A hearing was held in United States court at Brattleboro Nov. 24 before Judge H. H. Wheeler on the motion for a new trial in the case of S. D. Wilson vs. W. Clement, for alleged slander. Max Powell of Burlington presented an affidavit stating that Juror Hullett was in the Clement's behalf in that town during the campaign, the general belief being that Hullett was Clement's paid agent, and that he went about the state with his interests about the state of Vermont. Alexander Dunnet of St. Johnsbury, in behalf of the defendant, introduced the affidavit of Mr. Clement that he had only the casual acquaintance of Juror Hullett, and never employed him or paid him money in any capacity; that he knew Markham, but that under the new management of the Rutland railroad he had nothing to do with the employees, and was director merely by courtesy. Mr. Dunnet said if the plaintiff's counsel had evidence at Rutland that the jurors were disqualified it was their business to move to have the jury dismissed. Mr. Powell said the information came into his hands by letter, that they brought the matter to the attention of Judge Wheeler, but did not think they should ask to have the case continued while they looked up evidence. The decision was reserved.

Montpelier is to try the unique plan of investing in its own city bonds. The city council has invested $15,000 now in the sinking fund of the water department in city bonds, which will be taken up Dec. 1. At the last March meeting the city voted the surplus income of the water department for a period of five years toward reducing the indebtedness of the city. The sinking fund, which amounts to about $20,000, is drawing only 2 percent in the bank, while the city is paying 4 percent interest on its bonds, and under the new arrangement the city purchases its own indebtedness with income from the water department. If the income of the water department should continue at the present figure, in a few years, it is said, the surplus income will entirely wipe out the indebtedness of the city.
