CHURCH CREED AND POLITICAL PRINCIPLE.

A Remarkable Sermon by the Pastor of St. John's Church.

On last Sunday morning at St. John's church in this city, the pastor, Rev. F. K. Howard, delivered a sermon on conservatism and innovation, as applied to conditions found in the religious and political worlds at the present time. The reverend gentleman began by referring to the agitation in the realm of religious thought in the 19th century, when Martin Luther raised the standard of revolt, claiming the right of private judgment in the matter of religious worship. The Anglican church did not adopt the extreme individualism of the Protestants; neither did it champion the absolutism of the Romish church. In all organisms there are two principles; individualism, which expresses itself in restless self-assertion, and that force, sometimes called collectivism, which tends to stamp out individual effort, which is subversive of the liberties of the masses.

The English church happily avoided these two extremes. After the struggle for religious freedom, there were revolutions to attain political liberty; now we are face to face with the proposition of economic freedom; what was regarded as anarchistic or socialist ten years ago is now seriously considered by the thoughtful men and women of Earth. The contentions of extremists cannot, amid so much social unrest, be readily brushed aside; for extremists are always logical; he might have added and have been more accurate by saying, "In their own estimation."

The speaker said he considered that women, as a general thing, kept better posted on existing conditions than men, who are too much inclined to think in the same grooves as their ancestors thought. The ideas of thirty years ago are in a great measure superseded by modern thought. He did not believe in substituting the dead-level policy of socialism for the tyranny of capitalism; this government was a happy blending of Jeffersonian individualism and the policy of centralization led by Hamilton and his fellow federalists, similar to the principles expressed in the Anglican church in the domain of religious thought.

We will doubtless encounter Bryan individualism, and the "dangerous socialist tendencies" of Roosevelt, as ironically characterized by the meat-trust magnates.

At such times as these the man with the muck rake will be much in evidence endeavoring to bespatter his fellow-men. Individuals will have to be and do to meet revolutionary conditions; the conservative stands for the petrified part is an obstructionist to progress and will be swept aside. The learned divine admitted, however, that all reformers are apt to attach too much importance to new opinions, instead of giving proper consideration to old truths.

Mr. Howard failed to show that in this country Jeffersonian Democracy and Hamiltonian federalism had ever blended. The fact is they were antagonistic from the beginning. Perhaps the pastor avoided entering this field because he did not wish that his discourse should have a political significance in this connection. The socialists will not agree with him when he talks about harmonizing the interests of "capital and labor." They contend that their interests are antagonistic, must always remain so, for the more capital gets the less labor will have. Therefore the conflict between the two is inevitable. The socialists further claim that an economic system will continue to be out of harmony with the principles of justice, as long as commodities are produced for profit instead of for use.

A "CELEBRATED CASE."

It May Have Some Significance in Republican Conventions.

As announced in the STANDARD, the case of Williams vs. the Spokane and Northern Railroad Co. came up for hearing in the Supreme Court, on motion of defendant company to strike from the records plaintiff Williams' petition for a rehearing. Judge M. J. Gordon appeared for the company and Mr. Will G. Graves was present to represent his client, Williams. Judge Gordon was modest in the presentation of his side of the controversy. He said the court was amply able to protect itself, that he had intimated to opposite counsel he would consent to the withdrawal of the document moved against, the general tenor of which is a reflection on the court.

Senator Graves, in reply, remarked that the arguments were not an attack on the court; that his premises were correct, if his conclusions are severe; that they were warranted from the facts appearing in the record; that in any event if the court considered the document obnoxious, it will not make the client suffer through his counsel's indiscretion, but will permit another printed argument to be filed.

This case has engendered much feeling on both sides. It is said by some of the politicians from Spokane that Judge Gordon opposes the re-nomination of Judge Dunbar for Supreme Judge, because he made the dissenting opinion on the second hearing of the appeal, and made the fact present that he (Gordon) had no object to the amount of the verdict ($33,000), and that there was an assignment of error questioning the correctness of this amount. Furthermore it puts counsel in the peculiar position with his client on hearing about the lawyer having made such concession in open court.

The language employed in Judge Dunbar's minority opinion, if we eliminate the harsh remarks contained in Mr. Graves' printed argument, would seem to warrant G.'s deductions. This lawyer is somewhat like Junius in his style of composition.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.—If the Commercial Travelers' Anti-Trust League always acts with the propriety it did, it would be a good idea to have another day by vote of the membership, addressed a letter to President Roosevelt asking him to preside at the reception to be given William Jennings Bryan, on his arrival from Europe in September. It is explained in the Standard that while they are not a Democratic organization, they honor Mr. Bryan for his opposition to the trusts and that they regard Mr. Roosevelt as being equally sincere in his opposition to them.

CASUALTIES OF THE FOURTH.—The annual death-roll from casualties on the Fourth, figured up on the day succeeding the celebration, was 33 killed and 1,037 injured. The disasters are classified as follows: By fireworks 613, cannon 53, firearms 103, gunpowder 98, toy pistols 91 and run-aways 26. Full returns will largely augment all these figures, and the mortality as well as injuries will probably equal those of last year, when the deaths that were reported throughout the country numbered 46 and the injured 2,505.

MERCURY climbed to 101 in the thermometer tube at Portland on the 3d. One death resulted from the heat and its victim drinking copiously of cold water. A lady clerk in a department store was stricken by the heat and remained unconscious about an hour. Men doffed their coats and some of them carried parasols to shield them from the fervid sun-rays.

HENRY MELDRUM, former U. S. Surveyor General of Oregon, was sentenced by the Federal Court, Judge Wolverton, at Portland, to fine and imprisonment at McNeil's Island for his connection with land frauds in that State.

G. ROSENTHAL.

MANY OREGON TOWNS GO DRY.—The local option law became operative in many counties of Oregon, on the 1st inst., just at the time when Old Sol turned on his hot wave over a wide extent of the Pacific Coast, and those addicted to use of ardent liquors for cooling off the human system were reported to be in tribulation. It is in vain to reason with them that alcohol, being a stimulant, only increases the internal heat; they have tried it, and surely know. It is useless to call attention to the fact that it is used in winter to warm up the system when the atmosphere is chilly; it might work that way on some people, but not on all of them. The fact is, a very lamentable conscience generally goes with the drink habit, and excuses are found to justify its use that are manifestly contradictory and inconsistent.

At Afon, Wyoming, on the 3d, while workmen were digging an irrigating ditch, they blasted a cement bed, from the debris of which they picked up particles of gold large as wheat grains. It is estimated that the one blast brought out $5,000 in coarse gold. But it was a "pocket" and failed almost soon as it began.
