Fire wholly destroyed the home of Allen James, of Rochester, Sunday morning, just a month after the barn of his brother, C. E. James, at the same place, was burned, and three weeks after the barn of Allen James disappeared in smoke. There seems to be little doubt that this series of fires is the result of incendiarism, and a rigid investigation is being made in the hope of discovering the miscreant who has occasioned the loss, and in the last instance endangered the life of the occupant. The present loss is about $1,500.

A Few Words of Caution. The STANDARD does not believe in the policy of a newspaper discussing the merits of a murder case from the sensational standpoint, which is apt to create prejudice in the public mind; lays the foundation for a change of venue attendant with great expense and inconvenience to all parties concerned, especially the witnesses who are generally numerous in a murder trial.

The Chester Thompson, homicide prosecution presents a good example which Thurston or any other county can ill afford to follow.

Young Thompson was charged with the murder of Hon. Geo. Meade Emery, at Seattle, several years ago. The Times commenced to attack the accused in a violent manner. The editor thought the facts and circumstance justified his course, but it proved to be a prime cause for obtaining a change of the place of trial from King to Pierce county costing the former nearly thirty thousand dollars of the taxpayers' money. At best, criminal trials are expensive to parties who may be called upon to foot the bills.

RAISING ASSESSED VALUATIONS.—The law provides for biennial valuations of real estate in every even-numbered year for the purposes of taxation. True the tax rolls may be corrected by the county board of equalization in any year, but a horizontal raise in a city to meet local expenses is an unheard of proceeding. How can such a precedent, once established, be defended? That it is in violation of law goes without saying. Property, according to the State Constitution, is supposed to be assessed at its cash value. When this power shall have been exercised, the matter ought to end there. The STANDARD doubts very much if the question is propounded to Prosecuting Attorney Wilson he will sanction any such methods. He would probably refer the matter to the Attorney General, who would hesitate to put himself on record favoring any such policy.

It is a wise woman who, when there is a family jar, fills it with cookies.

The boys living near Eugene, Oregon, expect to reap a rich harvest from collection of fir cones from the 1st to the 15th of September by the offer of the Forest Reserve to pay for several tons from the Douglas, or Red Fir trees, from which the seeds will be taken. These are to be planted in several reserves in Oregon, where the timber has been burned. The small boys may earn from two or three dollars a day by this employment. Supervisor Tutz of the reserve, has examined the cone crop in that district and pronounces it of excellent quality. The cones will be sent to Wyeth, that State, where there is a government cone-dryer. When the heat is applied the cones will open and the seeds drop out, and this will be distributed where needed.
