ABSOLUTELY PURE

NO ROOM.
"To see there was no room for them in the inn."
BY E. F. AKERS.
When did you wear guests more noble,
Strangers more renowned and blest,
At the door of human dwelling
Seek for shelter, food and rest,
And no room for them, no room?
Maiden, wife, and virgin mother
With her new born babe so pure,
Come to share the cold world's greetings
And its hollowing endures,
Yet no room for them, no room?
Nests for birds and holes for foxes,
All by lavish bounty fed;
While the wandering Redeemer
Had not where to lay his head,
For there was for him, no room?
Room for wealth and pride and fashion,
In the brilliant halls of earth,
Where the hosts of sin may gather
Round the gold-embroidered hearth,
But for him, no room, no room!

Messrs. Scott & Quinn gave another of their elegant feasts, at "The Parlor," Christmas eve. Such generosity is fast engraving them into the affections of their patrons.
The several churches held their usual Christmas observances last evening, and as a consequence the good Sunday school scholars have a surfeit of those good things prized by childhood.
It is said that John E. Bullaine, of Whitman county, will be Gov. Rogers' private Secretary. He is a newspaper man, and was a Republican up to the adoption of the gold standard by his party at St. Louis.

In faithful keeping with the season, the mails came in yesterday, heavily laden with Christmas packages marked "merchandise," and the Post office was kept open from nine to ten to facilitate their delivery to anxious recipients.
The dredger is now depositing its channel excavations at the draw, and there is a very perceptible increase of current in the west channel, where all the water from the upper bay will soon be compelled to find passage in and out as the tide flows or ebbs.
Olympia Lodge F. and A. M., Friday night, elected the following officers for the next term: Dr. Armstrong, W. M.; A. S. Ruth, S. W.; D. B. Lively, J. W.; W. McMicken, Treasurer; J. P. Tweed, Secretary, and H. D. Westerman, Tyler.
The morning subject selected by the pastor of the M. E. Church for next Sunday morning is, "The Holy Spirit, the Author of Conversion." Evening discourse: "Something New," for a New Year's sermon. Service begins at 7 P. M. Everybody invited.
Several ladies who have rooms to rent have left their names with a directory of those who wish to engage accommodations during the session of the legislature. The wise man is he who keeps as much as possible out of the current of lobby influence which prevails in public places.
The Woman's Club asks the donation of books and magazines for distribution every fourth Saturday, to "country people, outside of Olympia," as the official announcement has it in one of the local papers. As to what is to be done with the "country people" within the city, by way of literary enlightenment, the public is left in provoking doubt.
A curiosity in the turkey line may be seen at the market of Brewer Bros. In a cage awaiting holiday purchasers are a number of Holland turkeys of the breed of the Holland turkeys of snow white plumage. The sides of the head are of a pink color, but much lighter and more delicately tinted than in the common black and brown turkeys. These beautiful fowls had from Chehalis county.
D. J. Bigelow was the fortunate winner of the mammoth turkey given by Mr. Hall to his patrons on Christmas eve. There were 350 guesses to its weight, ranging from 14 to 45 pounds. The actual weight was 20 pounds 2 ounces, which were the exact figures made by the winner. Mr. Hall has another turkey in his window to be awarded on New Year's eve.
The meeting conducted by the W. C. T. U. in the United Presbyterian Church, on last Sunday evening, was very interesting. Several other meetings of the same kind might be held to good advantage, and thus give many who know very little of their work an opportunity to learn of the good things of the great National W. C. T. U. Convention recently held in St. Louis.
From all accounts, every town in the Sound country had a turkey gobler to be "given away" to the customer who came nearest to guessing the weight of the bird. Every town also had the fad of displaying a fine watch the price of which would be reduced a dollar each day till Christmas when some lucky fellow would take it at an astonishingly low figure.
The old saw "It's an ill wind," etc., is exemplified by the fact that the slight loss suffered by farmers in the freezing of their potatoes during Thanksgiving week, has caused the price of that product to go up to a figure which will more than cover the prospective deficit of producers. In expectation of a corner being inaugurated, down Sound dealers are offering $20 per ton for marketable potatoes.
Both Boggs and Krugg, the defaulting Treasurers of Tacoma and Seattle, having exhausted their technical rights in the courts for averting punishment for their crimes, have applied to Gov. McGraw for pardons, and some of the manipulators of machine-politics predict that they will be successful. The STANDARD has never had an exalted opinion of the present executive, but it is scarcely prepared to believe that Gov. McGraw will lend himself to such a nefarious proceeding.
Five of the longest deeds and two of the largest mortgages ever filed for record in this county, were placed in possession of the Auditor last week. The documents are printed in book form and convey the property of the Northern Pacific Railroad Co., in this county, to the Northern Pacific Railway Co. The fees for recording these instruments amount to $263, and as similar record must be made in every county traversed by the road, the cost for recording alone amounts to a snug little fortune.
The ladies of the Theological Society gave a "Brotherhood Supper," in their hall, in the Hale block, Saturday evening. This observance is intended as a festival for wayfarers who are separated from home and friends, as a means of reminding the lonely that the chain of brotherhood extends wherever civilization exists. Quite a number of specially invited guests likewise participated in the good cheer. Some of our leading grocers and bakers generously donated the ground-work of the feast, but the skill and good taste with which it was prepared, and the exquisite grace with which it was served, only appertain to the fair sex who originated and carried into execution the praiseworthy undertaking.

A singular way our city authorities have of making repairs in defective street planking is to create a "dead-fall" absolutely more dangerous than the original break. If a plank is shattered and a yawning gulf threatens to swallow up the unwary wheelman or unfortunate pedestrian who happens to traverse the death-line at night, the plan is to stick a plank or tramping in the hole, protruding several feet in the air, which by daylight would be sufficient warning to "keep off the grass," but at night a veritable snubbing-post for the unwary. No better means could have been devised for establishing the ground-work of a damage suit should some unfortunate citizen be maimed or killed by this contrivance. Even the prevention of hanging out a lantern has been omitted, probably to give any one bringing suit a sounder ground for action.
A beautiful little propeller boat, built and owned by F. Chase, of Little Rock, was brought to town on Christmas morning, and placed in her "native element," where she sits like a duck, and when the power is applied runs like a greyhound. She is 21 feet long, built of cedar and spruce, and the propeller 16 inches in diameter, is rotated by two levers with bevel-gearing. It is thought that she can make eight miles an hour with two men at the levers, without extra exertion. Commodore McDonald says the device for propulsion is a plain infringement of his patent, but without some of its best points and he immediately challenged the skipper of the "X-Ray," the name of the new boat, to a race with his craft which is well known to the public. The challenge was immediately accepted, and in the contest the new boat came out a couple of lengths ahead of the commodore's craft. Mr. Chase and a couple of friends left to-day for Orcas Island in the "X-Ray."
It turns out that the "benefit" for the school library fund, from the DeKannett lectures, was no benefit after all—that the balance is on the wrong side of the ledger to constitute anything but a loss. Prof. Hawes says in a letter to the press, that the whole receipts aggregated $2.10 and the expenses footed up $96.60. If this be true—and there is no doubt but that the statement is correct—the poor result may be attributed to the details of management, for there were enough people in attendance, if all paid the admission fee, to have afforded a much larger aggregate of gross receipts than is given in the statement. The fact is, the doorkeepers, being unused to such work, allowed many to pass in without tickets or the "equivalents" and this will always result in disaster to the best of objects and the most careful management in other respects. The Professor maintains that the people received their money's worth in the lectures, which is true, but it is to be regretted that means were not adopted to have made the entertainments a complete success.
It is a pity that the earth deposited by the dredger had not been placed in a straight line surrounding the remainder of the piling of the old Long wharf. Had this been done, it would have removed a menace to navigation, and have provided a permanent causeway from the city front to deep water. The piles would have served a good purpose in keeping it in place, whereas as now deposited in unsightly knolls all over the flats, it is only a question of time when some of it will find its way back into the excavated channel. The extra labor involved in placing the debris from the channel would have been exceedingly small, and with a disposition on the part of the contractor to render a satisfactory service, would have probably cost nothing, and the result would have been a permanent work and an object of pride and utility. It will be remembered that a popular rendezvous the wharf was of long summer evenings, before the toro had rendered it an unsafe place for vehicles or boisterous crowds of people. One of our most intelligent citizens remarked at that time, that if the wharf served no other purpose than to place for recreation it was well worth what it cost. But as the harbor improvements have progressed so far that it is now too late to thus utilize the waste earth, the old adage about crying over spilled milk admonishes us that regrets are in vain.
THE BOARD OF TRADE.
Expresses Its Opinion on Various Weighty Matters.
The Olympian alludes to a very "enthusiastic" meeting of the Board of Trade, held Saturday night, at which a full set of officers was elected, and a resolution adopted advising Congress to create a new department in the President's cabinet, to be known as the Department of Manufactures and Commerce. It was also ascertained to be the "enthusiastic" opinion of the board that the Presidential term should be extended to six years and that the incumbent be ineligible for a second term. This "enthusiastic" meeting was, in some respects, a repetition of history, for in numbers it was precisely as numerous as attended the memorable meeting of the three tailors of Dooley street. But that did not abate the "enthusiasm" with which the most weighty propositions were tackled.
The following officers for the ensuing year were selected by the triumvirate: N. H. Owens, President; W. L. Bilger, Vice President; J. C. Rathbun, Secretary, and J. F. Govey, Treasurer.

The Child's Prayer.
Nun recumbo, dormituro,
Deus, pro me servare;
Et pro meo, pro meo, pro meo,
Impio, impio, impio, impio,
Impio, impio, impio, impio.

ED. STANDARD:
The above elegant Latin rendering of Dr. Watts' "Child's Prayer" by Governor Newell, as published in the last issue of your paper, deserves something more than a passing notice. In these days of wayward literature when university honors are measured by the outcome of foot-ball games and rowing contests, it is like sniffing a spicy breeze from the groves of classic land to read such a little gem as he has given us.
A complete analysis of this translation would be too long for a review notice, but I will cite two or three points well worthy the study of critics. The first and second lines comprise four trochaic feet; the third and fourth lines comprise four iambic feet with an additional unaccented syllable, while all the four lines together preserve a double rhyme on the penult and ultimate, by a happy use of the present infinitive of verbs in the first conjugation. No other device would secure this result.
The first line is strictly literal; it is not so, however, with the remaining three lines, for the "pro meo" and "impio" are rendered the Governor makes a great improvement on the original as penned by Dr. Watts. In the second and fourth lines the reverend author says, "I pray the Lord," using the definite article, and merely speaking of the Lord in the cold third person. In the Latin version the name of God is put in the vocative case, introduced by the personal pronoun "meo"; and thus making a direct address brimming full of warm pathos and fervor, equivalent, in fact, to the impassioned appeal, "I pray thee, O Lord!" In the third line, Watts says, "If I should die before I wake," rather boldly implying that the suppliant takes the chances of dying after he wakes.
As an offset to this, the translation has it, "If I should die, not to awake," a much more logical sentiment and fully in keeping with the laws of our physical being. L. F. VESKES.

The Stanford Club.
Stanford University plays a great game of football, as every person knows. The fame of the team and its great coach from Yale, is common talk in athletic and collegiate circles all over the country. Last Thanksgiving Day, in the presence of 20,000 people they demonstrated their supremacy on the gridiron by defeating their old rival, the University of California to the tune of 20 to 0. In the evening the talent and versatility of the college men manifested itself in another direction. The students held the boards, at California Theater presenting their Glee, Mandolin and Specialty Clubs, and hundreds of people were turned away from the greatest college show ever staged on the coast. The clubs are now making a triumphal tour of the northwest, singing and playing their way into the hearts of the crowds of houses. They play one night at Olympia Theater, Saturday evening, 26th inst. The clubs eschew the monotonous ditties of the old style clubs and are right up to date with a new repertoire and a list of high class specialties seldom equalled on the professional stage. Their appearance here will be an event of the season. Social, musical, and athletic circles are looking forward to the date and will make the fete a brilliant success.

The Home is a 20-page monthly filled with original stories, literary and domestic topics and fashions. Its department of fancy work is a special feature, new and original designs each issue. The price of subscription is 50 cents per year and will include one to trial subscribers, a copy of this book will be given with a 6 months' subscription. The price of book is 25 cents, but a 6 months' subscription and the book combined will be sent for only 25 cents. Their annual premium list for 1897 will be sent free on application.

A. McDonald, a well-known farmer, living at Bonanza mine, near Colville, while going home from Northport Saturday evening, was struck by a footman carrying his blankets. Mr. McDonald invited the stranger to ride, which invitation was cheerfully accepted. The farmer, knowing that there were no accommodations along for a second term. This "enthusiastic" meeting was, in some respects, a repetition of history, for in numbers it was precisely as numerous as attended the memorable meeting of the three tailors of Dooley street. But that did not abate the "enthusiasm" with which the most weighty propositions were tackled.
The following officers for the ensuing year were selected by the triumvirate: N. H. Owens, President; W. L. Bilger, Vice President; J. C. Rathbun, Secretary, and J. F. Govey, Treasurer.
