Some apprehension is felt as to the condition of the winter wheat.

It is reported that in some parts of the state the wheat is turning yellow from lack of moisture. While the absence of snow is fine for livestock it is not so good for wheat and we would certainly welcome snow at this time.

Quite a number of tractor owners from this vicinity attended the tractor school in Big Sandy last week. The school was made possible through the efforts of the McNamara & Marlow firm, and was attended by 165 persons.

The oldest resident fails to remember a winter in Montana as mild as this. The month of January was the warmest since the signal service was established in 1881 at Helena. HOW TO JUDGE A DIAMOND

This is the first of a series of eight ads covering (1) Brilliance; (2) Shape; (3) Cutting; (4) Color; (5) Perfection; (6) Weight; (7) Selection; and (8) How to Buy.

Brilliance. By all odds, brilliance is the first requisite to diamond values. By brilliance, we mean the reflection of light that produces color flashes in all the hues of the rainbow. Such a diamond in trade circles is called a "busy" diamond, for it is in constant action when exposed to light—natural or artificial. It is brilliance that makes one diamond worth a great deal more than another of the same weight. Brilliance is something that can not be judged except by sight, and for this reason diamonds should not be bought by mail, but only from a reputable local dealer who can be depended upon to help you make a proper selection. Fine brilliance depends very largely upon the shape and cutting—points covered in our next adv., appearing next Friday.

CONVICTED, BURNETT WILL NOT APPEAL

she wanted. At this, he testified, she exclaimed:

"I should worry. I have got along without you before. You have always been doubtful about that child. It is not yours, either."

With this, Burnett testified that he grabbed his shotgun, which was lying close by. His wife started to run toward the children. He fired, he thought, twice, and saw blood spurt on the clothing of all three. After that he knew no more of what he did until he realized that he was wrapping up the gun.

After wrapping up his gun, Burnett said he brought it out to the main highway, left it there and came home in a passing automobile.

Burnett's confession was prefaced by testimony of A. L. Sears, who told how Burnett rescued his wife from drowning on a fishing trip to Long lake the Sunday before the murder. Inquiry developed the fact that the water was about three feet deep where she fell in.

Later in his own testimony Burnett emphasized a statement that he had skinned his shins in going to the rescue, as evidence of concern for his wife. Sears also testified that Burnett later declared it might have been a good thing if he had let her drown.

In cross-examination by Prosecuting Attorney O'Leary Burnett was compelled to admit that for several months prior to bringing his family to Olympia he had lived here with a woman whom he introduced as his wife.

LONGMIRE ENDORSES MANSION PURCHASE

room were there, and most prominent was the Colonel Cook, who employed the company with his sallies of wit and humor. It will be remembered that the colonel was proprietor of the Washington hotel, the largest and best in the city. It was there that the elite and the "blue-bloods" were wont to assemble.

The mansion erected and occupied by Governor Stevens is still standing in a good state of preservation. About three years ago his son, General Hazard Stevens, had it underpinned and otherwise protected from decay. Many of the personal effects, such as furniture and other objects used by the governor, could be secured and placed in the house as a nucleus of an interesting museum. His sword, and the old flag which he was bearing afloat on the head of his men when killed on the field of battle, might be acquired.

Relics of subsequent governors who occupied the "mansion" might also be added. Think what this would mean to the state and to the public in general. Is it not worth the effort? Perhaps the plan could be carried out under the auspices of the capitol commission.

I have briefly outlined that which I regard as a sacred duty we owe, not only to the memory of a great and noted man, but to the present and rising generation; a trust we can not ignore. To the accomplishment of this patriotic undertaking, I ask that you lend your executive power and individual enthusiasm. As one of the old pioneers I want to see this historic landmark, representing an era forever passed, secured by our state, permanently immune from commercial desecration and probable destruction. I want to see this before I join the last shadowy emigrant train which is to pass over the Great Divide.

Sincerely yours,

DAVID LONGMIRE.

I might add that I have not spoken at random, but from a personal knowledge of the facts contained in this communication. It is of interest to note that General Hazard Stevens, then a lad, quit school in Olympia to kiln dry the lumber used in the construction of his father's mansion. I was attending the school at the time and remember well the history of that day. It took about 10 days to cure the lumber sufficiently for the mechanics.
