The evening was passed in games, music, etc., and dancing was indulged in until a late hour. Refreshments of cake and coffee were served and Mr. and Mrs. Colburn were presented with a handsome lamp by their friends. All departed voting it a happy occasion.

Island Pond had a safe, sane and sensible Fourth of July, but signs of patriotism were apparent by the business blocks and many private dwellings being prettily decorated. Several picnics were in order while those anxious for antiques and horrors which are always the great attraction at almost every festive parade journeyed to other towns. In the small hours of the morning the younger element got into the firing line and for a short time made peaceful slumber next to impossible.

The quietest celebration that this town has experienced in years was that which took place Monday. Most of the stores were closed, and, aside from the blowing of horns, and a few noise-producing contrivances, with the usual amount of fire crackers, the day was as still as Sunday. There were no races, ball games, etc.,—in fact nothing to denote there was a national holiday on the calendar. There was a parade by the juvenile element in the middle of the day, which bespeaks much for the enterprise of the youngsters.

A. M. Stevens and Fred Paquette, proprietors of Brighton garage, have moved into the new garage located near Stewart House at the end of the viaduct. When completed, this building will be practically fireproof, with a basement 40x60, storage space for thirty cars. The main floor is used for work shop, offices and stock rooms carrying an up-to-date supply of accessories, greases and oils. Experienced workmen are employed, and the patronage of the public is respectfully solicited by the gentlemen.
