WHOLE NUMBER 2875

OLYMPIA NATIONAL TO OPEN NEW HOME

OFFICIALS INVITE EVERYBODY TO INSPECT NEW BANK BUILDING SATURDAY.

Issuing a general invitation to everybody in the city and county to visit and inspect their new home, officers and directors of the Olympia National bank will formally open their new building at Fifth and Main streets with an informal reception Saturday afternoon and evening, and will open for business in the new location Monday morning.

The doors of the new bank building will be thrown open to visitors at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon and from then on until late in the evening the bank officials will keep "open house." Attorney P. M. Troy is vice-president of the institution, Hugh Ross president, Frank M. Kenney cashier, F. P. McKinney and H. E. Van Arsdale assistant cashiers, and George Draham and Peter G. Schmidt directors.

Appearance Is Striking.

The new building, located on one of the city's prominent corners, is a structure of striking appearance, built of Wilkeson stone in the Roman Corinthian style of architecture. It represents a total investment, including real estate, of $50,000. The bank occupies the first floor, while on the second are the law offices of Troy & Sturdevant and prosecuting attorney Geo. F. Yantis, the Pacific Coast Investment company and the White Cross Dental Parlors. The entire building will be thrown open to visitors Saturday and appropriate souvenirs will be distributed by the bank.

In interior arrangement and equipment everything has been planned from the standpoint of utility, and numerous conveniences are provided. Passing into the building through the main entrance on Main street, the general impression of the interior is most pleasant to the eye with the ivory tone of the walls and ceiling blending into the deep red of the mahogany furniture and the mottled white of the imported marble of the counters and wainscoting.

At the right of the entrance is the patrons' room, where writing tables and material and chairs are provided, and on down the right side are three more writing stands on the marble window ledges, while that side of the building is left clear for the passage of customers to the rear exit on Fifth street. On the left of the Main street entrance is the cashier's private office, which will also be used as directors' room, then, at the open marble counter, the cashier's office and desk. Here one innovation is to be noted—the cashier's desk, specially built, fits under the counter, permitting that official to conveniently greet every customer as he enters.

On the left of the room are the five "cages" of the assistant cashiers and tellers, the first being occupied by F. P. McKinney and the second by H. E. Van Arsdale. Adjoining these on the rear is the stenographer's room, and then the safe deposit section with a coupon booth adjoining on the right, and the big bank vault on the left. Both the safe deposit section and the vault are of the latest design, burglar-proof and fireproof and equipped with time locks.

Along the north wall in the rear of the "cages" are to be noted first the sound-proof room for the adding machines and then, further to the rear, individual lockers for the employees and a lavatory. Inter-communicating telephones are provided for each department, while two trunk lines serve the bank.

Many conveniences, appreciated only by a banker or bank employee, are provided in each of the "cages." For instance, they are so arranged that practically all of the bank's bookkeeping will be done there, the Olympia National being the only bank in the county which posts its ledgers by machines. In each "cage," too, is a burglar alarm, concealed under the counter, while numerous conveniences which will facilitate the handling of the bank's business are provided.

Lighted by New System.

The building is lighted throughout with the newest of electric lighting systems, the semi-indirect, and is

SELECT NEW PRESIDENT.

State College Regents Appoint Kentucky Educator to Succeed Bryan.

Washington State College regents have announced the appointment of Ernest O. Holland, superintendent of schools of Louisville, Ky., as president of the college, succeeding Dr. Enoch A. Bryan who a year ago submitted his resignation to become effective January 1, 1915.

President Henry Suzzallo of the University of Washington, who has had intimate knowledge of the work of the state college president-elect, lauds him as one of the most earnest and brilliant of the new generation of educators, and it is apparent that in future relations between the two state institutions will be close and that the college and university will work in co-operation rather than in competition.

GRACE & CO. ACQUIRE PACIFIC MAIL FLEET

NEW YORK-SEATTLE FIRM BUYS SEVEN LINERS FOR SOUTH AMERICAN TRADE.

Just prior to the visit of Secretary of the Treasury William G. McAdoo to Seattle Tuesday, when he addressed a large gathering there on the subject of the federal merchant marine bill the administration will propose to congress this winter, announcement was made by Grace & Co., the big shipping firm, of the purchase of a large fleet of steamers from the Pacific Mail Steamship company.

Interest in the announcement lies in the contention of the Pacific Mail ocean commerce is due to the La Follette seamen's bill and in the allegations that all the Republican newspapers of this coast have made that the seamen's bill has turned the commerce of the Pacific over to the Japs and Chinese. The announcement of this purchase by Grace & Co., which apparently throws a different light on the situation, was reported in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer Tuesday as follows:

"One of the biggest deals in shipping on this coast in recent years was consummated yesterday with the purchase by the firm of W. R. Grace & Co. of the steamers Pennsylvania, Astec, Peru, City of Paris, San Jose, San Juan and Newport from the Pacific Mail Steamship company.

"No announcement was made as to the amount of money involved in the transaction, the terms being private. All of the liners have been plying in the San Francisco-West Coast of South America and Panama and Mexico trade in the service of the Pacific Mail.

"The purchase of the vessels by Grace & Co. is of great importance to Seattle, as in all probability some of them will be sent to this port.

"Grace & Co. now operate a great fleet between Seattle and the West Coast of South America and the Atlantic. They have maintained regular sailings with the liners of the Atlantic & Pacific Steamship company between Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, San Pedro and New York via the Panama canal, and have a fleet of chartered steamers in their west coast trade out of this port.

"Their sailings to New York have been temporarily suspended on account of the slides in the Panama canal. No announcement has been made as to the exact service in which the fleet of vessels just acquired will ply."

Schools Closed Two Days.

To permit the teachers of the county to attend the 29th annual meeting of the Washington Educational association in Seattle, the schools of the city and county were closed Thursday and Friday of this week. City Superintendent C. E. Beach is president of the educational council, which met Wednesday.

En route home from San Francisco and San Diego, Mr. and Mrs. Silas Shoemaker and daughter Helen of Atlantic City, N. J., visited Mrs. Shoemaker's aunt, Mrs. Emily E. Southwell, this week. Mr. Shoemaker is a leading banker and politician of Atlantic City.

U. P. HEAD VISITS CITY

Judge Lovett, President Farrell and Others Inspect Local Line.

Judge R. S. Lovett, chairman of the board of directors of the Harriman system, paid a visit to Olympia Saturday on his annual tour of inspection over the lines of the system. He was accompanied by J. D. Farrell, president of the Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation company; Samuel Murray, chief engineer, and B. F. Palmer, general superintendent, the party being brought as far as Union street over the O-W.'s new line into the city. After a short stay here, they proceeded.

"I find that business is improving all over the country," Judge Lovett said, in an interview in Tacoma, "and the railroads are feeling the effect of this and are doing much better than they have for many months. In regard to the purchase of lumber by the roads I can only say that we need the equipment and as soon as business warrants will again enter the lumber market. If things continue to lumber market. If things continue to fore long."

"FIRE BUGS" BLAMED FOR BLAZE AT BLACK LAKE

Modern Mill Company's Plant and Store Destroyed—Loss Fixed at $40,000.

Fire believed to have been of an incendiary origin completely destroyed the mill and store of the Modern Mill company at Black Lake during the heavy rain Sunday night, causing a loss of $40,000 only partially covered by insurance. Whether or not the company will rebuild has not been announced, though it is reported to be doubtful.

Two years ago the Black Lake mill, then operated under that name, was burned to the ground, and, after several months, the old company was reorganized into the Modern Mill company and the mill rebuilt and again placed in operation, giving employment to a large number of men. A. J. Gaisell of Gate is president of the company, J. W. Dent of Black Lake vice president, and among the stockholders was A. E. White of Belmore. Allen White of this city, a brother, had been interested in the former company.

Fire in both the mill and the store, which are 400 feet apart, were discovered at practically the same time, lending color to the owners' belief that the blaze was of incendiary origin. The mill and machinery were practically a total loss, though lumber in the yards was not seriously damaged.

SUZZALLO TO SPEAK HERE.

New President of University Accepts Invitation of Local Club.

President Suzzallo, the new executive of the University of Washington, will deliver an address in Olympia this fall under the auspices of the local University Club at a date to be announced later. President Holland, the new executive of the Pullman State College, and President Penrose of Whitman college, will also be invited to speak in Olympia during the winter.

Members of the University Club, at a meeting at the Public Library Wednesday evening, elected Judge Wallace Mount of the state supreme court president to succeed Assistant Attorney General E. W. Allen, and elected Allen, T. O. Morrison, Glenn Fairbrook, Rev. D. A. Thompson and Rev. C. S. Morrison to the board of directors. The club plans a series of dances this winter.

Pays $10 to Get $6.

Frank Swayne of Puget won a partial victory in the local superior court this week in his suit to collect $6 for cutting wood for the Puget school district, but he got the "short end of it" when Superior Judge Wright directed that each party pay his own costs. Swayne had sued for the $6 and his costs and a $25 fee for his attorney. A 7-pound baby bird was born to Swayne. He got the $6 all right, but his costs amounted to about $10 exclusive of what he pays his attorney.

"BLOW" SAFE---GET $38

Depot at Rainier Is Robbed Again Tuesday—Burglars Get Away.

Special agents of the Northern Pacific railroad are searching for the burglar or burglars who "blew" the safe in the Northern Pacific depot at Rainier between 3 and 4 o'clock Tuesday morning and got away with $38. Residents of Rainier report having heard four distinct shots, but, as no one investigated, the robbery was not discovered until Agent Burkett went to the depot at the usual time Tuesday morning.

Sheriff Fred McCorkle, accompanied by one of the Northern Pacific special agents, visited Rainier Tuesday morning and carried their investigation on in Tenino, Bucoda and Centralia but without getting any clue to the bandit. In the $38 taken was a small check through which the officials hope to trace the criminal. The depot at Rainier was recently robbed presumably by a man for whom a warrant was issued in this city last Saturday.

PROHIBITION LAW IS NOW UP TO THE SUPREME COURT

Attorneys for "Wets" Submit Arguments Monday—Attorney General Replies.

Decision by the state supreme court as to the constitutionality of the statewide prohibition law, attacked by attorneys for the "wets" in lengthy argument before the court en banc Monday, is not expected for some time. The law becomes operative against breweries and saloons January 1 next.

The suit argued was the Gottstein case, on appeal from the decision of Superior Judge Wright of the local court upholding the constitutionality of the law. Consolidated with it was the suit brought in the name of the Olympia Brewing company, charging enforcement of the law discriminatory as to interstate commerce.

Attorneys for the "wets" not only attacked the prohibition law but the constitutionality of the initiative and referendum amendment, charged various violations of the provisions of the amendment governing initiatory procedure, argued that the "dry" law invaded rights guaranteed by the federal constitution, and raised various other points. Attorney General W. V. Tanner, supporting the law, argued that the governor's proclamation was final and conclusive evidence that the previous procedure had been proper, that the provisions of the initiative and referendum amendment are directory and not mandatory and that the steps leading up to the adoption of an initiative measure are not subject to review by the courts.

IMPLICATE LOCAL MEN.

Three Olympians Charged With Assisting Tacoma Burglar to Escape.

Charged with aiding the robbery of a jewelry store in Tacoma several weeks ago by concealing Harold Lienann, who is now in the Pierce county jail charged with the robbery, Pete Yelich, proprietor of the Olympia Cafe; Gene Kearns, proprietor of the Kearns saloon, and William Morris, a swamper at the Horseshoe bar, were arrested in Olympia Wednesday by Detectives Geary and Milone of Tacoma and taken to that city, being later released on $1,000 bail each.

Albert Johnson, an alleged accomplice of Lienann, was arrested here by Chief of Police Hall and Lienann was also thought to be in the city but could not be located. He was later arrested at Stellacoom. The three local men are charged with assisting Lienann to escape from Olympia.

Only One Contest in Primary.

With the withdrawal late last week of Attorney Harry L. Parr from the race for the nomination for city attorney on the Citizens' ticket, against the incumbent, George R. Bigelow, only one contest was left in the city primaries to be held November 9, that between Councilman Hord and John T. Otis for the nomination for councilman from the Fifth ward on the Citizens' ticket.

CHARGED WITH $100 THEFT.

Walter Ripley, Arrested at Gate, Is Bound Over to Superior Court.

Charged with stealing $100 from friends living at the Claremont hotel, on East Fourth street, of whom, accompanied by two other men, he had been a guest Monday night, Walter Ripley, 32 years old, was arrested in Gate Tuesday, after an investigation of Ripley's room in that city by prosecuting attorney Geo. F. Yantis, Deputy Sheriff Jack Gifford and Chief of Police Ben Hall.

Ripley pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Justice of the Peace Walter Crosby, and was bound over to the superior court, being lodged in the county jail in default of $500 bail. Forty dollars in bills were found by the authorities secreted under the carpet of Ripley's room and he is said to have confessed to taking this amount but to have denied taking any more.

McADOO EXPLAINS NEW FEDERAL SHIPPING BILL

WILL HELP NATION DEVELOP FOREIGN TRADE—PROVIDE NAVAL AUXILIARY.

The United States, by acting in conjunction with Latin America, has the power to create a continental solidarity, founded on common social, commercial and financial interests, that will prove an irresistible factor for world peace.

This was one of many telling arguments advanced by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo at the Seattle Commercial club Tuesday noon in support of the new administration shipping bill. The cabinet member outlined its principal features before an audience of 800 persons.

The administration plan, first made public by the secretary in Indianapolis, October 13, seeks to establish and extend trade not only to Central and South America, but all over the world, through government-controlled vessels which will be used as naval auxiliaries in a war crisis. Only by such a plan, Secretary McAdoo said, will the best public policy be served and the American shipper benefited.

Step by step, with the skill of a trained lawyer, the secretary of the treasury built up his argument, until the administration plan seemed unassailable.

Win South American Trade.

"South America and other countries, now trading with Europe by means of European vessels, do not care to run the risk of having their trade disrupted by the outbreak of war," he said. "The countries of South America will not continue to give preference to Europe provided we can furnish the proper shipping facilities for South America knows the United States is guided by the desire for peace.

"By the establishment of proper trade relations there will be constructed a Western hemisphere that may say to Europe, 'You shall not have war, or we will organize against you and withdraw our commerce from your shores.' Thereby, we may exercise a negative, if not a positive, influence on the people of the world."

The systematic, lucid presentation of his subject was a feature of the secretary's address. On several occasions he departed from the strict letter of his text, however, and on one of these left no doubt in the minds of his hearers that the administration means to maintain the La Follette bill on the statute books.

"There is little of the talk about the evil effects of the seamen's bill that is justified," he said. "If private companies cannot create a body of American seamen that are able to protect commerce and passengers and respond to the call of war; if American seamen cannot compete with Asiatic sailors and not have the standard of American living lowered, then it is time for the government to step in and furnish the steamship facilities."

Points of the Speech.

Secretary McAdoo's address advanced with easy transition along the line of the following points:

1. A powerful navy is the most

BAUSMAN TO ASSUME JUDGESHIP MONDAY

LISTER NAMES SEATTLE ATTORNEY TO SUCCEED THE LATE HERMAN D. CROW.

Frederick Bausman, head of the law firm of Bausman, Kelleher, Oldham & Goodale of Seattle and one of the leading lawyers of the state, will be sworn in next Monday as the new member of the state supreme court, succeeding Justice Herman D. Crow who died last Friday. The appointment of Bausman was announced by Governor Lister Monday evening and came as a great surprise, his name not having figured in the preliminary gossip.

Attorney P. M. Troy and Superior Judge John R. Mitchell of this city, both leading attorneys and Democrats, had been spoken of as likely recipients of the appointment. The friends of each had presented their names to the governor, and it was generally thought the appointment would go to Thurston county. Frank Reeves of Wenatchee, former president of the State Bar association and Democratic floor leader of the lower house in the last legislature; former Justice M. F. Gose, C. A. Reynolds of the public service commission, Superior Judge E. B. Preble of Kitsap county, Judge William Hickman Moore and Judge Ronald of King county, and Judge Guy C. Alston of Snohomish county, were among the others proposed for the position.

Judge Bausman has practiced law in Seattle since 1891, when he became a member of the firm of Bausman & Kelleher, this firm later becoming Bausman, Kelleher, Oldham & Goodale. The firm is counsel for a number of the large business firms of Seattle, including the Seattle Times.

Sample's Private Secretary.

The newly appointed judge is 52 years old and has been a lifelong Democrat. He received his education at the Western University of Pennsylvania and at Harvard. In 1887-88 he was private secretary to Governor Eugene Semple, of Washington territory.

Judge Crow died at St. Peter's hospital early last Friday morning after a two-year fight against cancer, and the funeral, quite and simple as he had directed though attended by more than a hundred friends, took place from the family home Sunday afternoon, Rev. R. H. Edmonds of the Congregational church officiating and Chief Justice George E. Morris delivering a short, impressive talk. Two hymns, "Lead, Kindly Light" and "Abide with Me," were sung by a quartet composed of Mrs. Edward Kevin, Miss Margaret Brown, R. W. Elwell and H. A. Ditmars. There were many beautiful floral offerings.

The active pall-bearers were Judge Morris, Judge O. G. Ellis, Attorney P. M. Troy, C. J. Lord, Joseph Sherman, secretary to Judge Crow when chief justice, and James A. Williams of Spokane, a former law partner. The honorary pall-bearers were Governor Lister and Justices S. J. Chadwick, M. A. Fullerton, O. R. Holcomb, Wallace Mount, E. N. Parker and John F. Main, while a delegation from the Seattle Bar association, consisting of former Chief Justice Hiram E. Hadley, Judge William Hickman Moore, George H. Walker, W. T. Laube, Wilmon Tucker, W. H. Gorman, L. B. Stedman and Alpheus Byers, formed the leading guard to the hearse.

Graduate of Ohio Wesleyan.

Judge Crow had been appointed to the supreme bench in 1905 and re-elected three times, serving as chief justice in 1914. He was born in Delaware, Ohio, April 15, 1851, received his A. B. degree at Ohio Wesleyan university of that city in 1871 and was a college mate of former Vice President Charles W. Fairbanks, the late Governor S. C. Cosgrove of Washington and John G. Woolley, the temperance lecturer. He belonged to the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity, of which Fairbanks and Cosgrove were also members.

He was admitted to the bar in Ohio in 1873 and practiced his profession in Urbans, in his native state, for 10 years, then moving to Winfield, Kansas, where he resided for four years, moving to Spokane in 1890. He was a member of the Washington state
