personality, the exhalation of a human soul saved to an earthly immortality. Women always love their "things" in a clinging way to which men are usually strangers. But a man loves his books, loves to see them around him, loves to sit surrounded by them as by friends while he enjoys the ease of slippers and the homely luxury of an evening pipe. Let nobody fancy herself extravagant when she buys a book. Books are to be owned, not to be borrowed. Is there lacking to your best room the nameless distinction which you have sought in vain, in rugs of price, in faintly toned and glimmering draperies, in billowy chairs and pillowy divans? Let the carpenter construct for you a set of shelves, of pine, if you do not desire a costlier wood. Pine is a fragrant, close-grained wood, beautiful in itself, and easily stained, if a deeper tone is required. Have your shelves low. On the upper one leave a space for a bit of royal Worcester or of Lowestoft, for a statuette or a candlestick. Arrange your books below—Black and Besant, Hardy, Dickens, Scott, and others who have given you their intellectual wealth. Your Shakespeare is of course a many-volume, annotated set—Rollé's probably—for you must have a Shakespeare you can hold in your hand and slip under the pillow of your lounge. You need a shelf for Shakespeare. And when the bookshelves are made and filled, your room is no longer bare. It is well furnished.

In a little hamlet on the hills, remote from a railroad, in a region where the good wife still sews her rags into a great many-colored balls, and weaves her own carpet at her own hand-loom, there stands a house most simply, yet most luxuriously furnished. No curtain to hide the bills that go to sleep daily opposite the windows, and a window in the morning flushed and rosy like children opening sweet eyes to the new day. No rugs on the floors, few pictures on the walls, but everywhere books—in the mother's chamber, in the boy's room, in the father's study. And the house is abundantly furnished. Margaret E. Saugster, in Harper's Bazar.

"Certain hard words, made into pills. Simply to sweeten the doctor's bills." The children's health must not be neglected. Cold in the head causes catarrh. Ely's Cream Balm cures it. It is perfectly safe and is easily applied into the nostrils. The worst cases yielding to it. Price 50c.

One of my children had a very bad discharge from her nose. Two physicians prescribed, but without benefit. We tried Ely's Cream Balm and much to our surprise there was a marked improvement. We continued using the balm and in a short time the discharge was cured. D. B. Cary, Covington, N. Y.

The honest public sentiment of the people of the United States is unambiguously in favor of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. The dealers pronounce it to be the only standard cough remedy.

"Maid—"The agent says this trunk is over weight." Miss Wundie, of Chicago—"I told you not to put both shoes in one trunk."

THE ONLY WAY To cure diseases of the skin such as salt rheum, eczema, pimples, boils, blotches, ulcers and sores, is by the use of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

"I used numbers of so-called blood purifiers, writes Mrs. Belinda Hodson, Haverhill, N. H., until I began to take Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and from the first bottle I experienced relief, although I was suffering from an ulcerated sore leg, a few bottles entirely cured me."

While Favorite Remedy is curing the eruptions and sores caused by impurities of the blood, it is also regulating the bowels, assists digestion, clears the complexion, produces refreshing sleep, dispels aches, pains, nervousness, and melancholia, puts new life and strength in the debilitated. If you have suffered from the La Grippe, buy a bottle of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and it will put vigor and life in your body again, and make you as good as new.
