The Growth of the J. G. Turnbull Company.

The following item copied from the Stanstead Journal shows something of the growth and development of the J. G. Turnbull company, whose headquarters and office is located here. "The machinery at the J. G. Turnbull Company's creamery, near the R. I. and D. L. freight station, was set in motion Monday after several months' idleness. This creamery was established last year for the purpose of churning Canadian cream in the United States. Through the season of 1910, butter prices ruled considerably higher in Boston than in Montreal, and the Turnbull creamery here was busy night and day most of the time, its 'raw material' being supplied by Stanstead county creameries. With the advent of cold weather, butter prices declined in the United States to or below the Canadian level. Lately there has been a gradual change until the Boston price is four cents in advance of Montreal quotations. The duty on cream is five cents a gallon, which approximates two cents a pound on butter. The Turnbull company have now invaded Canada in a new way, having acquired Riverside Creamery at Judd's Mills, from the former owner, E. A. Baldwin. The Turnbull Company now churns in both countries at their R. I. and D. L. plant, and Riverside Creamery has been permanently closed. The deed of transfer was passed last Thursday, and on Monday Riverside teams drove direct to the Turnbull plant here for the first time this season."

Lecture-Piano-Recital.

Friday evening a very good audience was present in the Congregational church to hear the lecture-recital given by Mrs. Carrie Gilman Edwards of New York city. The platform was tastefully decorated with ferns and flowers. Preliminary to the recital, Mrs. Edwards gave a short lecture on the "Life Forces in Music" in which she set forth the physical influence that music has upon the mind. The opening piece of the program was the "German Military March." Before this stirring march was rendered she gave the audience a very vivid description of the German army. This was followed by the music of a "Wedding Day in Norway." Then came an excellent imitation of the harp, followed by the peculiarly wild music of the "Er-King," "Love Romance," the Italian dance of the "Goretette" and many other selections were given during the evening's performance. Mrs. Edwards gave the historical setting of each piece thereby deepening the interest and preparing the mind for the interpretation. Mrs. Edwards has a charming personality and a very pleasant manner. In the handling of her subject and the manipulation of the instrument she fully demonstrated her rare ability as an artist. The recital was unique in many ways and was pronounced by the audience one of the best ever heard here. Many have since expressed regret in failing to hear her. Mrs. Edwards has two other subjects and programs and we hope it will be our pleasure to hear her again.
