Mr. B. rram Doane who has been attending an Electrical Engineering school in Chicago for several weeks will again resume his studies at that point. He was called home upon the death of his father.

The Home of the Soul.
In olden times, it was believed that the seat of the soul was the stomach most likely for the reason that a man is never so completely used-up as when his stomach is out of order. For the cure of the ordinary stomach troubles, there is nothing quite so prompt and satisfactory as Chamberlain's Tablets. They strengthen the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. Give them a trial. They only cost a quarter.

MARRIED.

Elmer Markley and Miss Francis Ewert were united in marriage at St. Joseph's church Tuesday morning. Mr. Markley is proprietor of the Spring and Jewell business, which he recently purchased. He is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Eker, at whose place the ceremony took place. Their many friends enjoyed a dance in celebration of the marriage at the Opera House on Tuesday evening.

His Friend Recommended Them.
"Six years ago," writes W. H. Shadwell, Stanley, Va., "I had kidney trouble, and at times was unable to raise myself in bed. Foley Kidney Pills were recommended to me by the Chief of the Fire Department. After using 3 bottles I was completely relieved and have never had a return of the symptoms." Why suffer when you can get relief from rheumatic pains, backache, swollen, sore and stiff joints, sleep disturbing bladder weakness and other symptoms of disordered kidneys. The Evangelical congregation, of Trinity church has secured the services of a new minister, R. v. T. Menl, who delivered his initial sermon here Sunday morning.

Good Help In Summer.
Indigestion causes worry, nervousness, sick headaches, biliousness, coated tongue, bad breath, bloating, gas, constipation and constant distress. Henry C. Thorne, 1002 Harrison Ave., Boston, Mass., writes: "Since taking Foley's Cathartic Tablets I feel fine." They cleanse the bowels, sweeten the stomach and invigorate the liver. Cause no pain, no nausea. Not habit forming—just a good, wholesome physic. For sale at Rose Mehlinger's.

The annual commencement exercises of Jasper College was held at St. Joseph's Hall Friday night and was well attended. A good program was given but on account of weather conditions the radio concert was not a success.

A movement is under way to give Jasper a city park, which would no doubt be a fine thing for the city. The movement was started by some of the women's clubs and later joined by other organizations.

Foley's Honey and Tar COMPOUND

STOPS THAT DISTRESSING COUGH—checks it quickly and surely, clears the throat of phlegm and mucus, and coats the raw, inflamed surfaces with a healing, soothing medicine.

Don't Cough Until Weak

"I am an old lady, 75 years old, and I had a very bad cough from having a gripe. I thought it a good time to try Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, and I sent and got a bottle, and it stopped my cough, and I got better. So now I am around the house again."

Jacob H. Seng

Former County Auditor Gone on the Last Journey.

On Friday night June 2nd, the many friends of Jacob H. Seng learned of his death at St. Mary's hospital at Evansville, Ind. His remains were interred in Fairview cemetery with funeral rites conducted by R. v. Anselm Schaeff O. S. B. of St. Meinrad Seminary.

Thus ends a long and active life spent in Dubois Co. The deceased was born in Celestine, Ind. on Nov. 5, 1849.

As a business man and public official Mr. Seng was well known and respected. He served both as a ship trustee and County Auditor and in both capacities was first of all a servant of the people. In politics he was an unwavering Democrat, in religion a Catholic.

Mr. Seng preceded him in death some time since, he was the father of twelve, four of whom survive. They are Frank J. Seng, Ernest C. Auditor, Henry J. Seng, deputy auditor and Misses Alice and Loretta.

Miss Ruth A. Doane, who was called home from New York City to the funeral of her father, will remain for a few weeks with her mother.

Miss Delia Doane, who had entered Boonington University for the summer course, was called home upon the sudden death of her father, but resumed her duties in school this week.

Why Suffer from Rheumatism?
Do you know that nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply inflammation of the muscles or joints, rheumatism, neither of which require any internal treatment? The pain may be relieved by applying Chamberlain's Liniment, which makes sleep and rest possible, and that certainly means a great deal to any one afflicted with rheumatism.

A Democratic meeting will be held at Winslow tomorrow at which Tom Taggart and Ex-Governor Ralston will speak and a large crowd is expected to attend.

Will Surely Help Others.
The condition of the human body is reflected by the condition of the kidneys and blood. If the kidneys are not functioning, waste products and poisons cannot be eliminated. Rheumatic pains, swollen, aching and stiff joints and muscles, dizziness and blurred vision are symptoms of kidney trouble. Mrs. A. Lechner, 1129 Main Ave., Clifton, N. J., writes: "Foley's Kidney Pills have helped me and I gladly give you permission to use this testimonial, for they will surely help." Sold by Rose Mehlinger.

From the University of California comes word that by observing the "creep" of the earth earthquakes may now be predicted as accurately as the weather. This will interest folks along the Southern Pacific seaboard. It will enable them to install shock absorbers on their beds, and pile sand bags against the plate glass before the quake arrives, says the Toledo Blade. It will warn them in sufficient time to permit early bathing. Being trapped in a bathtub with a house tottering about one's ears is an embarrassing entertainment. It will allow the stretching of nets beneath loose ceiling plaster and the lashing of canned goods to pantry shelves. The news will interest Easterners as well. It will provide ample time to prepare a knowing grin to greet the yarn that follows every up-valley west of the Rockies denying the occurrence of an earthquake.

Tentative approval by the Board of Education of a plan to teach English on a large scale to adult foreigners was announced at the monthly meeting of the Allied Patriotic societies at Frances tavern. The proposal contemplates enlisting the assistance of the 200,000 students in the upper grades of the city's schools, who are grounded in the speaking, reading and writing of grammatical English, in the performance of what is regarded as a civic service, looking forward to the betterment of the whole community, says the New York Tribune. The foreign-tongue colony, it is pointed out, is now recognized as one of the greatest evils attendant upon the overgrowth of large congested cities, and the committee's suggestion for a more rapid amalgamation of aliens is that a large number of these students be encouraged each to undertake the instruction of one adult foreigner in English. Hall's Catarrh Medicine.

Those who are in a "run down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them much more than when they are in good health. This fact proves that while Catarrh is a local disease, it is greatly influenced by constitutional conditions.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE consists of an Ointment which Quickly Relieves by local application, and the Internal Medicine, a Tonic, which assists in improving the General Health. Sold by druggists for over 40 Years. F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio.

CRITICS AND REVIEWERS

What is to be understood when a literary critic describes a new piece by a young lady from St. Louis as "the greatest play of modern times"? asks the Villager. When he announces that a popular actress, an artful little entertainer, is "masterly," "superb," and "perfect," are we to think of Bernhard and Siddons, or are we to think of them? When a college professor of literature, reviewing one of the season's several "best sellers" among the novels, describes it as an epic poem, what are we to make of it? When these, who serve the time as critics and reviewers, discover genius, not once a decade, but once a month, when every day finds them celebrating works of art which are "epoch-making" which are "supreme achievements," which have power to stir the human heart to the very depths, just how are we to take this kind of encomium?

Good health may cost less than $50 a year—the amount allowed in the minimum budget prepared by the New York bureau of municipal research to govern the expenditures of a family of five—but it is easy to believe that the total of doctors' and dentists' bills might easily exceed that amount. Society has not yet decided how to provide adequate treatment for cases when the simpler cures of a family which, however, while sufficient for ordinary purposes, fails to meet the cost of extraordinary expenses, says the Baltimore Sun. A plan of action which is receiving serious attention is that which proposes the extensive use of pay clinics where, for a moderate fee, the patient can obtain the help of a specialist, whom, under usual conditions, he can consult only on a charity basis or through payment of the full charge for an office appointment.

Sometimes there is money in dreams. Remarks the London Daily Mail. A plumber of Bristol once made £10,000 out of a dream idea of his wife's. One night she dreamed that she saw her husband making shot by dropping it from the top of a high tower. The vision was so vivid that she was convinced it was not a dream, but an inspiration. And next morning she told her husband all about it. The plumber was a practical man and did not believe in dreams. But, urged by his wife, he made a few experiments. He was surprised to find that he could make excellent small shot by pouring molten lead through a sieve into water from a height. So he took out a patent, which he sold for £10,000, and hoped that his wife would dream again.

The amazon has manifested herself in the far east Rand, South Africa, and with a perfectly inconsistent, but delightful denouement, says the Christian Science Monitor. Of course, it started as a demonstration of the Young Nationalist party. At Brakpan, a number of women charged through police lines and captured an official. The police considered this highly uncalled for, but, believing in tact, gently argued with the enraged women. And the result of the argument was that the ladies withdrew and afterwards took afternoon tea with the police officers! Nothing short of an exclamation mark should end that bit of news. These honey-tongued and mellifluous South African policemen are needed violently in other parts of the British Empire, Ireland and India for instance!

Rust, the enemy of mechanical progress, has been conquered, says Paul H. Elgholz of San Francisco, who has announced the perfection of an antirust solution pronounced by chemical experts the first successful effort to combat the red destroyer. He says his solution has an affinity for nothing but rust and is not harmful to the metal itself. He was aided in his experiments by his wife. Elgholz began his experiments while working as a piano tuner, where he encountered difficulty with rusty tuning keys.

Returns to the investors in an alleged get-rich-quick scheme were promised "shortly." The head of the concern disappeared, leaving no word that he will be back "shortly." Meantime, the investors are getting along "shortly."

FIND ANCIENT SCRIPT

Writing Similar to Chinese Discovered in Idaho.

Scientists Will Explore Caves and Decipher the Writing Before Revealing Location—May Find Valuable Relics.

Boise, Idaho.—Symbols and signs, chiseled in the bedrock, ages ago, were discovered recently on lava rocks in a remote region of Owyhee county, southern Idaho.

Many of the inscriptions bear striking resemblance to Chinese characters of today, it was said, although archeologists say they may be 500 years old.

Discovery of the inscriptions, which are said to be of archeological treasure, was made by Robert Lambert, a Boise geologist. Their exact location will not be made public until they are examined thoroughly this summer by a number of scientists who are coming here.

The volcanic rock on which the inscriptions are carved is scattered over a 30-acre sagebrush flat. In the immediate vicinity are several large caves, and the entrance of which the rocks also are inscribed. It is believed these caves never have been explored. Possibly, it is said, they contain many relics of scientific value.

Two distinct types of carvings, ideographic and pictographic, have been noted. Archeologists believe the ideographic characters by many years the pictographic. Both systems have been found together on one rock and near them can be discerned what appears to be a third system, supposed to antedate both of the others, but which has weathered beyond possibility of deciphering.

Clear bits of this prehistoric writing are found on one huge water-worn boulder 25 feet long, 14 feet wide and 5 feet high. Near the center is a series of triangles believed to indicate Indian teepees, and next to them are rows of dots and dashes, thought to be numerals.

Resemblance of many of the inscriptions to the characters of the Chinese alphabet was taken by some to substantiate the theory that the North American native descended from a race which came from Asia by way of Bering straits. Indians now living in Idaho, when questioned regarding the carvings, say the more modern or pictographic are the work of their forefathers, but they assert the others to be the work of spirits.

Metropolitan of Kiev Gives Figures From 1917 to 1920—Nine Tortured to Death.

London.—The Bolsheviks in Russia from 1917 to 1920 killed one metropolitan, five archbishops and sixteen bishops, of whom thirteen were shot and nine tortured to death, according to a telegram sent by Archbishop Anthony, Metropolitan of Kiev, to the Archbishop of Canterbury, says the London Times.

The Metropolitan says he has no information concerning the year 1921.

DOG HEARS MASTER BY RADIO

Terrier Cuts Capers as He Recognizes Owner's Voice Calling Him Over Wireless.

Lexington, Ky.—An Alredale terrier in the radio receiving room of the University of Kentucky heard his owner at Pittsburgh, Pa., call him. The owner, F. Paul Anderson, dean of the university, was speaking from the Westinghouse broadcasting station. The dog was sleeping as Anderson's voice came in. He sprang to his feet, wagged his tail and then capered about the radio outfit.

Big Price of Little Land.

Harrisburg, Va.—Probably the smallest transfer of real estate to be entered on record in the office of the County Clerk here was recorded yesterday when a conveyance of twelve square feet located between two dwellings was made for a consideration of $100.

The price was at the rate of $908,000 an acre, it was pointed out. The strip of land was 28 feet long and 5 1/4 inches wide.

Mule Fell on Him.

Greensburg, Ind.—Clarence Melish of this city was the victim of an unusual accident the other day while digging a ditch here. A mule, driven by Thomas Burton, fell in the ditch at the point where Melish was working, and he was held prisoner by the weight of the animal until it was removed by fellow workmen. Melish suffered an injured hip and a few minor bruises.

Dog Tows His Master to a Cake of Ice.

Red Wing, Minn.—When eight-year-old Percy Seebach fell in the Mississippi river, coming to the surface 20 feet from shore, his dog plunged in and swam around until the boy seized his hind legs. Then the dog towed its master to a floating cake of ice, from which he was rescued by onlookers.

A School Teacher From Ohio

ALVIN HENDRICKS

Copyright, 1921, Western Newspaper Union.

Paul Muir found Western life exactly as he had expected to find it. The picturesque cowboys with their chaps and spurs he had always known to be a legend. Nevertheless, a great deal of the wild frontier spirit still survived in this corner of Arizona.

Paul had gone West for his health. He was well now, but the country had grown into his heart and he contemplated settling there. He had bought five hundred acres of irrigated land. Sometimes, though, the appalling loneliness drove him into Falling Brook, to seek amusement.

The hotel was crowded on this particular evening and the bartender tersely explained that the cowboys were in town and that a dance was to be held.

Bessie looked up at Paul with a flicker of amusement and then went on polishing the glasses.

"I suppose you're looking forward to a good time, Miss Bessie," hazarded Paul.

"I always enjoy myself," said Bessie.

Later in the evening Paul entered the dance hall and seated in her chair and looking listlessly upon the dancers, was pretty Bessie. Paul strode toward her.

"May I have the pleasure of a dance with you?" he asked.

"I think you are the only man among this crowd," she said, and they swept in to the dance.

Bessie danced divinely. A new and strange feeling crept into Paul's heart. He led her back to her chair and took a seat beside her. He noticed then that the chair on either side was empty.

"Why won't they dance with you?" he asked.

Bessie's eyes grew wide with astonishment. "You don't know?" she stammered. "Oh, I thought you were so brave."

"But tell me," he pleaded.

"Ask Brown!" said Bessie, bluntly. Brown was the hotelkeeper.

"Young feller," said Brown, laying his hand heavily on Paul's shoulder. "I admire your grit—if you know what you was doing. Clancy's in town and he's as like as not to come to the dance."

"I don't know anything about Clancy," said Paul.

"I guessed you didn't," answered Brown. "Now listen while I tell you, and then clear out. Miss Bessie is Clancy's girl, and he's the best shot in Arizona. If he knew any man had danced with her or spoken to her, except in the most ordinary way, he'd spit him as I'd spit a mad dog."

"Thanks," said Paul brusquely, and went back to Bessie.

"I know now," he said. "I hear Mr. Clancy's in town and that he might object to my dancing with you. May I have another dance, Miss Bessie?"

The girl rose and something in her eyes answered the plea in his. The music started and they went whirling over the polished floor.

Then into the room there strode a little man. In his belt he wore two revolvers.

"Hello, Brown!" he said with a familiar nod. He walked into the thick of the crowd and touched a girl upon the arm. She surrendered herself to him, and he led the dance again.

Paul watched him as they circled round and round. The outlaw seemed not to notice him. It was not until the dance was ended that he caught sight of Bessie.

"Git out!" he said to Paul, and pulled the girl toward him. Paul's fist shot out and the man dropped at his feet.

The room became a struggling pandemonium. Paul pulled Bessie through the surging crowd, got her to the door, and led her to where his horse stood tethered. No one was following them, but inside the dance hall pandemonium still held sway. Paul swung his partner into the saddle. Then he mounted behind her and in a moment they were centering across the plains under the starlight. He drew her into his arms.

"Bessie," he said, "I've only seen you five times, but I've counted each one. I love you, dear. I am going to take you away with me. I've won you from Clancy."

"Oh—Clancy?" she said, with a laugh. "I never saw Clancy in my life before."

"But you were engaged to him," said Paul.

Bessie crept closer to him. "Let me tell you about that," she said. "You don't know anything about me, but you trust me and believe in me. I was a school teacher in Ohio. I had to come West for my health. I soon found that Western men are just as brave and chivalrous as in the East. Everybody wanted to marry me. I saw that I would have to leave unless I could discover some way of stopping these attentions."

"Then Clancy began to be notorious and I thought of inventing that story about his being my lover. I never saw him in my life before tonight. But it worked like a charm. There wasn't a man among them dared to speak to me, except in a civil way, or to dance with me until you came."

John laughed and, bending over her, kissed her.

"I'm going to take you into Goldmine, sweetheart," he said. "There's a preacher there—and then we're going home."

"Home," Bessie repeated, and there were tears in her eyes as their lips met in the secret time.
