THE MUDDY MISSOURI.

How the River Lowers the Surface of the Land It Drains. The Missouri is the middlest river in the United States except possibly the Rio Grande and the Colorado. For every square mile of country drained it carries downstream 381 tons of dissolved and suspended matter each year. In other words, the river gathers annually from the country that it drains more than 123,000,000 tons of silt and soluble matter, some of which it distributes over the flood plains below to form productive agricultural lands, but most of which finds its way at last to the gulf of Mexico. It is by means of data of this kind that geologists compute the rate at which the lands are being eroded away. It has been shown that the Missouri river is lowering the surface of the land drained by it at the rate of 1 foot in 6,000 years. The surface of the United States as a whole is now being worn down at the rate of 1 foot in 9,120 years. It has been estimated that if this erosive action of the streams of the United States could have been concentrated on the isthmus of Panama it would have dug in seventy-three days the canal which was completed after ten years' work with the most powerful appliances yet devised by man.—Geological Survey Bulletin.

TO OUR PATRONS
We wonder if you quite realize the class of Photoplays we are presenting. It costs us a good deal of money to bring such plays as The Christian to our theatres, and yet our admission price is about one quarter to one half what you would pay in the cities to see such productions. If you saw Quo Vadis, you know what we mean, when we say big productions. If you see The Christian next week you will be just as well satisfied.
