An American Policy.

With a population of 100,000,000, the fourth nation of the world in area and possessing wealth $50,000,000,000 in excess of its nearest competitor, the United States stands today without a definite policy for its development at home or toward the defence of its citizens outside of its domains.

The American nation should establish a system of defence that will protect it from attack by any foreign power. Those assuming that the Golden Rule is the safest policy for us to adopt toward the rest of the world should remember that today there are nine nations of Europe with a total population over seven times as large as that of the United States at war.

The importance of the fish and game interests of the state of Vermont was very strongly portrayed by Commissioner Titcomb at the annual banquet of the Bennington County Forest, Fish and Game association held in Bennington last week.

Foreign trade should be developed by every legitimate means. To the south of us lie twenty republics that purchase immense quantities of foreign made goods and who sell to us more of their raw products than to all the other nations of the world.

furnish if they prepare themselves to do it.

To accomplish these desirable things the American citizen must be as thoroughly protected on the high seas and in foreign countries as at home.

The crying need of America today is a policy that will prepare the country to defend itself, to develop the largest possible industrial and commercial activity and to protect an American wherever his legitimate and honorable undertakings may lead him.

Electrical Possibilities.

The importance of the matter of water power in this country is shown by the statement of George Otis Smith, director of the United States Geological Survey, that the present installation of water power plants in the United States is estimated at 8,500,000 horse power, representing an investment of about one billion dollars, exclusive of transmission and distribution systems.

In Montana the development of hydro-electric power has been centralized and made so cheap that the people have put electric energy to every use on the ranch and in the home, while in the mine and smelters and on the railroads electricity is displacing steam.

Fish and Game Interests.

The importance of the fish and game interests of the state of Vermont was very strongly portrayed by Commissioner Titcomb at the annual banquet of the Bennington County Forest, Fish and Game association held in Bennington last week.

The Bennington County association is an organization whose influence has been felt in securing the progressive legislation which has made it possible to undertake the propagation of fish upon a larger scale than heretofore.

been felt in securing the progressive legislation which has made it possible to undertake the propagation of fish upon a larger scale than heretofore.

The freight embargo on freight to and from the West by the three leading railroads of New England shows that the activity of manufacturing munitions of war is not wholly beneficial.

For The National Convention.

Excellent progress has been made in the suggestion of men to serve as delegates to the National Republican convention. On the same day The Caledonian suggested the name of Theodore N. Vail, the News and Citizen suggested the name of C. H. Stearns of Johnson.

This would give a full state delegation but no candidates from the congressional districts have been suggested. There is plenty of time for that however.

The terrible riot in Youngstown, Ohio, Friday night, in which about $800,000 worth of property was destroyed, dynamite stolen and used in wrecking houses, a saloon raided and large quantities of liquor stolen and drunk by the rioters, is a terrible indictment of strikes and strikers.

The remains of Daniel N. Beckwith, a native of Sutton and former resident were brought from Somerville, Mass., to West Burke for burial where the burial took place Saturday afternoon.

Monroe N. Work, who has been engaged with the late Booker T. Washington in keeping a record of lynchings in the United States, reports a total of sixty-nine during the year 1915.

ates a decrease in that crime in the South, but some of the trivial causes named indicate that the spirit of lawlessness that inspires lynchings is increasing.

Closely following the marriage of the editor, Donald Tobin, comes the announcement that the Swanton Courier is entering upon the fortieth year of its existence, all of which indicates that paper has arrived at the years of vigorous and influential manhood.

The Springfield Reporter calls attention to the little town of Weston (a town by the way of 623 inhabitants) having six students attending secondary schools and two attending college.

Samuel S. McCall was inaugurated as governor of Massachusetts last week and in his inaugural address strongly advocated a redemption of the party pledges.

The Barre Times says:—"A pleasant winter sport in St. Johnsbury is that of burning mortgages—mere 'scraps of paper,' as it were."

SUTTON

Death of George W. Chesley, One of The Town's Large Farmers—

(H. A. Blake, Correspondent.) George W. Chesley died Wednesday, Jan. 5, and the funeral service was at his late home Saturday afternoon, the 8th, with burial at the cemetery near the Union House, where his father and mother and other relatives are buried.

The remains of Daniel N. Beckwith, a native of Sutton and former resident were brought from Somerville, Mass., to West Burke for burial where the burial took place Saturday afternoon.

There was a large attendance at the Grange meeting Saturday evening to witness the installation of the officers, the Worthy Master of the State Grange W. N. Cady of Middlebury being the installing officer.

The thermometer registered 20 below and at some places lower Sunday morning.
