"Few Women Know How To Boil Water"

This statement was made by a noted teacher of the science of cooking.

She said that it was difficult to convince her pupils that there were many ways of "boiling" so-called boiled foods.

When water becomes hot enough to force small bubbles to leave the bottom of the kettle its temperature is 180 degrees. At this heat water is just right to cook "boiled meats and soups."

When the bubbles leave the bottom and sides of the kettle the thermometer will register 190 degrees. The water is then just right to cook "boiled eggs" and "boiled cabbage."

And when the heat finally starts the whole mass of water into violent motion—the temperature is then 212 degrees (the technical boiling point). This is the proper temperature for cooking "boiled macaroni" or "boiled rice."

Special ovens for boiling are featured in some of our latest

Composite Ranges

These "boiling ovens" send the odor of boiled cabbage and other vegetables up the flue pipe. Besides these ovens "Composite" ranges have many other features which have made all sorts of new economies and new wrinkles in cooking possible. With a "Composite" you can cook meat, vegetables, rolls and dessert all at once with one fire—a system which effects a great saving of time and gas. Our complete line of "Composite" ranges include 50 styles and shapes—you should inspect them—at any of our branches or the big downtown salesroom.
