The Phenomenal Growth of the Hyde Park Savings Bank.

The fact that the Hyde Park Savings Bank is the largest bank in any country village in the world has come to be the subject of much comment on the part of bank managers, not only in Vermont, but in many of the other states of the Union.

"Can it be true?" and if so, "how can it be accounted for?" are the questions most often raised by those most interested in Savings Banks.

As to the first question—"Can it be true?"—the best answer perhaps is a statement taken from the official records which disclose that the number of depositors and the amount of deposits by five year periods since the organization of the bank in 1889 are as follows:—

Date	Number Depositors	Amount of Deposits
June 30, 1889	400	$55,000
June 30, 1894	1700	351,000
June 30, 1899	2200	584,000
June 30, 1904	2700	666,000
June 30, 1909	4100	1,597,000
June 30, 1914	5300	2,654,000

The second query suggested, to wit: "How can the phenomenal growth of the Hyde Park Bank, as shown by the above statement, be accounted for?" is really a very simple matter. Here is the explanation:

Savings Bank Depositors in the aggregate are very shrewd and as a class are an extremely critical body of men. They insist that the safest bank is none too safe for them, and having reached a conclusion in their own minds as to which is the safest, they place their money there.

CONFIDENCE is a plant of slow growth. For the first five years of its existence the Hyde Park Savings Bank grew less than $300,000 but during the last five years it grew considerably more than a million dollars, as the above table shows.

The managers of the Hyde Park Bank quite naturally take great pride in the position which the bank occupies among the banks of the world and it feels quite justified in soliciting the deposits of those Vermonters who would like to perpetuate this unique distinction now enjoyed by Vermont.

Banking by mail is now regarded as absolutely safe and depositors anywhere can send money to this bank either by personal or bank check, postal or express money order, registered letter or express without the slightest fear of loss; indeed in the twenty-six years of its existence, not a dollar ever sent to this bank has ever been lost.

The Hyde Park Bank pays four per cent and compounds semi-annually and it pays all taxes.

Any information desired by those contemplating making a deposit in this bank will be cheerfully furnished by addressing the President, Carroll S. Page or the Treasurer, F. M. Culver, Hyde Park, Vermont.—News and Citizen.
