

At This Season of the Year

the wise farmer is getting his buildings in shape for winter--many of them need new roofs--or possibly he is building additions, sheds or poultry houses. Here is where Colonial Roofing comes in and we also have a few odd lots of roofing, soiled covers, etc., to close out at less than regular prices.

STANNARD

(F. K. Bartlett, Correspondent.) Harold and Hazen Brown are at home for a few days enjoying the open deer hunting season. School at Lower Stannard closed last week for a two weeks vacation. It was taught by Mrs. Nellie Caswell and all hope that her mother's health will improve so she may return for the remainder of the year. Mrs. Z. Garfield has packed her household goods and is visiting friends before leaving for the hospital for medical treatment. Mr. and Mrs. Way of Hardwick have moved into Mrs. Garfield's house.

DODGE BROTHERS ROADSTER

It has enjoyed an extraordinary demand because it embodies those qualities which make a roadster desirable.

You look for lightness—and the weight of this car is only 2150 pounds.

You look for strength—and a glance shows you how substantial it is.

You want seats so wide and deep that two passengers can lounge in perfect comfort—and you have them.

You expect grace and beauty—and you will search in vain for a line or a curve that is not beautiful.

You want plenty of storage space—and you find room under the rear deck for all the luggage two would wish to carry.

In ten months more than thirty million dollars worth of Dodge Brothers Motor Cars have been bought by the American people.

The motor is 30-35 horsepower

The price of the Touring Car or Roadster, complete, is $785 (f. o. b. Detroit)

The price of the Winter Touring Car or Roadster, complete, including regular mohair top, is $950 (f. o. b. Detroit)

SEN. WEEKS POLICIES

Outlines What He Would Do If President.

Senator Weeks of Massachusetts, one of the men most frequently and favorably mentioned for the Republican nomination for President, was asked by Leslie's to outline his program for the restoration of prosperity. He said: "I am confident that if it were not for the European war we would be in a state of great industrial depression, and that when that war ends we shall be flooded with goods made by labor which will be cheaper than ever before, and that great numbers of European laborers will come to this country on account of the low wages, the distress, and heavy taxes which will then prevail in Europe. Therefore, it seems to me that there is no other course for us to take than to levy a much higher tariff than the one which now prevails; in fact, in some respects it may be necessary to make it higher than the rates provided in the Payne-Aldrich bill. The present tariff has completely demonstrated its incapacity as a revenue producer, and it is not in any sense a protective measure. The lessons of the European war have, in my judgment, completely demonstrated the necessity for a protective tariff. Germany has been living under a protective tariff, which has developed its resources so that it has been able to live within itself without, apparently, suffering greatly on account of its isolated position. To take one instance, we can see illustrated how necessary it is for a country to be able to produce all the articles which it needs. We have never maintained a duty on dye-stuffs, and it is common knowledge that our manufacturers have greatly suffered since the beginning of the war on account of the supply which we have received from Germany being restricted, and in some cases, cut off. We should, therefore, put a high duty on the production of dye-stuffs retaining it until we are able to compete with foreign competitors and, if necessary, to produce our own supplies. This war has also completely demonstrated the necessity of our building up and maintaining a merchant marine, sufficient to carry our own products. If England, which is the great ocean carrier, had not been able to control the seas, we would have been in a position of having enormous products ready for market, a market ready to receive them in Europe, and yet, no means of transportation. Fortunately for us, the English have control of the seas so that we have been able to take advantage of the prevailing conditions and have benefited greatly thereby; but that will be no excuse for a failure to provide our own transportation facilities for future use. We should modify the spirit and temper of those policies which relate to the control of government over business. Conditions had developed in this country which seemed unwise, and we have attempted to correct them by legislating against their result, instead of against the conditions themselves. In doing so, we have imposed restrictions and a policy of coercion which, I think, has produced in many cases unfortunate results. What we should do if we are to continue legislation of that character is to legislate to control specific actions so that business would know what it could do and what it could not do without its being necessary to depend on the whim or the dictum of bureau officers; in other words, if there are things which are wrong, they should be so clearly indicated in the law that they can be readily understood by every business man and then, if a law is violated the breaker could be severely punished. Instead of doing this, the kind of legislation which we have adopted has tended to place all business under restraint, greatly hampering our people in their competition with their commercial rivals."

Boys Judged Cattle.

An interesting sight last Wednesday was the boys from the Vall Agricultural School judging the cattle in the herd of pure bred Herefords of A. J. Higgins, president of the New England Hereford Breeders Association. About 25 boys came down on the afternoon train from Lyndonville under the direction of Prof. Dodge and went directly to Mr. Higgins' farm where there is one of the largest and best herds of pure bred Herefords to be found in New England. The animals were brought out by classes, as aged cows, three year olds, etc., and the different individuals graded according to the boys' judgment. Several of the boys showed a very keen interest in the work and their decisions created much interest and some amusement to Mr. Higgins who knew the whole history of the animals. So interested were the boys that some stayed after the judging was finished to quiz Mr. Higgins as to his methods and results in developing such a valuable herd.

For Scenic Highway.

B. M. Hayward has completed the laying out of a highway from Jeffersonville through Smuggler's Notch to Stowe. The general contour of the highway was mapped but the fills and cuts were not put in.

In speaking of the profiles through the notch Mr. Hayward says that there are none in the White Mountains that equal those in the notch excepting the Old Man of the Mountain, while in the Notch is the elephant's head which is very good. The man and the woman and several animals, as well as some other profiles, are exceptionally clear. He expects the elephant's head with its trunk will take a fall some day. Sterling lake attracted his attention a good deal and called to his mind the Crater lake in Oregon, which also has no visible means of replenishing its water being on an elevation to which there are no water sheds. The approach from the Jeffersonville side of the notch will be with an eight per cent grade while the Stowe side will be a little steeper.

NEWARK

(Porter Wallace, Correspondent.) The Grange will hold their election of officers, Friday, Nov. 19, at 10:30. A baked bean dinner will be served. Mr. and Mrs. Chester Bean and family spent Sunday in Wheelock. The Grange sale held last Friday night was a success, over $19 being cleared.

Mrs. Fred Eggleston returned to her home in Dixville Sunday after spending four weeks with her daughter Mrs. Port W. White.

Edgar and Chase Damon are spending their vacation at Island Pond. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bruce, Mr. and Mrs. George Newman and Mrs. Tom La Pean and little son are camping at Ball Hill pond during the hunting season.

Arthur Williams of West Derby has purchased the Will Wade place and taken possession.

GOULD ATHLETIC COACH

Brings St. Johnsbury Academy Eleven Through Successful Season.

A special dispatch to the Hartford Courant says: "William Gould, Bristol's well known athlete, is now athletic director of St. Johnsbury Academy, St. Johnsbury, Vt. In his work he is meeting with unqualified success. The football season closed recently with a victory over Littleton Academy team by a score of 13 to 7. It was the first game won by St. Johnsbury from the Littleton eleven in a long period and there was great joy among the student body, Gould being paid full credit for his splendid work in getting the team whipped into shape. He introduced all the latest plays of the larger colleges, which were successfully pulled off. Great things are expected of next year's team as nine of the players on this year's team will be in the lineup. Basketball practice will start next week and Gould expects to have a first class team, as all of the players on last year's team will be in the lineup again. A league of seven teams has been formed and St. Johnsbury hopes to win the championship. In addition there will be class teams for the boys and girls and inter-class games will be played."

Cassius H. Read, for many years the proprietor of the Hoffman house, New York city, died Nov. 8. He was a native of Shelburne and at one time possessed a fortune estimated at $700,000. He was 83 years old at the time of his death and practically without resources.

By the will of the late Dr. M. R. Crain of Rutland his medical library and surgical instruments as well as $5000 go to the Rutland hospital for the support of a room, $1500 for an X-ray machine and $5000 to the Kurn Hattin home.

CURED BOY OF COUGH.

Nothing frightens a mother more than the loud, hoarse cough of croup. The labored breathing, strangling, choking and gasping for breath call for instant action. Mrs. P. Neureuter, Eau Claire, Wis., says: "Foley's Honey and Tar cured my boy of a serious attack of croup after other remedies had failed. I recommend it to every one as we know from our own experience that it is a wonderful remedy for cough, colds, croup and whooping cough." It clears all passages, soothes and heals. C. BINGHAM.

MILK FROM TESTED COWS

St. Johnsbury, Vt., Nov. 13, 1915.

This is to certify that I have on the 3-4 and 7-8 tuberculin tested 63 head of milk cows and young stock for Charles Harvey of Passumpsic and found them in my opinion to be free from contagious or infectious diseases. H. C. STETSON.

This is the only herd furnishing milk to St. Johnsbury that has been tuberculin tested. This milk costs no more than the other kind.
