HUB MARKETS

Quotations on the Leading Products in Demand

Boston, Nov. 8.—Butter is rather quiet, but prices have been pretty steadily maintained, with such revision as the supply warranted. Choice creamery, 27@29c; western creamery, 26@28c; Vermont dairy, 23@26c. The best grades of cheese show a slight recession from the extreme high point, but trade is still moderate. York state, 13 1/2@14 1/2c; Vermont, 13@14c.

The best lots of fresh-laid hennery and nearby eggs have gained considerable strength and the same is true of choice western stock; but much of the latter is of poor quality, and it is hard to get prices up. Choice hennery and nearby, 30@41c; eastern extras, 33@37c; western, 26@29c.

The apple market is in bad shape. Supplies are heavy and the demand is slow. Strictly fancy fruit seems to clean up fairly well, but poor lots are not wanted and when sales are forced quotations have to be shaded from 25c to 50c a barrel. Cranberries are high in view of the quantity here and the rather poor quality of the offerings. Shippers are not forwarding many of the late varieties, and those are the kinds wanted. California and Almeria grapes sell well, but basket grapes are not taken as freely as they were because the quality is poorer. Plums have about run their course for this year.

White potatoes are more plenty and easier. Sweet potatoes are dull and sales have to be forced at the expense of prices. Cabbages are cleaning up a little better and are firmer. Cauliflowers are plenty and cheap. Fancy, good-sized onions are wanted, but the market is overstocked with small and ordinary onions that are hard to place at any price. Lettuce and celery are a trifle easier. Most of the string beans are poor; good ones command high prices. Tomatoes are scarce. Turnips are steady. Squashes are dull and easy, as the supply is large. Cucumbers continue high.

Apples—Wolf river, $3@3.50; Mackintosh reds, $2.50@4; Kings, $2@3; snows, $2@3; western Ben Davis, $2@2.75; Harvey, $2@2.50; Baldwin, No. 1, $1.75@2.25; common, $1@1.50; greenings, $1.50@2.25; pippins, $1.50@2; pound sweets, $2.50@3; common green varieties, $1@1.50; box fruit, 25c@$1. Cranberries—Cape Cod, fancy, $8.50 @9 a barrel; good to choice, $7@8; crates, $2.50@2.75.

Grapes—Western New York, pony baskets, Catawbas, 15@16c; Concord, 14@15c; California, per four basket crate, Malagas, $1.50@1.75; Tokays, $2 @2.25. Pears—Bartlett, $2@3 a bushel; fancy, $3@4.50; common to good, $1.50@2.50; Sheldons, fancy, $3@3.50; common to good, $2@2.50; common sorts, $1@1.50.

Plums—California varieties, $1@1.50 a four-basket crate. Quinces—York state, $2@3.50 a bushel; California, $1.75@2 a box. Potatoes—Aroostook Green mountains, 52@53c a bushel; hebrons, 4@50c; sweets, Jersey, $1.50@1.75 a barrel; Norfolk, $1@1.25; eastern shore, $1@1.25.

Beans—String beans, southern, $1@4 a basket; Lima beans, $2.50@3 a bushel. Cabbages—Drumhead, 75c a barrel; savoy, 75c a barrel; red, 50c a bushel box. Celery—Boston market, $1.50 a dozen bunches; pascal, $1@1.25; white, 75c @81.

Lettuce, etc.—Lettuce, 40@50c a dozen heads; romaine, 50c; escarole 50c; chicory, 25c; parsley, 25c a bushel; mint, 50c a dozen bunches; watercress, 40c a dozen bunches. Onions—Native, 75c a bushel; Connecticut river, 50@55c a bushel; Spanish, $3 a crate; leeks, 50c a dozen bunches.

Squashes—Marrow, 75c@81 a barrel; turban, 85c@81 a barrel; hubbard, $20 a ton; pumpkins, 25@30c a bushel box. Tomatoes—Native, $2.50@3 a bushel; hothouse, 20c a pound; green tomatoes, $1@1.25 a bushel. Turnips—Yellow, 90c@81 a barrel; French white, $1@1.25 a bag; white egg and flats, 50@75c a bushel.

Miscellaneous—Cucumbers, $3@8 a box; carrots, 60@75c a bushel; parsnips, 75c@81 a bushel; radishes, 75c a box; spinach, 25c a bushel; beets, 60@75c a bushel; peppers, 85c@81 a bushel; eggplants, $2.50@3 a crate; okra, $1.50@2 a crate; Brussels sprouts, 10@12 1/2c a quart; cauliflowers, 75c@81 a box; Jerusalem artichokes, $2@2.50 a bushel.

There are no changes in the prices of pork provisions. Fresh beef is steady in price, though the supply is still ample. Extra sides, 9@9 3/4c; good, 8 1/4@8 3/4c; light, 7@8c; heavy hinds, 11 3/4@12 1/2c; good 11 @11 1/2c; light, 9@10 1/2c; heavy fores, 6 1/4 @7c; good, 5 1/2@6c; light, 5@5 1/2c.

The market has stiffened up a little on choice lambs, but the demand is still moderate; veals are firm. Spring lambs, 12@13c; fall lambs, 10@12c; yearlings, 9c; muttons, 9@10c; veals, 11@12c.

There is a slightly better demand for poultry, but the receipts are still large and prices are easy. Northern turkeys, 25@28c; western turkeys, 10@18c; native broiler chickens, 18@20c; northern broiler chickens, 16@18c; fowls, 14 @15c; ducks, 17c; western broilers, 16c; western chickens, 12@13c; fowls, 11@13c.

Hay is very firm, with a better demand, though prices are unchanged. Mill straw is quiet and rather weak; mill feed is quiet, but very firm. Hay, feed is quiet, but very firm. Hay, choice, $13.50@14; No. 1, $20; lower grades, $13.50@19; rye straw, prime, $15; oat straw, $9.

The wheat market seems to be in a more bullish position, due to a strong cash demand from millers, light primary receipts, especially in the northwest, and larger flour sales.

BOYS AND GIRLS.

THE WATERMELON TRAP.

For two years the doctor had been disappointed in his intention of enjoying the fruits of his watermelon patch. Just as soon as the melons ripened some boys of the neighborhood stole them away at night. That was why the aged physician now stood grimly in the midst of the bearing vines with his medicine case in his hand. He stooped down and thumped two melons.

"These will be about right to pick by to-morrow," he said to himself; "but I suppose some of those pesky boys will 'hook' them before morning. Well, if I can't eat them myself, at least I'll try and find out what boys are stealing them."

With this he "plugged" the two melons, and, taking a little vial from his medicine case, inserted a little white powder into each of the reddening hearts of the luscious fruit.

The vial was labeled "Ipec." which was the doctor's abbreviation for ipecacuanha—a drug whose effects are decidedly unpleasant. Now, Tom Browning had a cousin from the city visiting him, and the cousin was in search of experiences. The country was new to him, and he had got most of his ideas concerning it from what he had read in story books. One idea that he had obtained this way was that it was the proper thing for a boy in the country to steal watermelons.

Therefore he broached the subject to his cousin. "Tom," said he, "isn't there some place we can go hooking watermelons to-night?" Tom shook his head. "No," said he. "I've given up hookin' watermelons. It's just as good stealing as any other kind."

"Didn't you ever hook watermelons?" queried Archie. Tom hesitated, stammered and blushed a little as he confessed. "Well, yes, I have. I took some of the doctor's last summer. But I'm older this year, and know better. I shan't do it any more. You wouldn't steal a watermelon out of a store in the city, would you?"

"No," said Archie, "of course not. But it's different when you are in the country. It isn't stealing, really, when you get them out of a garden—it's just hookin'."

"No difference," replied Tom, and so the two boys argued the question until finally Tom fell, and promised to accompany his cousin on a raid that night, "just this once."

When it came to the actual creeping into the doctor's garden in the dark and taking the melons, Archie, who had been so keen for the project in the broad light of day, weakened perceptibly, and just as the two boys began to crawl through the fence he had a sudden attack of fear, which he tried to convince himself was conscience.

"I don't know but it is wrong to steal watermelons, after all," he whispered to Tom. "In fact, I am SURE it is. Let's go home."

"Fshaw!" said Tom. "You're afraid. That's what's the matter with you." Tom had been ready to back out at any time before this, but now that he saw his cousin showing the white feather he was determined to carry it through. So he went forward, followed by the trembling city boy, who was ready to run at any sound.

Suddenly a blind on the doctor's house was blown to with a bang. Archie was off like a shot, but Tom stood still with his heart beating violently, till, seeing that it was only a loose blind, he went on with his looting. Had he come on the expedition alone he would have run home as fast as he could, but he "wanted to show Archie," and so, recovering himself, he carefully thumped the melons and, with the unflinching accuracy of a marauding small boy in somebody else's melon patch, selected the two ripest melons—the very ones that the doctor had plugged and medicated.

Taking them under his arms he joined his cousin, who was waiting for him half a mile down the road. The boys smashed the melons against a stone wall and proceeded to eat the rich, juicy hearts of them. The doctor had put in only a small dose of ipecacuanha, and the boys did not notice anything suspicious in the flavor.

At 2 o'clock that morning the doctor's doorknob rang violently and the old man poked his head out of the window. Farmer Browning toods below and called: "Come over to my house as quick as you can, doctor! My boy and my nephew, who is visiting us, are both dying, I think. Oh dear, hurry, hurry!"

To the surprise of farmer Browning the doctor laughed. "Oh, they won't die," said he. "They are all right. I know what is the matter with them. I'll be right down."

Farmer Browning had driven over in his buckboard wagon, and soon, with the doctor seated beside him, he was driving home again as fast as his old mare could get over the road. There was confusion and distress in the Browning homestead when the two men arrived, but the boys were reported to be comfortable, though badly scared.

"Oh, doctor, will I die yet?" queried Archie. "Not for about seventy years yet," answered the man of medicine. "And answered the man of seventy-five it will take you about seventy-five years," continued he, turning to Tom. Then the doctor turned everybody except his patients out of the room and proceeded to tell the boys what was the matter with them. "It was a mild dose of harmless emetic," he said in closing, "and will do you no harm. But I want you both to promise me, right here and now, that you will never steal watermelons or anything else again as long as you live."

The boys promised and kept their promise. As for the doctor, he never "gave them away," but he did charge two dollars for the visit, considering that little enough return for his watermelons and his midnight ride. —The American Boy.

London was a place of importance even under the Romans and was famed for its great commerce as early as the first century of the Christian era. From the Romans it received municipal institutions which have endured in their main features to the present day. In Saxon times it was, in reality, a small independent state.
