American Principles and Ideals

It has been said that patriotism must be an intelligent patriotism; there is much that passes for it that is not intelligent, and some that falls within Dr. Johnson's definition: "Patriotism is the last refuge of a scoundrel." Nothing is easier than to be patriotic when it is simply a question of going with the crowd. But more than this is required—disinterested service, a full discharge of the duties of citizenship (even to the honest paying of taxes), independence and courage in the exercise of the right to vote, obedience to the law, etc. There must be service by outward act and deed, and not mere lip service; asserts a writer in the Indianapolis News. But service implies knowledge. The apostle said:

"For the which cause I also suffer these things: nevertheless I am not ashamed: for I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day." "I know whom I have believed." One who believes in America must know America, and the more one knows her the more intense will be one's faith and the more devoted one's service. America, after all, is nothing more than the people who call themselves Americans, for ideas and ideals do not merely float in the air—they are incarnated in men and women, and by men and women they are applied to life. Principles are of no value till they are acted on, and they must be acted on by people. The memories and traditions of which something has been said all attach to people, and the history of the country which is a part of it today was made by people. It is into the labors of very real people that we of the present time have entered. The problem, therefore, is one of keeping Americans true, not solely to the flag, but to the flag as the symbol of a great national life. Into that life it is necessary to enter, in it men must share. The more complete their participation the greater will be their love of their country—and their love of it for what it really is, and of all that it stands for. A patriotism thus enlightened and inspired will, as has been said, be close of kin to religion.

Preserve Faith and Hope.

It is not boasting to magnify one's blessings, or to dwell lovingly and proudly on the principles and ideals which are American. It is necessary, indeed to do this, since there are some unhappy souls who see nothing good in America, and who are even yet looking to Russia for inspiration and salvation. Nothing can be done with or for such, but it may be possible to prevent others from being led astray through ignorance of what America truly is. The American people have been impervious to the incursions of Bolshevism, not because they are dull and stupid, but rather because they are satisfied, and have reason to be. They know their America well enough to know that there is no country in the world in which opportunity is more freely offered, none which comes so near being the country of the average man.

Many Things to Learn.

On the nation's birthday, therefore, the American people should pledge themselves to greater devotion to American ideals, to more loyal and unselfish service, and to stricter conformity to those great principles which lie at the basis of the nation's life. There is great need for education, since much of the failure to appreciate this country is due to a pitiable ignorance of its history, its institutions, and of all that America has throughout its life stood for. And this ignorance is often the densest in the minds of those who think of themselves as reformers and who indeed are allowed to pose as such. Men need to be very sure that they know what liberty, as won by people of the Anglican race, is, and what are its safeguards. It is particularly necessary that they should understand the right of minorities, and should realize that there is such a thing as the despotism of majorities. There are some things that a vote of the majority cannot be allowed to sanction, as our constitution recognizes. Perhaps this is one of the most important lessons to be learned, as it seems to be the most difficult to bring home to men. The very restraints of which the uninformed so often complain have no other purpose than to protect the helpless against the strong. And this is a part of Americanism. So we approach another Fourth of July. The world is in a sad state, and ever in fortunate America all things are not as we should like to have them. Nevertheless the foundation of God standeth sure, and it is not likely to be shaken.

THEY ARE PASSING AWAY

Only 12 of 15th Vermont Answer Annual Roll Call

Only 12 members of Col. Redfield Proctor's 15th Vermont regiment met at their annual reunion at St. Johnsbury last Wednesday but the oldest of them all—84 years young—scouted the idea of giving up the gatherings and said he would attend even if he were the last surviving member of the regiment.

The youngest veteran present was 76 years and one of the guests was George Gilman of Danville now in his 92nd year.

J. N. Winslow of Whitefield was elected colonel, William S. Brock of Benning, lieutenant colonel, and Judge J. T. Gleason of Lyndonville, major and adjutant.

Pantomime Purely a Roman Idea.

Not until the drama had been established for more than 500 years was the pantomime, one of the simplest forms of dramatic art, originated. The drama was the invention of the Greeks, but the pantomime was a purely Roman idea. Two aspiring actors, Pylades and Bathylus, one of whom was afflicted with throat trouble, gave the first performance of this kind in the year 22 B. C. It was only a makeshift on their part because of the illness of one of the performers, but their audience was so delighted that they continued with the production of the wordless drama.

A Shrub a Year.

A man who makes nature study his hobby plants a new kind of shrub every fall in his back yard. He says its leafing and flowering in the coming spring are something to look forward to through the winter, and so he keeps himself in a condition of curiosity and expectation and life never goes quite stale. He says nothing of the beauty of that back yard, but his friends and neighbors can testify to that. Some people buy some object of art or a piece of beautiful furniture every year. This is all right as a means of accumulating property, and of developing a sense of beauty in regard to the inorganic world. But the nature-lover's little shrub has one quality which any inanimate object lacks—the possibility of growth and development in ever-surprising ways. It keeps the imagination alive. It keeps the possessor on tip-toe with expectation, and that is what makes life worth living.—Concord Monitor.

June Wedding at West Charleston.

Another pretty June wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. I. O. Weymouth West Charleston, at 7 o'clock Wednesday evening, June 28, when their daughter Miss Sylvia Frances was united in marriage to Willard Everett Calkins of Morgan.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. C. Johnson of Derby in the presence of the members of the two families and a few intimate friends, Mrs. Sylvia Frances' gray canton Miss Elsie Calkins close friend of the bride, acted as bridesmaid and Lawrence Maroney of Island Pond, friend of the groom was best man.

The bride presented a charming appearance in her gown of white canton crepe trimmed with duchesse lace and a tulle veil trimmed with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid wore a peach organdie gown and carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses. Mrs. Weymouth, the bride's mother, wore a gray canton crepe, embroidered in blue and grey.

At the strains of the "Lohengrin" wedding march rendered by Mrs. Adin Armstrong, the couple took their place under a large white bell with its decorated and gorgeous supply of rose leaves and confetti, leaving the grounds about the residence white with rice.

Following an auto trip through the White Mountains and a week in camp at the lake the couple will make their home at West Charleston.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. O. Weymouth. She attended Lyndon Institute and for two seasons assisted in the millinery parlors of Mrs. Rosa M. Sawyer of Newport. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Calkins of Morgan and for the past year has been a popular clerk at the Weymouth store where he will continue to work.

The wedding gifts were numerous and beautiful and included silver, linen, cut glass, china, pyrex, pictures and several electrical articles, also a substantial sum of money included in which were several gold pieces.

Those from out of town to attend the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Lawrence of Springfield, Vt., and Mrs. Rosa Sawyer and son Harley of Newport.
