

BROOKVILLE

Friday Morning, May 8, 1868.

Union Republican Ticket.

For Congress, 4th District, GEO. W. JULIAN. For Common Pleas Judge, JNO. F. KIBBEY. For District Prosecutor, WM. H. JONES.

4th District Congressional Convention.

As will be seen by the proceedings of the Congressional District Convention held at Connersville on Thursday of last week...

Closing Argument on Impeachment.

Mr. Everts, counsel for the President, resumed his argument on Friday, speaking through the whole session.

Union Soldiers and Sailors.

A meeting of the Soldiers' National Executive Committee was held in Washington City on Saturday evening.

New Whisky Tax Law.

The new whisky-tax law is beginning to be felt. Owing to the fact that whisky is selling in New York at less than Government tax...

Alabama Election.

Bullock's majority for Governor, in Alabama, will exceed 7,000. The majority for the Constitution is 15,000.

Georgia Election.

A dispatch from Atlanta, Georgia, to the Congressional Executive Committee, says the Republicans of Georgia have ratified the Constitution by nine thousand majority...

Doubtful Victory.

Since the smoke of battle has cleared away, and the Democrats have taken a survey of the result of the Connecticut election...

Torn and Mutilated Currency.

The National Banks are directed to redeem all currency torn or worn out. It is not necessary for the holders to send it to the Assistant Treasurer...

Stigmatizing Himself.

The President is stigmatizing himself during the last days of his incumbency. His last exploit is the pardon of J. V. Kendall, convicted for conducting a distillery without license...

Reduction of National Debt.

It is reported that the public debt statement will show a reduction of $10,000,000.

State News Items.

P. J. Bright will not be the Democratic nominee for Congress in the Third District. Mr. Holman will probably be renominated.

The brick depot of the Louisville, New Albany & Chicago Railroad, at Bloomington, together with a large amount of valuable freight stored therein, was consumed by fire. Loss heavy.

At Yorgen's saw mill in Fort Wayne, Friday evening, Frederick Lydoff, in attempting to throw off the belt, was caught by the right arm and drawn around the shafting three times, with lightning rapidity, tearing his arm out of the socket in the shoulder, breaking several bones, and otherwise injuring him fatally.

Burglars beat in the safe of Coburn & Jones, of Indianapolis, Monday night, and obtained $50 for their trouble.

An unknown woman was killed near Plymouth, Monday night, she throwing herself in front of a passing train.

At Fort Wayne, there is what is called a "bull ring"—an organization of the butchers, who ask from the City Council the exclusive right to sell fresh meats to the citizens.

The School Tax Law.

The current number of the Indiana School Journal has this paragraph in reference to the school tax law passed by the last Legislature:

It will be borne in mind that at the last session of the Legislature a law was passed authorizing the levying of taxes in cities, towns and townships, for purposes of tuition in the public schools.

It is believed that suit would be brought against the constitutionality of this act. But greatly to the gratification and encouragement of the friends of public schools, no suit has as yet been brought.

Disgraceful Scene.

On Saturday there was a disgraceful scene of crimination and recrimination in the House, between Mr. Donnelly, of Minnesota, and Mr. Washburne, of Illinois occasioned by a letter written to Minnesota by Mr. Washburne, charging Mr. Donnelly with various heinous offenses.

Arkansas and South Carolina in Congress.

There was a meeting of the Committee on Reconstruction, Saturday, for the consideration of the new Constitutions of Arkansas and South Carolina, but it adjourned over, in consequence of the receipt of information from Mr. Stevens that he was too sick to attend.

The District Convention.

At the District Convention, held at Connersville, on Thursday, Hon. Geo. W. Julian was nominated at the first balloting, he having received the entire vote of all the counties. The proceedings were harmonious, and strong assurances given that the nominee would be triumphantly elected.

Soldiers' and Sailors' National Convention.

The Soldiers' and Sailors' National Convention at Washington City has issued a call, through an executive committee of soldiers in that and other cities, for a National Convention of the Soldiers and Sailors, to assemble at Chicago, Illinois, on May 19, 1868.

Impeachment.

The conviction of Andrew Johnson is second only in importance to the general welfare of the country—to the suppression of the rebellion. It is so regarded by the people. The result of the trial is therefore awaited with great anxiety.

Indiana Politics.

The Soldiers' and Sailors' National Convention at Washington City has issued a call, through an executive committee of soldiers in that and other cities, for a National Convention of the Soldiers and Sailors, to assemble at Chicago, Illinois, on May 19, 1868.

Impeachment.

The conviction of Andrew Johnson is second only in importance to the general welfare of the country—to the suppression of the rebellion. It is so regarded by the people.

FOURTH INDIANA DISTRICT CONVENTION.

Hon. Geo. W. Julian Nominated—A Harmonious Meeting.

Special Correspondence of the Cincinnati Gazette, CONNERSVILLE, April 30.

The first Congressional Convention of the campaign was held here to-day, and was largely attended by the intelligent Republicans of the Fourth District, every county being represented.

In the Senate of Saturday 25th instant, appears a card headed "The Grand Army of the Republic and General Kise." There is a good deal of General Kise in the card, but not very much of the G. A. R., as might be expected.

This statement we are disposed to accept as true, and is proven to be so by the simple statement itself. It will not be denied that "the people of the South" made war on the United States Government, and attempted to destroy it, and set up another antagonistic to it, the chief corner stone of which was to be human slavery.

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

the rule, so as to admit of extended debate, been disposed of. Under the rule, as it now stands, no Senator can speak more than once, and not over fifteen minutes.

Grand Army of the Republic and General Kise.

To the Editor of the Journal.

In the Senate of Saturday 25th instant, appears a card headed "The Grand Army of the Republic and General Kise." There is a good deal of General Kise in the card, but not very much of the G. A. R., as might be expected.

This statement we are disposed to accept as true, and is proven to be so by the simple statement itself. It will not be denied that "the people of the South" made war on the United States Government, and attempted to destroy it, and set up another antagonistic to it, the chief corner stone of which was to be human slavery.

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

For the American.

Reply to "Justice."

Mr. Editor.—I respectfully ask leave to correct a few erroneous statements made by your correspondent styling himself "Justice." I shall do so in a very brief manner and in a kindly spirit, holding it to be a principle of honor not to trample upon a fallen adversary, especially when he falls by his own hand.

Here is another most inexcusable neglect, or oversight—rebel soldiers left out entirely. But as the rebel Democracy did not, during the time required in "subjugating the people of the South," (in which the General confesses he was not engaged, although it is supposed he did not fail to draw his pay for such pretended services) manifest much appreciation of the gallant services of these prey fellows who did subjugate, etc., it is thought to be perfectly safe in setting the General down as objecting to any such one-sided arrangement as giving aid and comfort to them, and not to rebels.

This statement we are disposed to accept as true, and is proven to be so by the simple statement itself. It will not be denied that "the people of the South" made war on the United States Government, and attempted to destroy it, and set up another antagonistic to it, the chief corner stone of which was to be human slavery.

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

For the American.

Reply to "Justice."

Mr. Editor.—I respectfully ask leave to correct a few erroneous statements made by your correspondent styling himself "Justice." I shall do so in a very brief manner and in a kindly spirit, holding it to be a principle of honor not to trample upon a fallen adversary, especially when he falls by his own hand.

Here is another most inexcusable neglect, or oversight—rebel soldiers left out entirely. But as the rebel Democracy did not, during the time required in "subjugating the people of the South," (in which the General confesses he was not engaged, although it is supposed he did not fail to draw his pay for such pretended services) manifest much appreciation of the gallant services of these prey fellows who did subjugate, etc., it is thought to be perfectly safe in setting the General down as objecting to any such one-sided arrangement as giving aid and comfort to them, and not to rebels.

This statement we are disposed to accept as true, and is proven to be so by the simple statement itself. It will not be denied that "the people of the South" made war on the United States Government, and attempted to destroy it, and set up another antagonistic to it, the chief corner stone of which was to be human slavery.

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

It is well that this fugeous General of the Kentucky Democratic stripe has his habitation in Indiana, for if he lived over there he would not even have their pity for his miserable blunder of joining the G. A. R., and for his participation in "subjugating the people of the South."

and said, "Then I want a change of venue," set down with pen and paper, was drawing an affidavit to swear his case out of the County; then plaintiff said he would submit it to the Court. At that point he manifested pleasure. So it was not the plaintiff's ignorance that pleased him, but avoiding a jury. He dare not deny that.

Now I have no disposition to prolong this controversy, knowing that it is not pleasant to either editor or reader; but would respectfully request all who are anxious to know who misrepresented the facts, to enquire of the witnesses, or any person who was in Court and heard the evidence; and there is but one point in it—did the plaintiff prove that the railroad had used the canal banks by laying their track upon them? They admit every other point.

So far as your correspondent is concerned I have no other feeling toward him than that of pity. Poor fellow! he has sunk himself in the estimation of all who know the facts, in attempting to defend what he knows to be wrong and unjust. J. O. H.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS

Sweet Potato Sprouts.

This is a desirable preparation for family use, either for the table or for the nursery. It is a healthy and nutritious food, and is especially adapted for the young of the family. It is sold by the barrel and by the bushel. Price per bushel, $1.00. W. L. GARDNER, Proprietor, Brookville, Ind.

Executor's Notice.

NOTICE is hereby given, that the undersigned Executor of the last will of James R. Colcott deceased, said estate is solvent. R. P. C. BARWICK, Executor, May 8, 1868-3*

Executor's Sale of Real Estate.

NOTICE is hereby given, that the undersigned Executor of the last will of James R. Colcott deceased, said estate is solvent. R. P. C. BARWICK, Executor, May 8, 1868-3*

The St. Joseph's WOOLEN FACTORY

AT OLDENBURG, IND. HAVING had our Factory in successful operation for eight months, we desire to express our thanks to our customers for the patronage they have bestowed upon us. We have now ready to do Custom Work on the SHORTEST NOTICE, or exchange Manufactured Goods for Wool, always paying the highest price for the same