BRIEF LOCALS.

Hemlock Green has a letter in this issue worth reading.

A pension has been granted to a child of George C. Weston, Groton.

Loami B. Flint had another attack of his old trouble yesterday and is very sick.

The fair ground fence is being repaired in section which blew down in the recent storm.

Mrs. L. V. Knapp has been engaged as organist at the Baptist church on Railroad street.

Leon Lazzotte has sold his house and lot on Hastings street to Frederick Gosselin, the blind pensioner, for $1300.

There will be an entertainment at the vestry of the church of the Messiah Saturday evening. Cake and ice cream will be served.

The Memorial day music committee have engaged both the Sherbrooke and the Danville bands to assist in the exercises here.

Landlord Flint of the Cottage hotel is putting in a large bay window in the up-stairs parlor and otherwise improving his house.

Col. and Mrs. T. C. Fletcher are in Boston this week. From thence Col. Fletcher goes to Minneapolis to visit his brother, Fayette Fletcher.

Principal C. E. Putney will give a plain talk on private subjects at the men's meeting in Association hall Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

Hiram C. Cutting has bought a building lot of Horace Carpenter on Cliff street next to the Porter house and will put up a house on the same the present season.

The remains of L. M. Kent, who died at Lyndon in February, were taken from the tomb and buried with Grand Army honors by Post Chamberlain Saturday afternoon.

Dr. G. B. Bullard protests against the published statement that Arbor day was not observed hereabouts inasmuch as he "set out" 14 trees on his plantation, all of which are doing well.

The Boston & Maine people anticipate an unusually heavy White Mountain and "summer" business over all the branches of the road in this section of the country during the coming season.

The Feed-Water Heater company received an order for another heater from the Conn. River R. Co. yesterday, making seven heaters in use on that road, some of them for over three years. Edwin C. Potter of Lyndonville is travelling agent for the company.

Something new in the way of an entertainment is promised at the Methodist church this evening when an arbutus festival will be given under the management of the young men. Supper will be served. The purpose is to secure funds for the purchase of an organ for the church.

The case of H. R. White of St. Johnsbury, arrested for obtaining a pension under false pretenses, which was to have been heard at the May term of U. S. court at Windsor, Tuesday, was postponed until the October term, at Mr. White's request based on an affidavit of feeble health from his physician.

What is known in the Presbyterian church as a meeting of the congregation to moderate a call for a pastor will be held here next week. An informal expression of the church taken last week was almost unanimously in favor of extending a call to Rev. S. J. Crowe, who has preached a number of times for this people with great acceptance.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Charles H. Horton is on a business trip to New York.

Alvah Harvey and James Ritchie, Jr. are in Boston this week.

Miss Kate Trainor, who has been absent some time in New York visiting her sister, has returned.

O. S. Adams of Summerville went to California last week to look after investments that he has in that section.

Charles Wise, one of the St. Johnsbury boys in Chicago, is here for a short vacation. He returns to the West in June.

Robert Harlow and his wife returned from Pasadena, Cal., Sunday morning. He stood the journey well but is not in as good health as could be desired.

William Carpenter, wife and son, are here from Pasadena for a short stay. Mr. Carpenter is engaged in the jewelry business in Pasadena and is doing well.

Col. Alexander G. Hawes, of San Francisco, was elected commander of the military order of the Loyal Legion of California at its annual meeting May 8.

Ora P. Patten, manager of the Fairbanks warehouse at Montreal, and Charles C. Miller of the New York scale house, have been in town this week.

Ludwig Block of Buda-Pesth, Hungary, is in town on a business trip. Mr. Block is a Russian and at the head of the Fairbanks scale office in the Hungarian capital.

Secretary C. L. Page takes his annual vacation earlier in the season than usual this year. He goes with his family to Concord, N. H., this week and will be absent about four weeks.

The name of William Andrew Chaplin of St. Johnsbury appears in the list of members of the fourth class in the recently issued annual catalogue of the Boston "School of Expression."

E. E. Sargent of St. Johnsbury was elected a member of the state democratic committee at the convention last week. Mr. Sargent also presented the name of Alexander Cochrane of Ryegate as a delegate from the second district.

George D. Rand and wife, of Boston, well known here, who sailed for England on the steamship Catalonia, had an experience just before reaching Queenstown, which no one would believe. The ship ran aground and was injured somewhat, but by keeping the pumps at work she reached the harbor in safety. The shock startled the passengers, but there was no panic.

John H. Hutchinson of Portsmouth, N. H., spent the Sabbath in town. His son, a student in Dartmouth college, accompanied him. Mr. Hutchinson is a native of this town and began his business life here, but for many years he has had a watch and jewelry store in Portsmouth. He also has extensive greenhouses there and supplies all that section with flowers. In both of these branches of business Mr. Hutchinson has been very successful.

The Chicago Inland Architect contains the following interesting local: "The Henry Dibble company of Chicago, a concern that has held for years a leading position among the designers and dealers in mantels and grates, have made important changes in its officers and directors. The president is Chas. H. Morse. The vice president and general manager is Anson S. Hopkins, who, through his long connection with the house, has acquired an almost national acquaintance among architects and owners, and is universally popular as a business man and for his artistic knowledge. The secretary and treasurer is J. G. Sanborn." Mr. Morse is an old St. Johnsbury boy, and has been for many years at the head of the Fairbanks warehouse in that city; Mr. Hopkins was for some years in Fairbanks office here, and J. G. Sanborn is a Lyndon boy and a brother of Joel Sanborn of that place.

Accidents.

William Nourse met with a shocking accident at the scale works Saturday that very nearly cost him his life. While engaged in shifting a belt his frock caught in the cogs at his right shoulder. Before the machine could be stopped the cogs had caught into his neck, making a ghastly wound that tore open one half of the circumference of his neck, tearing into the large muscle and giving the appearance of an attempt to cut the throat with a dull butcher knife. Mr. Nourse refused to go home until his wounds had been dressed, and bore the ride from the scale works to Dr. Brown's and the painful operation heroically. He is about 30 years of age and married. If nothing unforeseen intervenes he will come out all right.

Fred Carr, foreman of the saw shop at the scale works, sawed off the ends of two fingers on his right hand last week, accomplishing the feat in some way that he cannot explain.

A Meeting of Veterans.

That was a peculiarly interesting gathering at the office of the pension examiners yesterday when three veterans of Co. A, 11th Vermont regiment, met for the first time since their discharge 23 years or so ago. Their names were Alexander Lucia of Newark, Charles W. Badger of Irasburgh and Frank C. Grant of Whitefield, N. H., the latter was for 152 days in Andersonville prison. Members of the same regiment and of the same company, it was a singular fact that neither of these three should have met since the war, and that this meeting should be wholly accidental.

Mr. Matthews was for some years a partner with Geo. H. Cross in the St. Johnsbury bakery and is a brother of Mrs. Cross.

A Vital Local Question.

The question of water supply for this village has been revived of late from an unexpected cause. With the spring freshet the wheel pit at the pump house filled up with sand, stopping the wheels, and the high water made it impossible to get into the pit to clear out the sand. This embargo was only removed with the fall of the river. A week ago the heavy shower again filled the pit with sand and for a week the wheels have been completely clogged and dead. Meanwhile the domestic service of the village has been supplied by the Fairbanks company from the pond on Crow hill. This new phase of the water question has put the people to thinking as never before. Some who have to do with its service and know more about the ins and outs, the care, perplexity and expense of the system, are free to express the opinion that the village will never satisfactorily solve the problem until it draws from a natural reservoir with a pipe large enough to ensure fire pressure as well as domestic service.

P. S.—The pump has been started and "Richard is himself again."

Sunday School Concert.

The Sunday school concert at the South church Sunday evening was national in its character and of more than ordinary interest. The exercises began with the reading of a poem on America by a young Miss. Soon appeared four lads with banners marked respectively, "Emigrant," "Mormon," "Anarchists" and "Whisky." After each of the lads had recited the purpose of their coming to America, and while the young reader was striving to solve the problem as to what should be done with these varying elements, a quartette of girls appeared with a banner marked "Jesus," and after giving the boys good counsel each was presented with a Bible, the means by which the country may be saved. There were other features of the exercises of equal interest, the whole being arranged by the pastor of the church assisted by some of his parishioners.

The Sunday school concert at the North church was noteworthy, songs and recitations being suggested by the spring season. An interesting feature of the service was a paper read by the Superintendent, Franklin Fairbanks, on Florida, giving a brief sketch of its discovery and a more extended account of the flora of the country, together with items of interest concerning pleasant acquaintances in the land of flowers, and incidents of his recent sojourn there.

Effects of Coal Gas.

W. S. Streeter and his family had a narrow escape from complete asphyxiation by coal gas Sunday morning. Because of some defect in the furnace the house was filled with gas. About 5 o'clock Sunday morning Mr. Streeter was awakened by the crying of his youngest child. Getting up to look after it he fell to the floor at once in a faint. Mrs. Streeter was awakened by the noise when she, too, fell to the floor. Mr. Streeter finally revived enough to get to the window and let in fresh air, but it was some time before the family got over the effects of the gas. Had not the child awakened the family the result might have been fatal.

High Water.

A severe thunder storm Thursday evening followed by rainfalls at intervals during the week has resulted in raising the streams in this vicinity to high water marks. The west wing wall of the Paddock village bridge over the Passumpsic was washed out and cannot be repaired until the water is lower. It does not interfere with travel. On the Danville road above Fairbanks village there was a land slide that carried away a considerable stretch of fence and partly filled up the road. No other damage in this immediate vicinity is reported. As will be seen by the reports from other towns in the county, serious damage was done elsewhere. The loss at McIndoes will reach $10,000, and other towns suffered similar losses.

The Sugar Crop.

I. H. McClary of Albany, who probably buys more maple sugar than any man in this section, is authority for the statement that the sugar crop of this season is fully one-third larger in his territory than last year. Mr. McClary ships all his sugar in barrels and tubs by the carload to Chicago and covers all Northern Vermont. He says he can buy plenty of sugar at 64 to 8 cents a pound though he finds a few farmers that are holding their produce at 9 cents hoping for a rise in the fall.

He Saved the Baby.

Here is an interesting story from the Plattsburgh, N. Y., Telegram of May 3. Allen S. Matthews, of Fort Covington, performed a heroic deed at Rouse's Point yesterday, and thereby saved a life. He, with a number of other passengers, were waiting for the D. & H. train south, when they were horrified to see a little child crawl out of a window on the sharply slanting roof of the piazza around Contore's hotel. With rare presence of mind Mr. Matthews dashed into the house and out upon the roof and seized the little toddler just as she verged. Another step and the little one would have been dashed to pieces on the pavement below. A cheer went up from the assembled throng when they saw what Mr. Matthews had done. The parents of that child owe a deep debt of gratitude to Mr. Matthews.

Mr. Matthews was for some years a partner with Geo. H. Cross in the St. Johnsbury bakery and is a brother of Mrs. Cross.

RECENT DEATHS.

POISON.—Rev. Eliza Folsom, for many years a member of the Vermont conference, died in Burlington Wednesday afternoon at the age of 50. The cause of his death was blood poisoning, the result of over work. He had been in the hospital at Burlington, which he left in February, and it was thought he was getting well. Mr. Folsom was a native of Williamstown. He had held charges in East Burke, Barton Landing, Island Pond and Newport in this part of the state. His last charge was at Fairfax. He was an earnest worker in the temperance cause, being a prominent member of the order of Good Templars and for some years the worthy grand templar of the state organization. He was a man of singular purity of life and character, and was held in high esteem by many friends in the state. His wife survives him, and also three children, Mrs. O. C. Amidon and Frank E. Folsom of St. Johnsbury and Henry G. Folsom of St. Albans.

Impressive funeral services were held at the Methodist church in this place Sunday afternoon. Rev. Mr. Culver, presiding elder of the St. Albans district, delivered the funeral sermon from Rom. 4, 17, "If so be that we suffer with him." The sermon was a thoughtful presentation of many lessons drawn from Christian suffering. A touching tribute was paid to the memory of the deceased, who, through all his life ever championed the cause of the down trodden and the oppressed. For three years his patient suffering has been a marvel to his friends, and he persisted in working until compelled to take his bed. Rev. Mr. Cushing of East Burke testified to the great good Mr. Folsom had done; he was a searching preacher. Rev. J. E. Farrow and Rev. Mr. Reynolds also assisted in the service.

BRAINERD.—Ira Brainerd died at the residence of his son George Brainerd in this place Saturday morning. Had he lived until next month he would have been 85 years old. He has been failing for some weeks and his death was expected.

Ira Brainerd was born in Danville, June, 1803, where nearly his whole life was spent. For many years he was one of the most prominent business men of Danville in the days when that town was not only the business centre of this county but of northeastern Vermont. As a member of the firm of Vail, Brainerd & Co. he was engaged in general merchandise business; at the same time he was a large buyer and shipper of produce, established and managed a starch factory and also a tannery, and had interests in woolen and other factories. Bringing to these enterprises a remarkable degree of energy and business sagacity his efforts were almost uniformly rewarded with success. He was one of the organizers and for many years president of the Caledonia bank at Danville, and more than any other man in the county, perhaps, especially in the later years of his life, was entrusted with the business of settling estates, evidence in itself of the degree of confidence that was reposed in him by those who knew him best. About 25 years ago he retired from active business life and about 12 years ago removed to Newbury, where he has lived quietly until a year ago when he came to St. Johnsbury and since made his home with his son. During all these years he has been a devoted and prominent member of the Methodist church, and his life has been always consistent with his Christian profession. A positive, aggressive man he was in politics first a whig and from his organization to the time of his death, a member of the republican party, though he always refused to accept office or political positions of any sort.

Mr. Brainerd was thrice married, first to Miss Martha Page of Danville; to whom was born a son, George Brainerd, at this place and Mr. Brainerd's only child. His second wife was Eunice Deming, widow of Benjamin Deming. His third wife was Mrs. Samuel Choate, widow of Samuel Choate of Danville, who survives him. Two brothers also survive him, Asa, aged 87, a Congregational minister in the West, and Hiram, aged 74, a citizen of Danville.

LINDSEY.—Peter Lindsey, Esq., died at his home in Barret on Wednesday morning, May 16, of heart disease. Mr. Lindsey was about 70 years old and an upright, honest and highly esteemed citizen. He was a native of Barret and had always lived there, occupying for many years the meadow farm three miles below Passumpsic, near the East Barret station. He had been prominent in town affairs for many years, holding the office of selectman at different times, and was overseer of the poor until the last year. In politics, a democrat, he had never held any political office, but had been candidate for town representative. He was a regular attendant at the Presbyterian church. Early in life he was slowly failing for some time. He leaves a widow and three sons. One of the sons, William, is married and lives on a farm in Barret. The other two sons are in California. He was a man who will be much missed.

C. R. Bartlett, one of the wealthiest farmers in Coventry, has been sued by H. E. Banister for defamation of character, as alleged in saying that Banister set fire to T. A. Chase's store. The suit is for $10,000.

A NEW BIRD-VISITOR.

Mr. Editor.—Allow me to call the attention of your readers in this village to a new bird-visitor. The famous white throated sparrow, Zonotrichia albicollis, has appeared in our midst and is very free with his songs. The bird is a little larger than the chestnut crowned chipping sparrow, has two black stripes on the crown, separated by a median one of white, and with a white stripe over and behind the eyes. Throat pure white; breast and sides dark ash; back and wings rufous-brown streaked with black. Under parts nearly white. It is a charming bird to look at, being so finely marked and so so perfect a singer.

His song is as if blown from a piccolo flute and is sure to attract your attention. Pitching his tune on a high key, the first note is clear and brightly prolonged; the second is a fifth tone above the first, and of same length; the third drops a minor-third, and is of same length; the remainder of his song is on the same note, of number three but sung in triplets of three or four measures, the last two notes of the triplets given in half time of the first. I find it very difficult to describe the music of a bird with words. He will sometimes vary his notes, but not in this bird. In the White Mountains this note is very common, but wild and very shy, and is there called the Peabody-Bird, but for what reason I don't know. The words given to his song there are,

"All day whittling, whittling, whittling, whittling."

This is the first time I ever knew which is a river too full for its channel, and this has done not only during the day, but all night as well. I have driven out many a June evening, three or four miles to secluded woods to hear this bird sing. He spends his winters in the extreme south of the United States. I heard them singing this year at Aiken, S. C., on the 15th of April in large numbers. They were then passing North. They go as far north as the Lake of the Woods in Canada in summer, and breed from the N. E. states northward.

FRANKLIN FAIRBANKS.

Willie Johnson's Medal.

In an old house at Chelsea a silver shield-shaped medal, with the following inscription, "Willie Johnson, aged thirteen years, Company D, Third Vermont Regiment. Presented with a medal by Secretary Stanton for carrying this drum through the seven days' fight before Richmond, being the only drum carried through in the regiment, the last of June and last of July." The drum to which the medal was attached was found, and now waits the call of the owner or his friends at the office of the sergeant-at-arms at the Mass. state house.

The above is a current news item in the Boston papers. Willie Johnson was a St. Johnsbury boy, who enlisted with his father in the 3d Vermont regiment. At the close of the war he returned to St. Johnsbury, joined the band and figured prominently as one of its members during the season of 1867. He attracted considerable attention here and was invited about that time to see the young hero and his drum. What finally became of him and his present whereabouts can easily be ascertained as he has been in the navy and was for some time in the Charlestown, Mass., navy yard, a member of the band. His father was here last fall and spoke at a meeting of Post Chamberlain. Benedict, in his "Vermont in the Civil War" tells this story of the drummer boy:

When General Smith's division was paraded at Harrison's Landing, after the "change of base," it was found that but one drummer of the entire division had brought his drum with him through the seven days' retreat. This was a St. Johnsbury lad of 14 years, named Willie Johnson, who was the drummer of Co. D of the 3d Vermont. While many strong men threw away their arms and everything but the clothing on their persons, Willie clung to his drum and carried it through with him, and at Harrison's Landing he had the honor of drumming at dress parade. These facts were reported by General Smith to the war department, and several months later Willie was summoned to Washington and received from Secretary Stanton the star medal of honor for his fidelity and pluck.

New Business Industry.

Jason H. Barrett has bought of Jo Drouin two acres of land on Portland street in Summerville, and purposes building a bobbin shop thereon 30x40 and two stories high, to be run by steam. F. E. Dexter of Lisbon, N. H., will engage in the business with Mr. Barrett under the firm name of Barrett & Dexter. The building will be put up in August and a month or two later the factory will be in operation. L. D. Hazen will furnish the bobbin stock.

That Foot Bridge.

The selectmen met on Friday to consider the petition recently circulated to build a foot bridge over the Passumpsic river opposite the depot, connecting the little village on the east side of the river more directly with Railroad street and Eastern avenue. The land damage question naturally came up first for consideration. The Carrick Granite company, when approached on this point estimated the damage at the modest sum of $2500, which the scheme languishes, as the selectmen would not allow any such amount. The expense of the bridge would round up the whole bill to $3000 at least.

Alexander McLeod of Bellows Falls, a Scotchman, 44, fell down an embankment Friday night and was killed.

Fire damaged the wheel room and machine shop of the Vermont Novelty works at Springfield $2000 worth Saturday morning.

A Blake, a boy 14 years old, from Stratford, was killed instantly Friday forenoon while playing with some mill logs in Carr's saw-mill.

French Catholics of Vermont would make a pilgrimage to the shrine of St. Anne de Beaurup, near Quebec, about the middle of next month.

THE LATE PARMLY BILLINGS.

The death of Parmly Billings, eldest son of Frederick Billings of Woodstock, and a former graduate of St. Johnsbury academy, was mentioned last week. The circumstances of his death, as told by a correspondent of the Free Press, were these: Young Mr. Billings, after a fatiguing tour in the mining regions of Arizona, was on his way home and had reached Chicago, where he had planned to spend Sunday, expecting to start for New York on Monday. Attacked on Sunday by a severe chill, he called in medical aid and seemed for a time to be recovering, but soon began to sink rapidly under what proved to be acute Bright's disease, and died at midnight of Monday.

Funeral services were held at Woodstock on Saturday. After a brief private service in the library of the Billings mansion, the public service was held in the beautiful chapel attached to the Congregational church erected by Mr. Billings in memory of his father and mother. A short funeral address, made up of tender recollection and Christian sympathy, was delivered by President Seelye of Amherst, who said, in part:

I loved this young man, whose life has so suddenly ceased to shine upon us, and whose earthly tenement we are to take to the tomb. He won my affection the first moment I saw him. And he would himself around my heart more and more tenderly and closely the longer I knew him. And I feel that my place is one of silence here, with his dearest ones, while I lament and utter not a word.

Ardent, impetuous, with a wonderful intensity of life, irksome of restraint, and sometimes breaking out beyond all control, like a river too full for its channel, there burned in his soul a passion for great things. He was keen, he was courageous, he was resolute, he was self-reliant; he had great fertility of resources; he was able to plan largely and to execute efficiently. I do not think he was capable of meanness or anything sordid. He never deceived me. And I believe that he had in his soul a sentiment of uprightness and integrity.

While he was in college, he made a public profession of his faith in Jesus Christ. It was my blessed privilege to baptize him in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. It was a great step for him to take. But he took it of his own accord, so far as I ever knew. And I could not doubt then, and I do not doubt now, that he took the step sincerely. For he never was hypocritical, he never was pretentious; and though his wonderful exuberance of life gave us sometimes solicitude and sometimes pain, I never doubted that this act was a sincere expression of a sincere faith. It is a wonderful comfort to me in this solemn hour to remember these things. The prayers uttered by loving and bleeding hearts for his soul, and the guns, heard nor unanswered, though the answer has come in a different way from what we looked for. For God's ways are not our ways, neither are his thoughts our thoughts. If we could only see the fulness of the divine plan in respect to him, without whose knowledge not a sparrow falleth to the ground, and in whose eyes the hairs of our heads are numbered, we should find the fulness of its glory. If we could only look from that which is seen to that which is not seen, from the things which are temporal to the things which are eternal, we should find the fulness of its glory. If we could only look from that which is seen to that which is not seen, from the things which are temporal to the things which are eternal, we should find the fulness of its glory. If we could only look from that which is seen to that which is not seen, from the things which are temporal to the things which are eternal, we should find the fulness of its glory.

The Free Press correspondent concludes as follows:

The services at the cemetery were conducted by President Backham, who alluded to remarkable letter written by Parly to a dear friend four years ago, in which he had, in a tender and prophetic Sabbath evening mood, anticipated the present scene, foreseeing that Parly would die about 23 years away in this lovely spot, amid the soft green hills of Woodstock, the Quebec flowing gently at his feet. All this he foresaw and detailed apparently without any dread or recoil, so serenely, cheerfully, as though his faith foresaw as does ours, another spring day on which these kindred and those who shall hereafter be gathered to them, shall come forth from their graves and pass on to a still lovelier valley, to the green pastures and the still waters which await them when this corruptible state has put on incorruption, and this mortal state has put on immortality.

Parmly Billings was a youth of rare gifts and of great promise. He had just reached that period in a young man's life when, having tried his wings in the various uncertain flights of literature and thither, he settles down to steady, consecutive, patient duty, and begins the business of life in earnest. He was preparing in accordance with his father's wishes, to wind up the business at the West, and gradually take off from his father's hands some of his heavy business cares and responsibilities. The stroke which brings this bright career to a sudden end is a heavy one, which nothing but divine grace can lighten. That the grace may be bestowed, many sympathizing hearts will devoutly pray.

Academy Notes.

The senior class gave their last reception Friday evening in the academy hall. It was quite a departure from the ordinary interview, there being no "hot coffee" or reference to "sub juniors." All enjoyed a fine time. As it rained all day Saturday the ball nine did not get to Lyndon as expected. Mr. Putney kindly excused the boys to attend the show at the opera house Saturday evening.—The business manager of the Student has arranged to publish the class day exercises, including prophecies, oration, ode, etc., in a neat form, and copies may be obtained of him after the 22nd of June.
