

DIARY OF A DOLLAR.

Sunday—Share With Others. This is a fundamental part of George Warner's money program, my recent owner. It appears that there are certain institutions which exist for the welfare of others, non-commercial organizations that depend upon the unselfish giving of folks to carry on their necessary work.

The church is one of these. No self-respecting individual wants to live in a churchless community. The church by organizing righteous forces helps to maintain high moral standards. Through its services people are helped to live better lives. Even real estate values are improved by the existence of the church and its work. When there is a wedding a representative of the church is called in to perform this happy ceremony. When the children come along they are sent to the Sunday School for religious instruction. When death saddens the home, the minister brings comfort at the funeral service.

"Everyone," says George, "Whether religiously inclined or not, benefits by the existence of the church. Everyone therefore is under an obligation to give a proportion of his or her income toward its support."

What is true of the church is true also of other institutions devoted to unselfish causes, most of which are conducted by the church or by church people. It is true of hospitals, colleges, universities, missions, orphan homes, Y. M. C. A., etc.

George gives one-tenth of his income to such worthy projects and says he believes most folks can do as well and many even better. He keeps a budget, puts away 10 per cent for savings, 10 per cent for giving and lives on the balance. Thus he acknowledges God's ownership of all things and man's duty of stewardship.

So when George took me to divine worship today, I was not surprised to have him give me to the church when the offering was taken.

"I used to think I was doing pretty well," said George, "when I gave a quarter. But the cost of running a church successfully has increased as well as the cost of food and clothes and the size of my income."

I guess it's up to me now to see how much good I can do in the world as a "Share-with-others" dollar.

Saturday—Pay Your Bills Promptly is a slogan with Henry Mathers, my present owner. There was a time when it was just the opposite. Then Henry bought clothes, shoes, flowers, jewelry, and various other kinds of merchandise, always saying, "charge it."

When the bills came in, Henry said "They're easy. Now let them sweat for their money. I'll pay when I get good and ready."

A little later an unusual investment opportunity came to Henry. In high hopes he went to the bank to borrow some money. To his great surprise the banker calmly said, "Nothing doing."

"Why?" asked Henry. "Because," replied the banker, "the Credit Men's Association reports that you do not pay your bills when you should. You have lost thereby

MARSHALL FIELD III INTO NEW FIELD

The name Marshall Field is known in every hamlet in the land as the merchant prince. Now it is to try for other honors. Marshall Field III—now head of the famous Chicago fortune—is going to try to make a name for himself in the local business—joining a Chicago firm. He was a captain during the...

one of the greatest assets a man can have—credit."

"What is credit?" asked Henry. "Credit is the faith man has in the integrity of his fellow man. It buys more on the open market in the world today than all the gold in existence. Credit is more valuable than gold."

"How then can I get that integrity so that men will have faith in me and so that I will have credit?"

"That is simple. Spend wisely less than you earn. Pay all your bills promptly. Invest in reliable securities, carry life insurance, have a bank account or in some way build up a reserve which can be used as collateral when you need to borrow money for any reason."

So that is why Henry's major slogan is now "Pay Your Bills at Once." I hate to leave him. Since, however, he is going to use me to pay a bill on time, I can only be glad to serve in this useful way and look with hope into the future.

BEE INSPECTION WANTED

Money Expended in This Work Pays Bigger Dividends Than in Any Other Agricultural Line.

Estimated crop of honey in United States, $250,000,000.

Loss from disease annually, $2,000,000.

Loss from bad wintering, 10 per cent.

Loss from other causes, 10 per cent.

Bees are no longer common on the farms except in one little corner in the northwest and one little corner in the southeast of the United States, says Prof. Sturdevant, Department of Entomology, Washington, D. C.

Extract from report of Canadian Provincial Apiarist J. D. Todd:

"In 1910 the fruit growers asked the minister of agriculture in British Columbia to protect them from destruction by appointing bee inspectors. At that time there were 500 beekeepers and they produced not over 20 tons of honey. In 1914, 900 beekeepers produced 59 tons; in 1915, 1,100 beekeepers produced 100 tons; in 1916, 1,350 produced 120 tons; in 1917 the production was 150 tons; in 1918, 1,611 produced 227 tons; in 1919, 1,865 produced 172 tons. In 1920 every dollar spent for protecting the bees $13 worth of honey was produced. That same year the money expended for bee inspection brought in 1500 per cent better than that expended for any other line of agriculture."

Extract from a report which appeared in the Washington Farmer, December last:

"This was the 26th annual meeting of the Inland Empire Beekeepers' association, and the second annual meeting of the State Beekeepers' association. At the first session professor A. L. Melander, Washington entomologist, gave a very interesting talk telling of the effort of the State College at Pullman to take care of bee inspection for diseases in Washington, but that it was almost impossible to secure workers to take care of the interests of the beekeepers. The most important reason was the lack of authority and funds to expend. These difficulties the associations hope will be remedied during the coming session of the state legislature. 'A stitch in time saves nine.' Give us inspectors or we die.—Fred Mandery, bee inspector for Thurston county."

The next meeting of the Thurston County Bee association will meet Saturday in the Chamber of Commerce rooms, at 1:30 p. m. This will be the last chance to order bee supplies for the year.

The work of the home is very important and already the institution is almost filled and the number of patients is constantly increasing."

WAITING PERIOD FOR THOSE WHO WOULD DOFF MANTEL OF SINGLE BLESSEDNESS

Publicity for Applications to Marry, and Increased Fee Attaches, in Proposed State Law.

Under a bill which Senator Walter S. Davis of Pierce county hopes to introduce before the senate, a 15 days' publication of bans of marriage before the issuance of a license would be required. The bill is somewhat patterned after the English system of wedding bans.

The bill provides that no license shall issue from the office of the county auditor until the expiration of 15 days after the applications and publications in the official county paper. The applications must be located in the paper under the heading: "Applications for marriage licenses." The bill also makes a license fee of $5 instead of $4.50 and provides that no license be issued to boys under 18 years of age or girls under 15 years of age.

The bill is for the purpose of making marriage more difficult, act as a curb to runaway matches and hurried marriages, and combat the divorce evil.

The final session of the semi-annual convention of the Washington State Sheriffs' association closed Friday with the next meeting announced in Grays Harbor county for August 16, 17 and 18, in a report by the convention committee headed by E. Gibson.

A resolution was passed to be sent to both houses of the legislature urging some action to speed up appeals in criminal cases. As the law now stands it is over a year before a case can be appealed to the supreme court which makes an unnecessary burden for all concerned.

CARE OF FARM EQUIPMENT DURING COLD WEATHER PAYS

Much of the loss and annoyance caused by breakage of farm equipment may be avoided by careful inspection and repair of weak parts before the season's rush begins.

The proper time for making repairs is during the winter and at times when the regular farm work is not urgent, specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture say. As the season advances, implements which will be needed for the next farming operations should be gone over and given any attention required to make them ready for immediate use. If the farm machinery is not properly housed during periods of disuse, it is all the more important that it should be given a careful overhauling. After inspection an implement, tightening bolts, strengthening weak parts, and renewing broken pieces, the necessary painting should be done. Frequent applications of dark metallic paint, consisting either of red lead or venetian red and raw linseed oil, not only improve the appearance of farm implements, but add greatly to their durability.

This is an age when appearances count, and a farmer's standing in the community frequently is governed by the appearance of his farm equipment. The man who spends his spare moments in the repair of fences and gates and maintaining a neat appearance of the entire farm has a better chance of becoming a leader in his community than the man whose farm has a slovenly appearance.
