THE ALL-ABSORBING TOPIC.

The Varied Career of the Noted Desperado Tracy Briefly Stated

The exploits of the James brothers have never exceeded in interest the acts of the Oregon desperados—Tracy and Merrill—if Oly and Rec are to be believed, in their daily sensations. One day they visit a farm house for pie, another day to borrow a razor with which to shave their beard and make themselves presentable to civilized society, still another to capture and make a slave of a woman. They visit the farm yard, suck eggs; the stable and steal a horse and saddle, and finally reach the shores of Puget Sound and capture a gasoline launch with five men to operate it and proceed to Seattle; the last exploit being accomplished by Tracy alone, he having killed, as he alleged, his companion, as he was a constant menace to a discovery in the woods.

Tuesday afternoon, according to these reports, Alexander Laird, who lives on the Kandle donation claim, about six miles from town, was held up for several hours by Tracy. He bound Laird and then helped himself to anything he wanted. He cooked a meal and ate heartily. The unwelcome guest remained about five hours, during which time he rummaged the cabin and finding a black suit of clothes put them on leaving his well-worn suit in exchange. During the afternoon the chimney caught fire, and he released Laird long enough to Thomas C. Griffiths, who for years was regarded as the best criminal lawyer of Eastern Washington, died suddenly Saturday at his home in the suburbs of Spokane. He was the first Democratic candidate for Congress in this State. His death is attributed to heart disease.

Aberdeen is again in trouble over her dance halls. This time, instead of the lawyers and temperance societies as prosecutors, the complainant is a Tott Allen, proprietress of a dance hall herself. But Tott Allen's place is a temperance dance hall and there is where the shoe pinches. Tott wants all other kinds of dance halls driven out of the town.

Judge Mason Irwin of Mason county is following an old Territorial statute, which is generally supposed to be obsolete, but which has never been repealed. It is a law providing that in civil cases the losing side may be taxed $12 to pay jury fees. While this sum does not begin to cover the cost of trials, yet it is claimed that the county has saved considerably by this method.

Back in the deep foothills, east and southeast of Milton, Ore., where a posse of 30 men is pursuing Rucker Rogers, and the posse of the Pacific Washington State Penitentiary, is one of the most notorious outlaw haunts in the West, and it is to this district the escapee is supposed to have gone. The penitentiary officials admit hope is almost gone if Rogers eludes the men guarding the canyons and gets into the timber.

The druggists of Washington, on July 10, 11 and 12, will assemble in annual convention in Seattle, and from this meeting will originate the Pacific Coast Drug Association, which will be composed of at least 1,000 druggists in the State of Washington and Coast. Between 100 and 200 druggists will attend the meeting of the State association in that city, for which preparations are in progress now by the local organization.

Gerald R. Campbell, the man shot while resisting arrest at Whatcom, Saturday, by Policeman Frank Alvord, died the following day. The autopsy revealed the fact that Campbell died from concussion of the brain from the beating over the head given him by Officer Jessup, in his attempt to make him loosen his hold on Alvord's pistol, rather than from the wound inflicted by the bullet.

James Sales, a pioneer resident of Puget Sound and at one time a member of the Territorial Legislature, is under arrest at Hoquiam, Yukon Territory, for appropriation of money. Under the United States code the crime would be larceny by embezzlement. It is charged that Sales, as agent and attorney in fact for the owner, sold claim No. 1 above discovered, on Livingston creek, in the Big Salmon district, to C. C. Brunner of Skagway, for a considerable sum of money, and that when he returned with Big Salmon he had no money with him to account to the owner of the claim.
