

Advertising Advertising

This is an advertisement. Not a very long one, to be sure, but an advertisement.

It has a most unusual purpose—to advertise advertising. The message is this:—

Don't miss the advertisements in the Washington Standard.

They make good reading just from the news and educational standpoint alone.

But more than that:—

Advertisements keep you in touch with the world's progress.

They point the path to comforts that were unknown in the old days.

They help you to save.

They protect you from fraud.

Don't miss the advertisements.

They are guide-posts to better buying.

OPEN TRAFFIC IN OPIUM REPORTED

BUSINESS FOSTERED BY JAPANESE AND MILITARY AUTHORITIES IN CHINA

NEW YORK.—The opium traffic is openly flourishing in many parts of China, fostered by the Japanese and connived at by the military authorities, who are held, so to speak, under Japan's thumb, according to the report of a number of missionaries in answer to a questionnaire sent out by the Interchurch world movement, which is attempting a religious, economic, and social survey of the world.

These missionaries report that in spite of the alleged abolition of the drug, almost wholly brought about by their work, great quantities of opium are being smuggled into China, both the raw and the manufactured product, some through the seaports, some overland, often by caravan routes, and a great deal by means of the postal service which Japan has established in all the principal cities of China. As Japan will not permit examination of her parcel post service by international postal authorities, it is an easy matter, they say, to ship any amount of drugs and their accessories practically to any section of the country.

Hypodermic syringes are sold at such low prices and so openly by the Japanese that anyone who wishes may purchase them, and also morphia, which the Japanese are urging upon the Chinese people, telling them that it is an antidote for opium and will help free them from the habit, the missionaries charge.

Korea is said to export large quantities of the drug into China, and opium in Korea is practically a Japanese government monopoly. The Edinburgh Anti-Opium Society is quoted as publishing the uncontroverted statement that in one year Japan furnished 18 tons of this drug to the Chinese people. A Korean opium ordinance is said to provide that if the opium brought in by the farmers—there are hundreds of opium poppy fields in Korea—does not contain the standard amount of morphia it shall be destroyed without payment. Enforcement of the regulations is entrusted in many cases, it is said, to drug men and police, chief offenders in the past. It is reported, too, that opium manufactured in the United States is being exported into China, the stringent laws restricting the sale of narcotics in America not preventing manufacture and export. One missionary in Shanghai writes that once again the opium peril is being faced in China, and that the missionaries are doing what they can "to stem the slowly advancing tide of intemperance, now largely fostered from Japan, but soon, we are told, to obtain reinforcement from America."

One missionary writes: "An obstacle that stands out most prominently just now, since it is just now being again brought to our attention, is the planting of opium throughout the whole region. Last year the opium was widely planted, though theoretically it was forbidden. In a few places, where more publicity could be given to the fact, the fields were destroyed (but in many cases after the crop had been partly harvested) and by the reports one would think the government was opposed.

"But this year the planting is done openly. Seed can be obtained through the officials, and planting is encouraged. In places under northern rule people are urged to plant, but are not compelled to do so. In places under the southern rule people are practically compelled to plant, so that the government can get the resulting tax. It is against the rule of the church for a member to plant or use opium. Some of the members are courageously refusing to have anything to do with it, but many of them, with no ready money to buy the high-priced necessities of life and seeing their neighbors take this opportunity of getting in ready money, have yielded to the temptation and have let the monetary gain blind them to the great wrong they are doing.

"This planting of opium not only weakens the moral fibre of the nation and brings about again the great scourge of opium smoking, but also keeps people from the churches and children from the schools. For an opium crop is most exacting on one's time, keeping one busy from dawn till dark, and also requires the help of most of the family, too."

From Shanghai another writes: "Opium is again coming into use to an alarming extent, being cultivated freely in some of the provinces, perhaps under the penalty of a fine which is readily paid and eagerly received, and so money comes to the producer and to the officials, which latter class are corrupt to the last degree, or at least many of them, and the outlook is exceedingly dark. In this region the cultivation of the poppy is forbidden, yet smuggling is carried on to an amazing extent; and while the customs officials exert themselves to the utmost to suppress it, and often do seize large quantities of opium and morphine, yet the profit is so great to the smuggler that he is quite ready to lose at times, hoping to make up on the next lot carried through."

Still another: "The opium battle had hardly been won and opium smoking become a rare vice when our miserable government in the Swatow district, in order to get 'quick money,' 'farmed out' opium planting, and it will derive over $1,000,000 profit at the cost of untold harm to the poor people."

According to the missionary review of the world: "The Japanese are carrying on an active anti-American propaganda, accusing the missionaries of trading in opium, charging sedition, attacking the Shantung Christian University at Asinanfu and inculcating suspicion of Americans."

It is claimed also by missionaries that several distillers and brewers are planning to transfer their industries to China and flood that country, long under prohibition laws, with alcoholic liquors.

There are three words, the sweetest words

In all of human speech—
More sweet than are all songs of birds

Or pages poets preach.

This life may be a vale of tears,
A sad and dreary thing—

Three words, and trouble disappears
And birds begin to sing.

Three words, and all the roses bloom,
The sun begins to shine;

Three words will dissipate the gloom
And water turn to wine

Three words will cheer the saddest days.

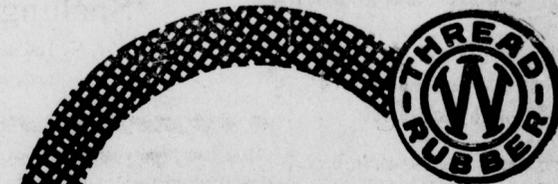

"I love you"? Wrong, by heck—

It is another, sweeter phrase,
"Enclosed find check."
