

FROM THE PROVIDENCE JOURNAL.

CHURCH BY HIS OWN PASTOR.— day develops some new beauty of the archaic institution, "some new evidence of its origin and its scriptural basis. The following paragraph, which has appeared in the Tennessee Quaker and has been copied with much attention in other papers, suggests how early it is adapted to the relation of man and people, and what convenience, and harmony would follow if every school of property, or minister as well as pulpit that he preaches in.

SLAVE PASTOR FOR WHITE PEOPLE.— On Cook, Giles county, Tennessee, there is a small church, composed of "prosperous" members, several years past, have had their regular services, but as the pastor, George, known as Bentley's Old George, belonging to the estate of one Matthew Bentley, a free man, and a good preacher. Some time ago a white preacher, having four days, which the white man is said to have come of the "second best." The church is owned by George, and he is, with a few others, the pastor of the church. George is in charge of a congregation of colored men as slaveholders, who pay him a salary of $700 for his services.

THE REV. GEORGE, in the morning, never a matter to quarrel about; there could be no quarrel when all the attention is on the one subject, and the other. Should the minister be a heretic in the morning, or speak unbecomingly, the deacon, who would be the minister, would take him behind the pulpit, between services, and give him ten or twenty rods, according to the enormity of the sin.
