THE MIRROR OF DEATH.

"Poor Mary — is no more! she breathed her last on Thursday, just as the sun was sinking to his rest. You remember her singular beauty—the rose-like bloom of her cheek, and hair of her dark eyes. Alas! they are but the harbingers of premature decay. Yet we little thought so, one short year ago, when we gazed in admiration upon features glowing with youth and beauty, and saw the radiant color come and go, with tinges from her heart, as if it were a turning messenger to that glad scene. But she is no more—and the fond eyes that have seen her will see her no more! A little while before she died, in an interval of pain, she desired a story to bring a sorrow, that she might behold the ravages disease had wrought. Her request was granted—and never shall I forget the scene which ensued—the solemn meditations with which it was fraught."—LETTER FROM A FRIEND.

The beautiful was dying! In life's spring,
When the young heart, with joy inextinguishable,
Had newly found the love's warm wing,
And pleasure's bliss had lit the torch of life—
The first had gone for to give away.
So young, so bright, was a later day,
But the soft radiance of immortal day [faint].
Streamed sweetly through the twilight of the tomb.

The strife was well high finished, and the soul,
Baptized in light, the dawn of light to be,
Met life's pleasures at its final goal.
By the just standard of eternity.
Sweet was her spirit's comfort, breathed from lips
Voiced like the bird that warbling mounts toward heaven,
And to these eyes death waited to eclipse,
A deep and holy earnestness was given.

She had then in her mirror, 'twas brought
She looked into it, with steadfast gaze,
But gazed not at the wreck disease had wrought.
Amongst the charms so prized in other days:
Then, with the rain of her luxuriant hair,
Like a sad specter of the past, in view,
Thus did her soul rebuke pride's weakness—
Thus did its wasted tunic admonish:

"How soon life vanishes!
A little while, then a long repose!
Health's seeming joys are trifles but the rose
Planted by Death!"

"Look on this altered form!
Once garlanded with such fascinations rare!
How would you gaze, or dwell on jewels
Bereft of use!"

"Waste not one precious hour
In vain adorning the fading day;
But beauty, the soul, or which decay
Can boast no power."

Robe it for that whole,
Where sorrow comes not—lonely knows no blight,
Fit to be in halls of peerless light,
The guest of God!

"Friends whom I fondly love!
Obtain the everlasting garment on!
So shall we stand unscathed by that throne
All thrones above."

"So shall we part, to meet
Where never yet was heard the sound 'farewell'
And hold, in that fair land where angels dwell,
Communion sweet."

"Farewell! poor fading form!
Whose image Death is darkening now!
But a few moments more of pain, and thou
Shalt yield thy trust."

"I feel earth's tie
Untwining from my soul! Ye kind and true,
Who long have watched and tended me, adieu!
In peace I die!"

Her dark eyes closed—the pulse of life was stilled;
Death came to her as to the weary sleep,
And felt a smile upon her lip be chilled,
That made it half profane to weep.
Sorrow for her—'it had been selfless love!
If she should we mourn, when those we mourn rejoice!"

Perchance to save her from unweakened distress,
God called her homeward with a father's voice.

All that was mortal of that sainted girl
Lies in the vale she loved—a beautiful scene;
Above the grave the night dew hangs in pearl
On many a grateful wreath of living green!
There earliest wakes the wailers of the Spring,
There, too, the flowers of Autumn latest die;
Nature delights her choicest gifts to fling
Around the tomb of maiden purity. J. B.

THE HARP.

It was the first week of the honey-moon. Neither sordid calculation, nor yet a mere passing fancy, had led to the marriage of Edward Selmer and his young bride. No—their bond of union was a pure and glowing affection, proved by time and consecrated by many trials. They had early known and appreciated each other, but the long delay of an official appointment had compelled Selmer to postpone the realization of his wishes. At length the much-desired commission came, and, on the following Sabbath, he led his beloved maiden to her wedding, a bride. The tedious days of ceremony and festivity over, the happy pair were left to pass the pleasant summer evenings in the sweet communion of their pure and confiding hearts. Little plans of their future life, Edward's flute and Joseph's harp, served to fill up hours which flew but too rapidly away, and the deep harmony of their instruments seemed to them a friendly presage of that deeper accord which was to bless their wedded years. One evening, after having enjoyed their music until a later hour than usual, Joseph complained of a pain in her head. She had, indeed, an attack of it in the morning, but refrained from mentioning it to her husband, lest it should cause him needless anxiety. The excitement of the music, however, acting upon a constitutionally weak nervous system, so considerably increased a previously slight fever, that she now no longer concealed her indisposition, but anxiously requested that medical aid might be called. The physician, deeming her illness slight, promised an entire recovery by the morning. Poor Joseph, however, passed an extremely restless night, through the whole of which she raved incessantly, and on repeating his visit the next morning, he found her with all the symptoms of a serious nervous fever. Notwithstanding the application of every remedy which affectionate zeal and professional intelligence could suggest, her illness increased. Selmer was almost distracted. The physician finally felt it his duty to inform him that his wife could not survive the attack; and, on the ninth day, Joseph herself became aware that there was no longer any ground for hope. She felt that her last hour was approaching, and, with calm resignation, awaited her fate.

"Dear Edward," said she to her husband, folding him in a last embrace, "with deep regret do I leave this fair earth where I have enjoyed so much happiness with you; but although I may no longer be happy in your arms, yet shall Joseph's faithful spirit hover about the object of its earthly affections, until we meet again above." Then sinking back upon her pillow, she fell asleep in death. It was the ninth hour of the evening. What Selmer suffered is beyond the power of words to express. The blow prostrated his health, and long he wrestled with the destroying angel. When at length he arose from his sick-bed, all the strength and elasticity of his youth was gone, he was continually lost in sad reveries, and was evidently fast fading away. A profound melancholy had succeeded the violence of despair, and a silent sorrow, concentrated the memory of the loved lost. He had left Joseph's apartment just as it was before her death. Her work still laid upon the table, and her harp remained untouched in its accustomed place. Taking his flute, Selmer every evening made a pilgrimage to the sanctuary of his love, and leaning against the window as in happier times, breathed in plaintive tones his aspirations for the spirit of the departed. On one occasion he was standing thus in Joseph's chamber—a clear moon shone through the window, and a watchman upon the tower of the neighboring castle was proclaiming the ninth hour—when suddenly the harp, as if touched by some invisible spirit, poured forth the most thrilling tones, in harmony with those of the flute. In the confusion of his surprise he ceased to play, and lo! the harp also became silent. Recovering his self-possession, he tremblingly commenced Joseph's favorite air, and again the melodious tones of the harp blended in sweet response. Sinking to the earth in a paroxysm of joy, and spreading out his arms to embrace the beloved shade, he felt a breath of warm veridical air upon his lips, while a pale and glimmering light seemed to flit before him. Glowing with ecstasy, he cried: "I recognize thee, blessed shade of my Joseph! Then didst promise that thy faithful spirit should hover about me; thou hast kept thy word; I feel thy breath on my lips!" In a state of indescribable exultation he seized his flute again, and again the answering tones of the harp were heard, but constantly fainter and fainter, until their whispering were lost in expiring harmonies. Selmer's vital powers were fully excited by the spirit-greeting of this evening; he threw himself restlessly upon his bed, and in all his feverish dreams the sweet whisperings of the harp were continually heard. He awoke late, wearied and exhausted by the phantasies of the night—he felt that his whole being was strangely affected, and became strongly impressed that his dissolution was approaching. With impatient longing he awaited the return of evening, and with confident hope again repaired to Joseph's chamber. By the aid of the flute, he had succeeded in lulling himself into a state of dreamy repose, when the ninth hour had struck. Hardly had the last stroke of the clock ceased to vibrate, when the harp began its soft and low responses to the flute, its tones gradually increasing in strength, until they swelled into the most full and perfect harmony. When the flute became silent, the spirit-tones ceased; the pale, tremulous light again flitted about him, and in his heart he could only exclaim: "Joseph, Joseph! take, oh take me to your faithful bosom!"

This time, also, the spirit took its departure in low and murmuring tones, which were gradually lost in audible vibrations. Selmer tottered back to his room, still more affected than on the previous evening. His faithful servant was shocked at his master's appearance, and in defiance of his prohibition hastened for the physician, who happened to be one of Selmer's most intimate friends. The physician found him in a high fever, with symptoms similar to those of Joseph, but much more decided. The fever increased through the night, during which he continually raved of Joseph and the harp. In the morning he was more composed; the struggle was past, and he felt that his release was near. He disclosed to his friend the occurrences of the two evenings, and no arguments could shake his belief in their reality. As the evening approached, he gradually grew more feeble, and at last, with a trembling voice, entreated to be conveyed to Joseph's apartment. His wish was gratified. He glanced about the room with sweet serenity, greeted with silent tears every object which reminded him of Joseph, and spoke with a calm, but firm conviction, of the ninth hour as that of his death. As the decisive moment approached, he took leave of his friends, and requested all save his physician, to retire. They were left alone—the ninth hour struck—Selmer's pale features lighted up with a supernatural glow—"Joseph!" he cried, "Joseph! greet me once more, on my departure, that I may feel thy presence and overcome death with thy love!" Immediately the harp-strings resounded with a loud and triumphant harmony, and a faint, wavering light, encircled the dying man. "I come, I come!" he exclaimed, falling back in the last conflict with life. Softer and fainter breathed the harp tones, until, with his expiring breath, the strings suddenly burst asunder—and all was still. Overwhelmed with emotion, the physician left the house; and it was long before he could erase the deep impression of that last hour from his heart, or trust his lips to speak of it. In after life, however, he would sometimes repeat the story in his own immediate circle, and exhibit the sacred legacy of his deceased friend—Joseph's harp.

A musician gave as a reason for leaving an orchestra, that he never was at rest, among such discordant performers; the violinists were always getting into scrapes, and the trumpets and drummers constantly coming to blows.

The following is said to be the inscription on a tombstone in Paris: "To the memory of M. Jobert, a most excellent husband. His inconsolable widow still carries on the grocery business in Rue St Denis, No. 242."

CONSUMPTION!
Asthma! and Catarrh!

In that long train of diseases which seem to grow with the growth of civilized society, CONSUMPTION takes the lead in its relentless inroads upon human life—yet this dreadful disorder is easily overcome in its earlier stages. It is only when neglected that it arrives at the terrific maturity, which so often baffles the sagacity of professional science. An obstinate cough is the customary forerunner of the RELAPSING CONSUMPTION. Improper neglect in the timely administration of simple and salutary remedies, is sure to be repaid by a dreadful succession of consumptive symptoms: oppression of the breast; greenish and bloody sputa; ulcerated lungs and hectic fever; shrivelled extremities, and general emaciation of the whole body; prostration of strength; flushed cheeks; swollen feet and legs; and at last, in full possession of the mental faculties, and while hope still whispers her flattering tale—cold extremities, and a premature death.
For the various stages of this complaint, one of the most approved remedies ever discovered is

Dr. Relfe's Asthmatic Pills.
This exceedingly powerful, and yet equally safe and innocent preparation, has effected thorough and rapid cures upon patients supposed to have been far advanced in a confirmed Consumption, and who have exhibited the appearances which usually indicate a fatal termination of the disorder.

DR. RELFE'S PILLS have also obtained the highest character as a Pectoral Medicine, affording the most unexpected relief to those labouring under the common Cough, occasioned by acid humors irritating the throat, or by deflections on the lungs—symptoms which deprive the sufferer of sleep, and gradually introduce the long train of Pulmonary affections. The Pills appease the cough, promote easy expectoration, very essentially relieve, and often entirely cure the most obstinate and distressing cases. Common Colds are usually removed by the Pills in a few hours.
In the harassing and suffocating complaint of the ASTHMA, the Pills give immediate relief. They mitigate the complaint, and generally effect a radical cure. In those Asthmatic attacks characterized by difficulty of breathing, tightness and stricture across the breast and in the lungs, oppressive flatulencies, wheezing, coughing, hoarseness, costiveness, and many other asthmatic symptoms.
As the Pills require in ordinary cases no confinement, they may be administered with confidence and safety to all ages and classes of people. Unexampled success has hitherto attended their administration in a great variety of cases; and the Proprietor can refer to a multitude, which testify to their efficacy in relieving the emaciated victim from the bed of disease, and restoring him to the blessings of accustomed health and activity.

THE BENEFICIAL EFFECTS
Resulting from the administration of Dr. Relfe's Asthmatic and Consumptive Pills, exhibited in the following cases.
A Physician, M. D. and Druggist, recently writes: "The Asthmatic Pills (Relfe's) are invariably well spoken of by those who use them."
"Mrs. — of this city, was three years seriously afflicted with consumptive symptoms, as pain in the side, almost perpetual cough, spitting of blood, general debility, &c.—in this distressing state, unable to sit up, and not expecting to live many days she was advised to take Dr. Relfe's Asthmatic Pills, and also Dr. Jebb's Liniment applied to her side, which she did, and to the astonishment of every one, in a short time she was perfectly restored to health."
"A Lady from Framingham, was severely afflicted with cough, spitting of blood, and general debility, on taking two bottles of these Pills, and one box of Dr. Relfe's Antibilious Pills, was restored to perfect health."

"An elderly person in this vicinity, who had suffered much for years by a most distressing asthma, had tried almost every thing recommended, which only at times gave temporary relief, and usually a more violent return of her complaint, has recently made use of the above Pills with more beneficial effects than any thing she has ever used before."
"A Young Lady at M—, had been troubled with a very bad cough, so violent as at times to rock and harass her exceedingly; a consumption was feared, (as her mother had died of that complaint)—she was immediately relieved, and subsequently entirely cured by Dr. Relfe's Asthmatic Pills."

NOTICE
TO RHEUMATIC INVALIDS
Persons suffering under Rheumatic Affection are respectfully assured, that they can obtain of the proprietor and his agents a safe and admirable remedy for RHEUMATISM, however obstinate the disorder may be, and in all its different stages.
DR. JEBB'S
Rheumatic Liniment!

will afford immediate relief to the patient, and has sometimes been attended with such extraordinary success as to cure the most distressing Rheumatism in twenty-four hours, even when of years standing.
This highly valuable Liniment is recommended with a confidence founded on the experience of many years, not only as a cure for that excruciating disease, but as an excellent application for STIFFNESS OF THE JOINTS, NUMBNESS, SPRAINS, CHILBLAINS, &c.

Among a mass of testimony in favour of the success of the Liniment, as a thorough remedy for RHEUMATISM, the proprietor selects the following as presenting genuine instances of its efficacy.
New and surprising cases.
"A gentleman, Mr. R. of Charlestown [who can be referred to] had been confined to his bed most of the time for a week, suffering most excruciating pain from Rheumatism; after having had recourse to the usual remedies usually resorted to in this complaint, but without benefit; and while in this state of suffering, and no prospect of relief, Mr. Caleb Seymore, who was his neighbour, and who, [owing to the extraordinary benefit he had himself experienced from its use.] recommended the article with such confidence as induced Mr. R. to make use of it, which he did, with the usual success attending its administration, viz: immediate mitigation of pain relief, and cure!"

"Mr. T. of this city, was attacked with a very violent Rheumatism in his back, which an application of this Liniment [on going to bed] instantly relieved, and cured by morning—observes he never used anything which gave him so much and so great relief."
"An old Revolutionary Officer near Boston, was sorely afflicted for years with rheumatic complaints, especially in his joints and limbs, which were frequently much swollen, could obtain only temporary relief from medical advice, or the use of various remedies, and had despaired of help; when a friend who had witnessed the wonderful effects of this Liniment, advised him to make use of it, which he did, with the most happy effect; it reduced the swelling in one night."
This article is considered superior to every thing else, and to possess such uncommon virtues, that it is ordered from distant parts of the country.

"An agent recently writes: 'Please send me a further supply of Jebb's Liniment the first opportunity—I shall probably send a considerable quantity, as it is recommended by some of our physicians very highly.'"
"Another agent writes: 'I wish you to forward me some more of Jebb's Liniment, which has recommended itself very highly.'"
Price 50 cents a bottle.

The Painful and Debilitating Complaint of THE PILES receives immediate relief, and in numerous instances has been thoroughly cured, by the administration of DUMFRIES' REMEDY FOR THE PILES.
THIS approved compound, also mitigates and removes the symptoms which frequently accompany that disorder, and increase the danger of the patient, viz: pains in Loins—Headache—loss of appetite—Indigestion, and other marks of debility.

A relieved Patient writes from a distance, "It is but justice to you to inform you, that I have used your Dumfries' remedy for the Piles for sometime past, and have found it eminently successful."
An Officer in the Army observes—
"I have been troubled for years with the Piles, and have never found any remedy that would compare with yours. It gave me almost immediate relief."
A Physician and Druggist writes.
"I have sold all the medicine you sent me, which is as highly recommended for the Piles. I wish you to send me one dozen more by the bearer."

The remedy is quite innocent, and may be administered to all ages and both sexes—Plain and ample Directions, with a description of the complaint, accompany each package, which consists of two boxes, one containing an Ointment, and the other an Electuary.—Price $1 for both articles, or 50 cents where but one is wanted.
Price $1 a bottle, or 6 bottles for $5.

They in fact prove, by the cures they make, that there is no necessity for any other medicine.
Although Dr. B. has enumerated by name the above diseases, he is nevertheless of opinon with his grandfather, the late celebrated Dr. Wm. Brandreth, that there is only one disease, an impurity of the blood, which by impeding the circulation, brings on inflammation and consequent derangement in the organ or part where such impurity of the blood settles; and that it is the different appearances which this inflammation or derangement put on, that have caused medical men to designate such appearances by various names, but which are in fact, only the same disease, with more or less virulence. Dr. Wm. Brandreth was so fully convinced of the truth of the above simple theory, that he spent 30 years in experiment and laborious research into the medicinal properties of the numerous plants composing the Vegetable Kingdom; his object being to compose a medicine which should at once purify, and produce by specific action, a removal of all bad humors from the blood by the stomach and bowels, as by the continuation of the use of such a medicine, such humors are sure to be carried off, and the blood assume a state of purity; and whoever takes these Pills, and perseveres with them, will be satisfied that Dr. Wm. Brandreth fully attained his philanthropic object. It is now an absolute and known fact, that every disease, whether it be in the head or feet, in the brain or nearest member; whether it be an outward ulcer, or an inward abscess, are all, though arising from many causes, reducible to this one grand effect, namely, impurity of blood.

In all cases they will be found a safe and simple remedy, yet all powerful for the removal of disease, whether chronic or recent, infectious or otherwise; and what makes them particularly adapted to this country, is that there is not the slightest liability to cold when taking them, indeed the system is absolutely less susceptible of cold when under their influence, than at any other time—therefore in this climate they are invaluable. Neither do they require change of diet or care of any kind. In England these Pills have been the only medicine of many families for periods varying from forty to sixty years, and have always proved effectual in restoring health whenever an aberration from it has occurred.

In many cases where the dreadful ravages of ulceration had laid bare ligaments and bone, and where to all appearance no human means could save life, have patients by the use of these pills been restored to good health, the devouring disease having been perfectly eradicated.

In consequence of the pleasantness of their operation, and the dose not generally being required to be more than four or five pills (except in severe cases) in view the drain upon the humors, they are fast superseding every other preparation of professed similar virtue. Cases may occur where it will be proper to take twenty or even thirty or more pills; this must be considered with reference to highly inflammatory disease, or when great pain is experienced.

As Brandreth's Pills prevent Scurvy, Coxitis, and its consequences, scurvy, and all travellers in foreign regions, should not be without them, in order to resort to on every occasion of illness.

N. B. Time or climate affects them not. Southern Gentlemen will find this medicine one which will ensure health to the people of their estates.

CANCERS. Several cases of cure can be referred to, the cure is sure if perseverance is used.

CONSUMPTION. Reference can be made to numbers who have been cured in New-York and Brooklyn, of this disease.

VERIFICATION. Dr. Brandreth has been assailed by the proprietors of other medicines as a dangerous quack, because he is said to recommend his medicine in large quantities, and that no good medicine is so required.

The fact is, that any medicine having Mercury, Arsenic, Antimony, or Hemitalk in it could not be taken in large doses, because if it were, such medicines would destroy life at once. He does not say the medicines to which he alludes have these ingredients in them, but it is evident, from their directions, that great care is required in the taking of them. Now, Brandreth's Vegetable Universal Pills can be taken at all times, in large or small doses, according to urgency of symptoms.

Such is the reputation, and so great the demand for the Genuine Brandreth's Vegetable Universal Pills, that a counterfeit article is made, advertised and sold as genuine—and some individuals who sell the counterfeit pills, have advertised themselves as my agents—that I have found it necessary, to preserve the reputation of my pills, and save the public from imposition, to furnish every agent with a certificate, which is as follows:

"Brandreth's Vegetable Universal Pills".
SECURITY AGAINST COUNTERFEITS.
The within named, FAIR & PARMER of Middlebury, Conn. are my appointed General Agents for the State of Vermont, Connecticut (except Fairfield Co.) Hampshire, Hampshire & Franklin Counties, Mass.; Caledonia & Sullivan Counties, N. H.—

In the United States of America.
And this letter, which is signed by me, B. BRANDRETH, in my own hand writing, must also be signed by the within named General Agent, whose name will also appear in the principal papers in the United States. This caution has become absolutely necessary, to guard the public against the numerous counterfeits which are out of the above popular medicine.

B. BRANDRETH, M. D.
