The Bank of Faith.

BY THE REV. JOHN TODD, D. D.

When a merchant wants to draw money from the bank, he knows he must first put in as much as he draws out. The bank does not aid him, however much he may need, beyond what has been put in. But there is one bank from which we may draw, though we have put nothing in it. I call it the Bank of Faith; and I will explain just what I mean.

Some years ago, an old man died, and at his funeral a great multitude were gathered, some to weep, some to look at his face once more, some to tell of his great skill as a physician, and all to speak a kind word about him. More than five thousand blind people, mostly poor people—had been restored to sight by his skill and care! He lived and died a poor man, for he lived only to do good.

When a young man, he used to go to God in prayer for direction, for guidance, and for aid. At the time when he made up his mind that he must study and go to the University, in order to prepare himself to be useful, he knew not where to go, or how to get the money to pay the expenses. So he went to God. A friend asked him where he intended to go.— He replied, 'I don't know.' 'O!' said she, 'our neighbor, Mr. T., is going to Strasburg; go with him!' A few minutes later, and Mr T., entered the room, and was greatly pleased to have young Stilling—for that was his name, go with him. 'I wonder,' said Stilling, 'from what quarter my Heavenly Father will provide me with money?'

Forty-six dollars was all he could raise. Meeting with unexpected delays, when he got to Frankford, still three days from Strasburg, he had but a single dollar left. He said nothing to any one, but went to his Bank of Faith, i. e., he went to God in prayer. He then went out to walk the streets, praying as he walked. Soon he met a merchant from the place of his own residence.

'Why, Stilling, what brought you here?'

'I am going to Strasburg to study medicine.'

'Where do you get your money to study with?'

'I have a rich Father in heaven.'

'How much money have on hand?'

'One dollar, sir.'

'So! Well, I am one of your Father's stewards,' and handed him thirty-three dollars. With tears in his eyes, Stilling says,

'I am now rich enough; I want no more.'

A while after, his thirty-three dollars were again reduced to one. Again he laid his case before his Father in earnest prayer. One morning, his room-mate, Mr. T., said to him,

'Stilling, I believe you did not bring much money with you? and offered him thirty dollars in gold, which he thankfully accepted as the answer to his prayers for aid.

Some months after this, the time arrived when he must pay the lecturer's fee, or have his name struck off from the list of students. The money must be paid by six o'clock Thursday evening. Thursday morning came, and the poor fellow had no money, and knew not where to get it. He spent the whole day in his closet in prayer. Five o'clock came, and no money. His faith began to fail. He walked the room in a perspiration, and with weeping. Some one knocked. 'Come in,' it was the gentleman of whom he had rented the room, almost an entire stranger.

'I call to see how you like your room?'

'Thank you, sir; I like it very much.'

'I thought I would ask you one other question. Have you brought any money with you?'

Stilling says he felt like the prophet, when the angel took him by the hair of the head, and carried him to Babylon! He thought it a dream.

'No, sir; I have no money.'

The gentleman looked at him with surprise and at length said,

'I see how it is; God has sent me to help you.' He left the room, and returned at once with forty dollars in gold. Stilling says he then felt like Daniel in the lion's den, when the angel came to help him. To the end of his long and most useful life, he always drew on the Bank of Faith, and it never failed him!

THE VOICES OF HEAVEN.—The land of silence surely extends no further than to the gates of the heavenly city. All is life and activity within; but from that world, so populous with thoughts and words, and songs, no revelation penetrates through the dark, silent land, which lies between us and them. Our friends are there. Stars so distant from us that their light which began its travel ages since, has not reached us, are none the less worlds, performing their revolutions, and occupied by their population of intelligent spirits, whose history is full of wonders. Yet the first ray denoting the existence of those worlds has never met the eye of the astronomer in his incessant vigils.

The silence of the departed will, for each soon, very soon, be interrupted. Entering among breaking shadows and softly unfolding light the border land, we shall gradually awake to the opening vision of things unseen and eternal, all so kindly revealing themselves to our unaccustomed senses as to make us say 'How beautiful!' and instead of exciting fear, leading us almost to hasten the land which is removing the veil. Some well known voice so long silent, may be first to utter our name; we are recognized we are safe. A face—a dear, dear face—breaks forth amidst the crowded lines of the dissolving sight; a form—an embrace assures us that faith has not deceived us, but has delivered us up to the objects hoped for, the things not seen. O, beatific moment! awaiting every follower of them who, by faith and patience, inherit the promises, dwellers there, 'whither the Forerunner is for us entered.'—Family Treasury.

HEAR HEAR!—In the well known letter of John Jay, written from Spain in 1780, he writes: "Till America comes into this measure (the abolition of Slavery,) her prayers to Heaven will be impious. This is a strong expression, but it is just, I believe that God governs the world; and I believe it to be a maxim in his, as in our courts, that he who asks for justice must do it."

Is it not madness for the administration or government to try to stave off the anti-slavery question, as not being involved nor to be settled in the present war? Shall the impiety of our prayers continue longer to bring down the just judgments of the court of heaven upon us? Let us do justice and then ask for it.—American Baptist.

A THOUGHT FOR THE RICH.—The following paragraph, for an English paper, may possibly have some application to the rich Christians of this country:

'What an awful thing it is to die rich!—Imagine the Master auditing the account of a servant who has left behind a million. If that poor wretch who had but one talent was cast into outer darkness because he laid it up instead of using it in his Master's service, what will be the doom of those who, with their half-millions and millions (while giving it may be a few thousands for decency's sake) have year after year, hoarded up countless treasures which they could never use?'

Think of the poor saints pinched with cold and hunger! Think of the Redeemer's cause languishing for the want of that filthy lucre which they hold with close-fisted selfishness! Yet listen to their talk! 'I am but a steward,' 'I am not my own.' 'Every believer in Jesus is my brother or sister.'—What a mockery! Will not this be the Master's language to many a professor: 'Out of thine own mouth will I condemn thee?'

The above remarks are equally applicable to many persons who do not possess such gigantic fortunes.

An Unchilled Faith.

'Mr. Irvine seems to be getting old,' said Mr. Mason, 'his head is much whiter than it was when he was here last year.'

'His heart is not growing old,' replied Mr. Chambers, 'he seems more susceptible of feeling than ever. He has the affectionateness of a child. Most persons at his age have learned to distrust men, and have little or no sympathy with enterprises which were unknown when they were young. It is not so with Mr. Irvine. He forms new attachments, and gives his confidence as readily as he did in early life.'

'Has it not always been somewhat easy to impose upon him? Has he not always been inclined to put too much confidence in men?'

'He has acted on the principle that it is better to be deceived than never to trust. He has trusted men greatly, and has done a great deal towards rendering them trustworthy.— He has been deceived, no doubt, but when his confidence in man has failed him, he says it has only driven him to exercise a firmer confidence in God; so that his disappointments have
