NEW HUNTING LAWS AID KILLING OF GAME BIRDS

Warden Fennell, in Annual Report. Reviews Situation in This County.

"It will be a number of years before the Blue Grouse are as plentiful as they were three years ago, and the Ruffed Grouse or native pheasant and the quail are only holding their own," according to the annual report of Game Warden James Fennell, just made to the county game commission, in which he states in this connection that he does not believe "the shorter season for bird shooting has tended to increase the number of birds because of the fact that the season opens 15 days earlier, thereby giving more good weather for hunting and the birds being that much younger and less able to take care of themselves."

Deer are increasing rapidly in the county, he says, especially in the settled districts, and he expects the increase to continue "if poaching and the use of dogs can be prevented. Without question there is some poaching being done," he adds a little later, "but without a deputy and with so large a territory to supervise I have been unable to catch as many of the offenders as I desire." Elsewhere he complains that "the increase of telephones throughout the rural districts has enabled parties to be warned of my coming and increases the difficulties of securing results."

More people have fishing and hunting licenses now, he says, and he expresses the opinion that lake fishing is better than it was two or three years ago, but "it is quite evident," he adds, "that the Des Chutes river is becoming very poor fishing." He prosecuted 21 people last year, convicting 13.

Stuart of Bellingham, grand chief of the Pythian Sisters, Domain of Washington, visited the local lodge Tuesday night and, after the installation of officers had been completed, was the guest of honor at a banquet. tried in the Pierce county courts for forgery. DEATHS OF PAST WEEK

MRS. MARGARET C. BREWER.

Mrs. Margaret C. Brewer, 81 years old, pioneer of the Willamette valley of 1853 and of Mound Prairie of 1859, died last Friday at the home of her son, Loren H. Brewer, in Hoquiam. Her death marks the passing of the last of the early pioneers of the Mound Prairie district and of a remarkable woman. Mrs. Brewer was born and grew to womanhood in Georgia. She was married at 19 and soon after she and her husband joined a wagon train, the destination of which was the gold field of California. The party reached Eastern Oregon. There they divided, part going to California and the remainder turning to Oregon, Mrs. Brewer and her husband being among the latter. In the Cascade mountains the party was lost for three months. They ran out of provisions, and men, women and children died of starvation and disease, and were buried in the wilds. Finally the remnant of the party reached the Willamette valley, and Mr. and Mrs. Brewer settled there, remaining until 1859, when they moved to Mound Prairie. While they were living in the Willamette valley the Indian uprising occurred, and Mrs. Brewer many times was forced to flee to the woods with her children for safety. At Mound Prairie they took up land and had an important part in the development of that district. Later her husband was made agent at the Oakville Indian reservation, a position in those days fraught with great danger. For the past 10 years Mrs. Brewer had made her home with her sons, spending the summers at the home of N. W. Brewer, near Oakville, and the winters with Attorney L. H. Brewer of Hoquiam. The body was taken to Rochester and interment was made in the Grand Mound cemetery Thursday.

THREE KILLED AT DUPONT.

Explosion in Powder Plant Also Damages $10,000 Worth of Property.

Three men were blown to pieces, $10,000 worth of property destroyed, windows shattered and houses for miles around shaken when 700 pounds of nitroglycerin exploded from some unknown cause in the gelatine dynamite mixer house of the Dupont Powder company at Dupont, Monday morning. Workers in nearby buildings were thrown from their feet by the explosion, while the debris of the shattered building was scattered for wide distances.

John Bell, Gus Wolf and Nils P. Jess were the workers killed. They were the only men in the building at the time, and it was for this reason officials of the company said the cause of the explosion probably would never be determined. All three men were married and the families lived at Dupont. Wolf is survived by a widow and two young children.

CURTAILED PRODUCTION BOOSTS LUMBER PRICES

Advances of $1 on Common and $1 to $4 on Upper Grades Are Noted During Last Week.

An advance in the price of manufactured lumber, including practically all grades, was made by the Pacific Northwest manufacturers last week. The advance was caused by the unusual weather, which has forced nearly all the mills to shut down in the face of an excellent demand, and has thus reduced the output of the section nearly 85 per cent. The log situation, which is the most serious in the history of the industry, was another important factor in the rise in quotations.

The advance became effective with the issue of discount sheet No. 8, which shows an advance of $1 on common and advances of from $1 to $4 on most of the upper grades. The new list also equalizes many of the discrepancies of the previous lists and brings prices more nearly to a normal basis.

The enforced curtailment of the lumber output, which is now estimated at nearly 85 per cent of the district's cutting capacity, has been caused by the extraordinary weather prevailing since the first of the year and which was at its worst last week. Most of the mills which continued to operate during January were forced to close down after the storm of the past week and with the cessation of all railway traffic shipments have been cut in half. The demand, too, has picked up, and the mills which are able to get out lumber are naturally asking the higher prices for its delivery.

The log shortage is also becoming serious. At the last meeting of the West Coast Lumbermen's association logging men testified that it would be many weeks before most of the camps could reopen and that the situation was the most serious in the history of the industry. There is a scarcity among all grades of logs and it was said that many mills were paying more than the current prices for logs. The last quotations on logs were $6, $9 and $12, but some purchases were reported at an advance of $1 on these quotations.

State Building at San Diego Is Open.

The state of Washington will maintain exhibits at the Panama-California International exposition and the recent sale of the 1915 building to a San Diego society has been revoked. Although the Washington commission had several thousand dollars left from the 1915 exposition appropriation, there was no legal way to use it except by calling a special session of the legislature, but after the announcement of Washington's withdrawal from the 1916 exposition, the commercial clubs and civic organizations in the state subscribed enough money to maintain the building and exhibits. Many new features are being added.
