

A CHILD'S SILVER CATECHISM.

Q.—Pa, are there any foreign countries that have free coinage of silver?

A.—Yes, my son. Mexico, China and Japan.

Q.—Is free silver a benefit to these countries?

A.—Well, yes—no—I don't hardly know; but you see they are countries that the United States ought not to follow after.

Q.—What sort of people live in those countries?

A.—They are only semi-civilized and many of them are heathen. China and Japan are very densely populated.

Q.—Are they free countries?

A.—China and Japan are monarchies; Mexico is a young republic.

Q.—Are their people prosperous?

A.—Well, yes; in Mexico and Japan; but in China they are as hard up as we are.

Q.—If Mexico is only half-civilized, and is only a young nation, and still has prosperity with free silver, could not the U. S. do as well as Mexico if we had free silver?

A.—It is not right to do as these degraded people do. See?

Q.—Do the people of China and Japan drink tea? and do the Mexicans eat oranges and bananas?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Then the people of the United States ought not to do as these degraded people do, and we should stop drinking tea and eating oranges, should we not?

A.—Well—I never liked tea, or bananas and oranges very much anyway.

Q.—Are Turkey, Italy, Spain and Portugal, free silver countries?

A.—No, they all have the gold standard.

Q.—Are they prosperous nations?

A.—Not by a good deal.

Q.—Why should we imitate these countries? Is it because they are nicer people than the Mexicans, etc.?

A.—Oh, shut up! Your talk makes my head ache.

THEY SAY:

That free silver will drive gold out of circulation; but as there is no gold in circulation, it will be impossible to drive it out.

That John J. Ingalls stands on the St. Louis platform. Any man who can find plenty of room to sit between the "Ten Commandments" and "an iridescent dream," can stand on a very narrow plank.

That Burk Cochran predicts Bryan's defeat. Well, this same B. Cochran Esq., said Cleveland could not be elected four years ago. This is a good year for false prophets.

CHIPS.

The Bryan men are being called "popocrats," and the McKinley men "plutocrats." The definition of the phrases are, the former means that the people rule, and the latter that the devil rules. Which class do you like best?

The tariff question is as "dead flies and a stinking ointment" to the nostrils of the American people. This issue is absolutely defunct, and all the howling derisives of the goldbug Democrats, or the McKinley Republicans cannot move it from its lowly grave. The New York World, Bourke Cochran, Mark Hanna, John M. Thurston and the rest of the McKinley chiefs may drag this decomposed stiff to the gaze of the people, but it will be nothing but a skeleton in armor. It won't even frighten a little child much less a voter.

JERRY SIMPSON says, "figures will not lie; but the d—d liars will figure." Let them figure, fret and fume, still they get no satisfaction from their own labor. They try to figure that the country is prosperous under a gold standard; that a $10 debt can be fully paid with $1; that there is scarcely any mortgages on the farms; that free silver will bring poverty to the farmer and laborer; that the insurance companies, the bankers, and money lenders, are the bone, sinew, muscle and brains of the country; that all the supporters of Bryan are a set of anarchists and bad men. Let them figure, but when the votes are counted, they can subtract their figures from the returns and see how badly they got left.

FROM MCKINLEY and the gold-bug orators, we hear much about the 50-cent dollar to be paid the pensioners, if free silver wins. These same pensioners served their country from 1861 to 1865, at $13 per month, payable in greenbacks, worth part of the time only 34 cents on the dollar, thus getting less than $4.50 per month. If the gold standard men mean to be honest and sincere, they better pay up this deficiency before they say so much about 50-cent dollars. Give the old soldiers silver dollars on their pensions, and the good times they had when money was plenty, and he will remit the deficiency of 1861 to 1865.

WHY A PUBLISHER MUST DUN.

A VALUABLE exchange explains the position of a newspaper as follows: Suppose that a farmer raises 1,000 bushels of wheat a year, and also sells this to 1,000 persons in all parts of the country, a great portion of them saying: "I will hand you a dollar in a short time." The farmer does not want to be small and says, "All right!"

Soon the 1,000 bushels are gone, but he has nothing to show for it, and he then realizes that he has fooled away his whole crop, and its value to him is due in a thousand little dribbles, consequently he is seriously embarrassed in business, because his debtors, each owing him one dollar, treat it as a small matter, and think it would not help much.

Continue this kind of business year in and year out, as the publisher does, how long will he stand it? A moment's thought would convince anyone that a publisher has cause for persistent dunning.—Banner of Gold.

A BROTHER'S BEARD.

"Joe Rose," said my sister, "there is a tide in the affairs of men which, when taken at its flood"—
"Leads on to glory, my love."
"Yes, you are at the flood!"
"But I object to going on to glory just yet, my dear," I said.
"Joe Rose, will you let this chance slip through your fingers? Are you not a widower? Do I understand you to say that you are? I do. Then, sir, I ask, what is your first duty in the present crisis?"

Here my sister paused, but as she discovered that I was unable to reply she continued in the following strain:
"I see you realize, Joseph, that Miss Durang, your daughter's governess, is possessed of excellent qualities of mind and heart. She will grace whatever position she may be called to occupy. But she is scarcely 25 years of age and is surrounded by lovers. Do you know, Joseph, that if only for your daughter's sake I consider it your duty to marry her? Do you know that I should consider it very wrong in you to allow her to marry out of this family?"

I had thought until this moment that my love for Miss Durang was unknown to every one but myself. Now I discovered my mistake.
"Molly," said I, "remember my age. I am 17 years her senior. I admit that I love her as man never loved—a love without decay, and my heart—my heart is breaking, Molly; but, notwithstanding, I doubt if she loves me, I doubt if she ever could love me, I doubt if she would marry me."
"Molly," I murmured, "I will attempt."
"Then you will succeed."

She might have said more—I dare say she would had not Miss Durang entered the room at this moment, with an open letter in her hand, when Molly immediately arose and withdrew.

"Mr. Rose," Fadilla began, "I have a letter here from my brother Roderick, whom you have often heard me speak of. I think I told you that he was the only relative I had in the world. He has been in California for the last ten years, and has just returned. He writes this from New York to ask if it will be agreeable for me to receive a visit from him here. You are master of the house. What answer shall I make him?"

I looked up into her sweet face while she was speaking, and then, as a wave of emotion swept across my breast, I took her hand in mine. She made no attempt to draw her hand away.

"Fadilla," said I in my falsetto voice (my natural voice is so grim that I should as soon think of singing a madrigal in the sun of "Old Grimes" as of using it in a declaration of affection). "Fadilla, I am, indeed, the master of this house, but did you ever think that the house needed a mistress?"

Her countenance assumed the sad, sorrowful expression that I had noted at our first meeting.

"Oh, my friend, do not trifle with my feelings."
"Trifle, Fadilla!" I cried. "No, never! Believe me, my dear girl, I love you truly, sincerely and would make you my wife."

"Can I trust you, Mr. Rose?" looking into my face so longingly, so lovingly.
"Only do trust me—only say you will be mine, Fadilla. It is all I ask," I returned, drawing her toward me.

"Oh, I do love you, Mr. Rose," she murmured, falling upon my bosom.
"Call me pet names, darling—call me Joey," I whispered.

(I have always been sorry that I could not have had this scene photographed.)

When the first delirium of the moment was over, we returned to the subject of her brother's visit.

"Send for Roderick immediately, my darling," I said. "You might have known that any friend of yours, much more a brother, would always be welcome here."

She was sitting on my knee with one little hand laid caressingly on my shoulder, while her dear head was pillowed against my cheek.

"I know a great deal more than I did when I brought this letter to you," she answered, with charming naivete.

Within a week he was with us, and a capital fellow he seemed to be.

"But when is the wedding to take place?" inquired Durang a day or two after his arrival.

"We have not yet decided upon the day, but I wish it to take place soon. Tomorrow I intend to go to New York, where I shall purchase a few presents for my wife that is to be—a diamond or so; perhaps a peck of them. I have drawn $5,000 from the bank, and as I am not a connoisseur of precious stones—and as I dare say you are—if you will accompany me upon this expedition I shall esteem it a great favor."

That evening I spent with Fadilla alone. At 10 o'clock we all retired, Fadilla lingering on the stairs to give me a good night kiss, I remember, after her brother was out of sight and hearing.

When at last I did awake, the bright glow of day was glaring fiercely in at my chamber window, and some one was calling Fadilla.

Dressing myself as hurriedly as possible, I hastened down stairs, and there in the hall I found that remarkable woman, my sister, with little Molly and all our servants collected about them.

"There's Fadilla!" inquired Mrs. Cal-

leton, "she did not sleep there last night, did she?"
"Fadilla! Isn't she in her room?" I asked.
"No," she did not sleep there last night, did she?
"Fadilla! Isn't she in her room?" I asked.
"No," she did not sleep there last night, did she?
"Fadilla! Isn't she in her room?" I asked.

With a cry of alarm I started up, springing into the room, and looking at the door.
"What's that?" cried my sister. "She's taken something from the chest, and now hold it up for us to see."
I gazed upon it for a moment, and there was a set of false whiskers. In the pocket was a card which read:
"Read the note," said my sister.

"Mr. Joe Rose, beloved friend, I take this opportunity to inform you that my wife, Fadilla, hearing that it was your design to present her with some valuable diamonds, concluded she would much rather have the money than such useless baubles, and consequently she has taken it."
"I regret very much that our pressing engagements will not allow us to stop to bid you adieu, but I have left my whiskers for your very remarkable sister to wear in remembrance of yours truly, Roderick Durang."—New York News.

A New Test.
A new test of intoxication was recently suggested in an English police court.

"How do you know he was intoxicated?" the magistrate asked a witness.
"He couldn't ride his bicycle," was the reply.—New York Tribune.

Agreeableness.
The art of being agreeable frequently miscarries through the ambition which accompanies it. Wit, learning, wisdom—what can more effectually conduce to the profit and delight of society? Yet I am sensible that a man may be too invariably wise, learned or witty to be agreeable, and I take the reason of this to be that pleasure cannot be bestowed by the simple and unmixt exertion of any one faculty or accomplishment.—Cumberland.

The date of human life is too short to recompense the cares which attend the most private conditions. Therefore it is that our souls are made, as it were, too big for it and extend themselves in the prospect of a longer existence.—Steel.

Summons.
In the District Court of the Third Judicial District of the State of Utah, County of Salt Lake.

Emily Griffith, Plaintiff, vs.
William Griffith, Defendant.

The State of Utah sends greeting to William Griffith, Defendant.

You are hereby notified to appear in an action brought against you by the above named plaintiff in the District Court of the Third Judicial District of the State of Utah, and to answer the complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons—if served within this county; or, if served out of this county, but in this district, within twenty days; otherwise within forty days—or judgment by default will be taken against you, according to the prayer of said complaint.

The said action is brought to have a decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony heretofore existing between plaintiff and defendant, and granting plaintiff such other relief as shall be just in the premises; above relief prayed on the ground that on or about the 12th day of May, 1892, the defendant wilfully and without cause deserted and abandoned plaintiff, and has ever since continued such desertion and abandonment, without any sufficient cause or reason and against her will and without her consent.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded therein.

Witness the Honorable Judges, and the Seal of the District Court of the Third Judicial District, in and for the State of Utah, this first day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-six.

SUMMONS.

In the District Court of the Third Judicial District of the State of Utah, County of Salt Lake.

Elza Jones, Plaintiff, vs. Henry Jones, Defendant.

The State of Utah sends greeting to Henry Jones, Defendant.

You are hereby notified to appear in an action brought against you by the above named plaintiff in the District Court of the Third Judicial District of the State of Utah and to answer the complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons—if served within this county; or, if served out of this county, but in this district, within twenty days; otherwise within forty days—or judgment by default will be taken against you, according to the prayer of said complaint.

The said action is brought to have a decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony existing between plaintiff and defendant, and that she may be entitled to hold and enjoy her property of whatsoever kind and nature free from the control of her husband; that she be restored to her maiden name Elza Hardie; that she have all other equitable and proper relief and for costs of suit; prayed on the following grounds, to-wit: that on or about May 1st, 1891, said defendant, Henry Jones, wilfully and without cause deserted and abandoned plaintiff, and has ever since abandoned her and said abandonment has existed continuously since said date; and that for five years last past plaintiff has wilfully neglected to provide for plaintiff the common necessities of life, although able so to do.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded therein.
