WILSON PROMISES NATION BIG BOOM

It is admitted that there are processes of business, or have been processes of business, in this country, which ought to have been corrected, but the correction has been postponed, and in proportion to the postponement the fever has increased—the fever of apprehension.

"There is nothing more fatal to business than to be kept guessing from month to month, and from year to year, whether something serious is going to happen to it or not, and what in particular is going to happen to it, if anything does. It is impossible to forecast the prospects of any line of business unless you know what the year is going to bring forth. Nothing is more unfair. Nothing has been declared by business men to be more harmful than to keep them guessing.

Fears Proved Groundless.
"The guessing went on; the air was full of interrogation points for 10 years and more. Then came an administration which for the first time had a definite program of constructive correction; not of destructive correction, but of constructive correction of admitted evil, a clear program, disclosed, so far as possible in a general program, in its particulars as in its general features. And the administration proceeded to carry out this program.

"First there was the tariff, and business shivered. 'We don't like to go in; the water looks cold;' but when the tariff had been passed it was found that the re-adjustment was possible without any serious disturbance whatever. Then men said, with a sense of relief, 'Well, we are glad to get that behind us and it wasn't bad after all.'

"Then came the currency reform. You remember with what resistance, with what criticism, with what systematic holding back a large body of bankers in this country met the proposals of that reform, and you know how, immediately after its passage, they recognized its benefit and its beneficence and, moreover, since the passage of that reform bankers throughout the United States have been congratulating themselves that it was possible to carry out this great reform upon sensible and solid lines.

Friends of Business.
"Then we advanced to the trust program and again the same dread, the same hesitation, the same urgency that the thing should be postponed. It will not be postponed; it will not be postponed because we are the friends of business. We know what we are going to do. We propose to do it under advice, for we have been fortunate enough to obtain the advice of men who understand the business of the country, and we know that the effect is going to be exactly what the effect of the currency reform was, a sense of relief and security.

"Because when the program is finished, it is finished; the interrogation points are rubbed off the slate; business is given its constitution of freedom and bidden go forward under that constitution and just so soon as it gets that lieve and freedom there will be a boom of business in this country such as we have never witnessed in the United States.

Long Delay Would Be Fatal.
"I as a friend of business and a servant of the country, would not dare stop in this program and bring on another long period of agitation. Agitation longer continued would be fatal to the business of this country and if this program is delayed there will come agitation with every letter in the word a capital letter. The choice either is a sober and sensible program completed now or endured months on months of conjecture and danger. I for one could not commit the country to a policy which would submit business to longer continued agitation and uncertainty, and I am sure it is becoming evident to the whole country that a constructive program is at last not only to be proposed but completed, and that when it is completed business can get and will get what it can get in no other way—rest, recuperation and successful adjustment. I cannot get rest if you send me to bed wondering what is going to happen to me in the morning; but if you send me to bed knowing that the course of business is to be tomorrow morning I can rest. How much better is certain justice to the men engaged in business.

Confident of Outcome.
"It is a matter of conscience as well as a matter of public policy to do what I am now certain this congress is going to do—finish the program. And I do not think that it is going to take a very long time. I believe that the temper of those engaged in this great thing is admirable; that the various elements, sometimes in antagonism, are in the congress of the United States drawing together, and that we shall soon witness a statesmanlike result for which we shall all have abundant reason to be thankful."

OIL NEWS

The only question now remaining to be solved, is HOW MUCH OIL? We have discovered the oil. The quantity we believe will be large. Even now at the well with the bottom of the hole caved in with mud the oil still shows heavy.

The work of cleaning out the hole so as to get down to open up the oil strata, is being rushed night and day. We will even work most of the Fourth of July to get down quickly. The rumors that we have stopped work are without foundation. We have not stopped and do not expect to stop. We firmly believe that we have established the biggest industry in the Northwest. Unless we are very much mistaken a very short time will see the oil business in southwest Washington rivaling the lumber industry and bringing in millions of money to the state.

Of course a great deal of this new business will be grabbed up by the big money interests. In fact, after the magnitude of the strike is known the small buyer will have mighty little chance to get in. Now is the time when a few dollars counts. An investment now of $100 or even $25 will mean a neat fortune after the big strike is proven.

A person, who can buy one or two thousand shares today at the 25-cent price, should make an independent fortune. Those who bought stock at Calgary before the big strike, made fortunes. So did many in California, Oklahoma, Texas, and in fact, every other place where an oil field has been brought in. This field shows up right today and the many, who are buying stock, will be counted the "wise guys" tomorrow. Get busy today and buy as large a block as you can afford.

WHAT OUR FATHERS READ ABOUT IN THIS PAPER FIFTY YEARS AGO

From The Washington Standard for July 2, 1864. Vol. IV. No. 34.

A meeting is to be held at the capitol this afternoon to inaugurate measures for the most desirable object of constructing a road across the mountains. It is folly to talk about a railroad to the Sound until it practically demonstrated that a good wagon road can be made over the route. When the road is constructed we have a beginning made, which will result in the construction of a railroad, and secure to the Sound a large proportion of the trade now monopolized by Oregon.

A special election will be held in this county to decide the tie vote between Messrs. Rhoades and Longmire for representative, on Saturday, the 16th inst. The party complexion of the legislature depends upon the result. If Mr. Rhoades is elected, the Union party will have in the house a majority of two; if it results otherwise, the vote will be a tie.

Our old friend, Thomas M. Reed of Idaho territory, arrived in town Saturday evening last, on a visit to his former home. We learn that he will leave for Idaho on Wednesday next, accompanied by his family. Mr. Reed moved to what is now Idaho, then a part of Washington, on the first discovery of gold in that region.

We have been shown a subscription paper, headed by Gen. W. W. Miller with $5,000 and others in smaller amounts, making an aggregate of $10,000, for the purpose of establishing a woolen factory at some eligible point on the Sound.

A large number of Victorians and others arrived on the "Anderson," to participate in the "doings" on the Fourth. We are informed that the "Libby," the "Resolute" and the "Shubrick" may all be expected here on that day, bringing many more to the celebration.

INVESTIGATE LEAGUE

Authorities Probing "Stop-Look-Listen" Initiative Campaign.

Investigations are being conducted by prosecuting attorneys in various parts of the state to determine whether or not prosecutions shall be started against the Stop-Look-Listen league for alleged violation of the initiative law.

The initiative law prohibits the expenditure of money for the purpose of obtaining signatures for the initiative measures, or in an attempt to persuade people not to sign. Some attorneys who have looked into the matter hold that the league, by its activities, has violated the law, and that the newspapers that have received advertising from the league have also been guilty of a technical violation.

The Granges and Labor Unions in various parts of the state are bringing the matter to the attention of the prosecuting attorneys and it is possible that prosecutions will be started in one or more of the counties. A prosecution resulting in a conviction so that the matter could be appealed to the supreme court would determine just how far the opponents or proponents of the bills can go in their work for and against them and would be welcomed by both sides, it is believed.

Guarantees that they will repay to local banks the amount of their warrants, in case they should be declared illegal by the supreme court, are being signed by all those cashing city warrants at local banks, a precautionary measure required by the banks.

Girl workers in the laundries of the state are entitled to a minimum wage of $9 a week, according to the decision reached at the conference here last week. A former conference fixed the wage at $8.50, but this was rejected by the minimum wage commission and a new conference called.

Harold Edmonds, son or Rev. and Mrs. R. H. Edmonds of this city, was awarded the Woodard scholarship in mathematics during the commencement exercises at Whitman college, Walla Walla, where he has just finished his junior year.

LOCAL LINE MAP FILED.

Route of Olympia's New Railroad Gives Excellent Grade.

The plat of the Olympia Terminal company's line, which has been taken over by the Oregon-Washington R. & N. company filed with the secretary of the public service commission shows that, starting from the Northern Pacific's Point Defiance cut-off the line will reach the Milwaukee line on Chambers' Prairie and will then take a straight line south to the Des Chutes river to Tumwater where it will meet the Northern Pacific line and spur to the brewery. The hill there will be tunneled through and the line will come out in Olympia near Moss Lake on the old U. P. right-of-way. The line will in no place have a greater than three per cent grade, thus making the best grade of any line from Puget Sound to Portland.

Sometimes you make exposures and get poor results. You handle your camera as you always have done, focus carefully and give the same time as under like conditions; but it goes wrong. It's the film. It lacks uniformity. Just try one and see the difference. It makes a picture with one exposure and you needn't make two to be sure of a good result. Come in and let us show you. No matter what camera you use, use an Anscoc Film for better results in amateur photography.
