

early life he became a member of Congregational church, and has been a devoted and active member for many years a deacon in the church. During the last years of his life his hearing and sight have been impaired, his mental faculties have been impaired. He was a bright, intelligent man, always genial, and inclined to look on the bright side of things. He was full of mirthfulness, and nobody could be unhappy in his presence. In death, the MONITOR loses one of its best friends, a subscriber from the north, an agent many years. He leaves a wife, but no children. His funeral services were held on the 19th inst., Rev. Frank Morey, a boy aged 16, who worked for Hollis Daggett, on the lake shore, and a son of A. P. Vance, boarded a freight train that left here Saturday night about 11 o'clock to ride home. The Morey boy got off the platform car, which they first got on to, but it seems he got on to some other car. When the train arrived at the crossing near Mrs. Woodrow's, the Vance boy didn't dare to jump, but rode to the summit and walked back. Sunday morning he went to Mr. Daggett's to find out how his companion came out and found he had not been seen. A search was made at once, when his body was found near the Woodrow crossing, one leg badly broken and a large gash on the back of the head. Selectman H. Thrasher was called, and the body was placed in the hands of undertaker C. H. Green, who took the body to the home of the boy's uncle, Chas. Drown, where brief services were held and he was buried beside his parents at Newport Center.

CALEDONIA COUNTY.
St. Johnsbury.
A woman stepped off a train at the station one day recently with a baby in her arms, when she asked a girl who stood on the platform to hold it a moment. The woman probably stepped on the train and went north, as she did not call for the child and could not be found. The child was cared for but soon died, it is supposed from some opiate given to still it while the inhuman mother made her escape.

The Ely Hoe and Forks factory in Summerville was destroyed by fire Thursday morning. Fire caught in the forging room and it is thought had been going half an hour before the alarm sounded at a quarter before twelve. Firemen were promptly on hand, but water pressure was light and a man had to go several miles to Stiles' pond to let on more water before the companies could do their best work. It was so far along that saving the buildings was simply impossible. At half-past two the work of destruction was completed, and the famous Hoe Factory, started nearly 40 years ago by Ely, Balch & Co., and for years among the most flourishing concerns in St. Johnsbury, was in ashes, and about 40 men out of employment. Loss, $30,000 strong; insurance $25,000. There can scarcely be a question about rebuilding, as the institution was very prosperous, always full of orders, and is backed by a strong company of local stockholders.

THE AD VALOREM UNDERVALUATIONS.
Manufacturers have long known that they must contend with fraudulent undervaluations under an ad valorem tariff system, but the growth of frauds during the past few months has been outrageous. Here are a few instances cited by an exchange: Several lots of all-wool Henrietta dress cloth were received recently at prices quoted at less than 50 cents a yard. In almost all instances the appraisers raised the price and added the cases in which the goods were consigned. Upon several lots of men's fast black lisle gloves the importer has placed a price of 1.32 marks per dozen. A mark is about 24 cents, so it will be seen that these fine lisle gloves were entered at the astonishing price of about 32 cents a dozen pairs. What is more surprising is that the goods passed through at that price with the exception of the addition of the value of the boxes. Fourteen lots of razors were imported and prices quoted by the importer on some of them were as low as 16 cents each and none of them higher than 30 cents each. How many articles are admitted day by day at such unfair prices, thereby coming into competition with American goods upon unjust terms, is, of course, unknown. Not only is the government treasury thereby defrauded, but the operatives in American mills are subjected to a ruinous competition. The sweeping reductions in the duties of imported goods in the textile lines have greatly increased the importations of that class of goods and the frauds have increased proportionately with greater rapidity even than have the importations.—Statesman.

The wrongs which led Cuba into rebellion are greater than those which led the 13 American colonies to renounce their allegiance to the British and therefore do they not deserve much encouragement in their revolution? When the regiments now under order for Cuba shall have landed, Spain will be obliged to furnish a military force larger than that at the disposal of British generals in our country during the Revolutionary war. The Madrid government has steadily lost ground, and the uprising has spread until all the eastern and central parts of the island are in open revolt. The Cubans are taking measures to complete the organization of a provisional Republican government, to gain possession of at least one sea port, and thus achieve one signal victory.

Those who are dissatisfied with the operation of the Vermont prohibitory law are invited to study the situation in New York city, where turmoil prevails as the result of the Sunday closing of saloons by the police commissioners in the effort to execute the law in that respect. In spite of the so-called "restrictions," license to sell liquor means practically free rum at all times and all places. License falls as far short of its aim as prohibition does, and its aim is much lower. License laws are broken with greater impunity than those more stringent. If prohibition doesn't prohibit, license certainly doesn't restrict. The liquor business is the hardest subject that law has to deal with in any community. We have never claimed perfection for the Vermont, but we do consider that it is better adapted to this state than any form of license would be.—News and Herald.

BREEDERS' MEETING AT NEWPORT
AUGUST 14 and 15.

The gentlemen who guaranteed the purses and premiums offered by the Breeders' association, met at the Newport House Tuesday, July 16, and arranged for the meeting August 14 and 15. Those present were: Gen. W. W. Grout, G. H. Tice, H. C. Jenkins, H. Stewart, D. T. Elder, Henry Ball, E. J. Tinker, F. B. Lang, and F. C. Williams, from out of town, and several of the business men in Newport assisted by their support and advice in planning what is hoped will be the most successful meeting in the history of the association.

There are twenty-five men who are backing the officers and about one-half of them are prominent business men in Newport.

The officers of the Breeders' association, elected last fall, were instructed to offer $1470 in purses and premiums. There will be races for one, two and three-year-olds, of $50, $200 and $150, respectively; 2:20 and 2:35 classes of $150 each; 2:27, 2:23, 2:19 and free-for-all, $200 each. Entries close Aug. 5, and should be sent to H. B. Stewart, Beebe Plain, Vt. All races are for trotters and pacers. Premiums are offered for single and double drivers, for brood mares and colts, and for yearling, two-year-old and three-year-old geldings and fillies, and for four-year-old stallions and stallions any age, with four of their get.

The exhibition feature is an important one and it is hoped that people will exhibit all meritorious animals.
