With a program of music, drills, recitations and a playlet the pupils of the Garfield school held their annual entertainment at the school Thursday evening, a neat sum being realized from the small admission fee charged. City Superintendent C. E. Beach gave an interesting talk on the inauguration of President Wilson, which he witnessed.

The last number on the Y. M. C. A. lyceum course was given at the Olympia theater Wednesday evening by Ralph Bingham, the impersonator, vocalist and humorist. The entertainment made a fitting close to the course and was well attended.

W. T. Bailey of Duluth, Minn., was in Olympia for several days this week.

EASTER ON BROADWAY.

Being the Musings of an Observer as Set Down in Monday's Post-Intelligencer.

There is still some bickering down Tchatalja way, they say, and Adriople is stubborn, but the Bulgarians have captured New York. The Easter parade on Fifth avenue revealed to dazzled eyes the gorgeousness of the Bulgarian blouse, the Bulgarian girdle and the Bulgarian ribbon, which is not a ribbon—it's a riot.

On the word of a lady who knows, a girl might just as well have stayed at home and minded the parrot, unless she could display, between Madison square and the plaza, one of those Bulgarian effects, which looks like a Post impressionist's sketch of the solar spectrum. A ray of sunlight had no chance whatever with these Bulgarian wrappings. It broke into a million pieces before it fairly lit.

Take a Mujik's baggy blouse, color it Pompeian red, drape a yellow sash loosely around the ribs, add a skirt so narrow at the bottom that no lady can step more than 12 or 14 inches at a time, and slit at one or both sides so as to show at least $1.50 worth of a $3 pair of silk stockings, and you have some idea of the show that crowded spectators four deep against the house walls of Fifth avenue sidewalks and convinced old gentlemen in club windows that life was worth living after all.

It might as well be said right here and now that the Bulgarian blouse and the sash that went with it were not the whole show by any means. Take hats: Lids are little this season, only blots of color, enough to roof the head. There was the canoe, which is all that its name implies, a boat-shaped hat with a shaded feather jutting up like a mast. The canoe is about the newest hat that is.

But even the canoe was lost sight of when you caught the slashes. The slashes are not a hat: they are a misdemeanor—a slit running northward from the hem of the skirt to somewhere south of the knee and displaying considerable hose. One had no difficulty in perceiving that gray is a grand color for hose. It is popular because it looked like the very thing—black.

All the girls are crazy about shoes with colored tops. While you were not busy wondering how far a girl could go with the slash and still be a lady you were watching the blue-topped and white-topped and green-topped and gray-topped shoes.

Ohio, both in the affected district, have also been unable to obtain any information concerning them.

A blizzard that covered most of the flooded portion of the state Thursday added greatly to the suffering and doubtless caused many more deaths before the rescuers could furnish relief. The menace of fire also continued to rage, several blocks in the heart of Dayton being destroyed, while fire in lesser degree caused much damage in the smaller cities throughout the state.

All day Thursday several hundred men worked hard in bulwarking the weakening banks of the Lewiston reservoir, 75 miles north of Dayton, one of the largest reservoirs in the world, and battling against a raging wind which was sweeping the water over the banks, the workers managed to keep the reservoir within bounds. The danger of its breaking is still imminent, however, and every effort is being expended to keep it in shape.

Relief measures are being perfected in many of the cities, however, and it is believed that much of the suffering will be relieved by tonight. Carloads of provisions, clothing and other supplies are ready for transportation as soon as trains can be moved and the Ohio National Guard is ready to aid.

All of the cities in the affected districts are under martial law and everything possible is being done to protect property and bodies from looting.

Thursday and all day Friday, as the flood began to subside in the central, western and southwestern portion of Ohio and Eastern Indiana, the situation in Eastern Ohio became more acute and many cities were flooded, though the loss of life and property was by no means as great.

Along the Ohio river, however, and in the river towns of Western Pennsylvania the situation hourly became more acute and Cincinnati and other Ohio river towns began preparations for the worst floods in their history. Warnings also were sent out to all towns in the lower Ohio and Mississippi river valleys to prepare for the approaching flood.

"The exact extent of the appalling flood in Ohio is still unknown," says a statement by Governor Cox of Ohio, preceding an urgent appeal for funds sent broadcast throughout the country. "Every hour impresses us with the uncertainty of the situation. The waters have assumed such unknown heights in many parts of the state that it will be hardly less than a miracle if villages and towns are not wiped out of existence in the southern and southwestern parts of the state."

"My judgment is that there never has been such a tragedy in the history of the republic."

The situation in Indiana was much the same, though the district flooded was much smaller. West Indianapolis was cut off from the rest of the city and martial law was proclaimed by the mayor because of alleged burdensome increases in the prices of foodstuffs by commission men and grocers. In Peru, Ind., 50 dead were reported.

From 600 to 1,000 people lost their lives in the flooded west side of Columbus, Ohio, though the true extent of the awful tragedies enacted during the sweeping away of homes and the exact toll will not be known for several days. A score of towns in the flooded districts cannot be reached. Complete reports are expected to support Governor Cox's statement that the floods have rendered 250,000 persons homeless. All railroad, interurban and street car service is at a standstill.

Relief expeditions are unable to reach those marooned in buildings in the various cities and can only stand helplessly by and watch the leaping flames force hundreds from the buildings to certain death in the muddy torrents which are rushing through the streets at 20 miles an hour.

So great has been the life and property loss in the two states that President Woodrow Wilson issued the following appeal:

"The terrible floods in Ohio and Indiana have assumed the proportions of a national calamity. The loss of life and the infinite suffering involved prompt me to issue an earnest appeal to all who are able, in however small a way, to assist the labors of the American Red Cross to send contributions at once to the Red Cross at Washington or to the local treasurers of the society.

"We should make this a common cause. The needs of those upon whom this sudden and overwhelming disaster has come should quicken every one capable of sympathy and compassion to give immediate aid to those who are laboring to rescue and relieve."

Walter Fagin, arrested on a charge of forgery in the first degree, which he pleaded not guilty to the charge, was bound over to the superior court under $1,000 bond by Justice Walter Crosby this week. Gordon Mackay, Fagin's attorney, endeavored to obtain his client's release on the ground that he was not in his right mind, but the justice held that if Fagin's mental condition was impaired he should be denied freedom.

Hilda Meixner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Meixner of this city, and Hans Jacobson were married last Sunday. After a short trip down Sound they will be at home at their residence, Twentieth and Columbia streets.

To determine whether Thurston county will join with the other counties in Southwestern Washington in displaying its products at the Southwest Washington fair, as provided for in a law passed by the last legislature, the local county commissioners will attend a meeting of the fair association at Chehalis April 14 when commissioners from Lewis, Chehalis, Pacific, Wahkiakum and Cowlitz counties will be present. The Southwest Washington fair supplants the old Lewis county fair and will be held at Centralia-Chehalis fair grounds August 25-30.

Funeral services for James B. Flynn, one of the pioneer timbermen of this county who died at his home last Thursday evening, were held at the Catholic church at 2 o'clock last Monday afternoon, Rev. Father O'Malley officiating. Interment was made in the Calvary cemetery. Mr. Flynn came to Olympia 21 years ago and established one of the first shingle mills in the county, later operating one mill at Sherlock and two at Little Rock. He is survived by an invalid widow.

Because of the change in the plans to make the building a fireproof structure, necessitating further approval of the steel to be used, Olympia's new federal building will not be ready for occupancy until June or July of next year, according to Superintendent B. C. Adams, who recently received these revised plans from the department at Washington. Approximately two months must elapse before work can be begun again on the structure, pending the receipt of the approval of the material to be used in the new building.

Ben Levy was elected secretary-treasurer of the Thirty-five club at a meeting this week, to succeed E. E. Stewart who went to Raymond the first of the year to engage in the hardware business. The club will give a dance tonight at the Masonic temple and has planned an additional series of five dances, one to be held every two weeks. Messrs. John and Thad Pierce compose the dance and punch committee.

L. S. Gorham is now a member of the local police force, filling the place made vacant by the resignation of Patrolman William Collins, who expects to be employed in the powder works at Dupont.
