The sermon prepared for Tuesday night:

GOD, THE COMFORTER

The text, "Woman, behold thy son—Behold thy mother," John 19: 26-27.

There is a double message here in the third utterance of Christ on the cross. First He indicates to give comfort to the ones who need it beyond fort, then He taught the duty of a comforter.

Hanging there upon the cross, gazing out upon the blood-thirsty throng, he beheld his friends and in Former Hotel Barton Man Dead.

The following regarding J. R. Elliott, formerly owner of Hotel Barton, is from the Plymouth, N. H., Record.

"Josiah Richardson Elliott, prominent New Hampshire hotel man, died at his home in Plymouth Wednesday afternoon, April 5. He was born in 1856 in Lisbon. He was a poor boy and his education and later success in the hotel world were due to his own efforts. He began his hotel career under Col. Charles Greenleaf at the Profile house, where he was for 12 years, later taking the Flume house in partnership with his brother, Seth B. Elliott. He was proprietor of the Deer Park Hotel, North Woodstock, from 1895 to 1913, Hotel Barton in Barton, Vt., from 1895 to 1897, the Old Penicussawet House in Plymouth from 1897 until it burned in 1909, and the present New Penicussawet Hotel since 1911. He was a member of the New England Hotel Men's Association and indefatigably interested in perfecting the art of hotel management. He was well known throughout New England and his reputation as a hotel manager and proprietor has extended far beyond the limits of his native state.

"He is mourned by numberless friends and acquaintances who experienced his wonderful geniality, his generosity, and his greatness of heart. A hotel proprietor in San Francisco said, 'My ancestors for generations have been hotel men, but there has never been among them or in my acquaintance one like J. R. Elliott. He is the prince of hotel men.'

"He leaves a wife, Mrs. Luella Fish Elliott, a daughter, Mrs. Mary Place, of New York, and a son, Josiah R. Elliott, Jr.

"Funeral services will be held in the Congregational church Saturday afternoon at 2.30. The remains will be taken to Lisbon for interment."
