

HON. MORRIS ELLER

The Honest, Extremely Popular and Efficient City Sealer, of Chicago; Republican Candidate for the Nomination for Trustee of the Sanitary District of Chicago; Both Men and Women can Vote for Him, at the Primaries Wednesday, September 15.

The candidacy of Mr. Morris Eller for the Republican nomination as trustee of the Sanitary District is stirring very much interest among the citizens of Chicago, Cook County. The Republican organization of the city, which stands under the leadership of Mayor William Hale Thompson, has slated one of its cabinet members for the responsible position of Sanitary District trustee.

On account of his great service to the citizens of Chicago, Mr. Eller has been endorsed for the Republican nomination for Sanitary Trustee by the most influential elements in the party. Mr. Eller earnestly solicits the support of all Chicagoans and requests their vote at the primaries on Wednesday, September 15.

Both men and women can vote for this office.

The present administration of the Sanitary District has been a continual orgy of maladministration and scandals.

It must be supplanted by a reliable personnel, and you should do your share to place the Sanitary District in the hands of trustworthy officials by voting for Morris Eller for Sanitary District Trustee on the Republican primary ballot.

Mr. Eller lives with his family at 1301 S. Peoria street, has lived in Chicago since September 22, 1882. He belongs to Phi Kappa Lodge No. 478, A. F. & A. M., Wiley M. Egan Chapter No. 126, B. A. M. Chicago Lodge No. 4 and the Elks.

Mr. Eller has always been friendly disposed towards the colored race and every colored man and woman who has faith in Mayor William Hale Thompson will record their votes in favor of his nomination for one of the Trustees of the Sanitary District of Chicago.

League of Nations Would Drag United States Into Entangling Alliances With European Nations—Maintaining of Boundaries, Settling Social and Industrial Controversies at the Cost of American Lives and Treasure Contrary to American Spirit

Mandates in Armenia Costing Annually Millions of Dollars and Responsibility for the Lives of American Soldiers, the Form of Government for Russia, and other European Questions are for Europe to Settle—Accomplishing Re-construction in America will Give us Enough to Do.

By COL. PHIL BROWN

Assistant Director of the Publicity Department of the Republican National Committee, Auditorium Hotel.

Hon. Warren G. Harding, Republican candidate for President, strikes a popular chord when he assumes that the United States has no call to get into the continental politics of Europe by joining the League of Nations. If the entire of the United States into the affairs of Europe, Asia and Africa should be approved by the people, surely the League of Nations does not afford the open door to an equitable participation of this country. To begin with, in the juggling of the diplomatic affairs immediately following the arrest and doubtful politics of the old world. He takes the position that this country should offer whatever of sympathy it has for Armenia in the trials that beset that country, but when it comes to sending our best manhood over there to protect the rights of that nation, it is time to halt.

Senator Harding takes the position that the right to declare war in which the United States is concerned rests with Congress and not in Downing Street, London. In fact, it is a strong position that must appeal to every American citizen. It is a big job for this nation to assume to take a position the behest of President Wilson, and reluctantly concurred in by Candidate Cox, to go on indefinitely as an angel and a goat for all of the countries upon all of the continents of the world is a bit of bad policy that would finally react to the dissolution of this Republic.

Harding takes the American stand. The stand that was foreseen and assumed by George Washington, the father of the country, when he adjured his fellow-countrymen to avoid entangling alliances in European affairs. The Monroe Doctrine has been sufficient to maintain the boundaries of

To tell such a story with the names of men interwoven, reciting modestly some of their achievements cannot fail to please the anxious heart seeking to know some of the truth.

There are not many cities in America that can boast of more progressive colored people, and with only a modicum of what really is, well told by one who loves his race given freely with pardonable pride need not offend the rest of us, but on the contrary cause them to realize the swiftness of our ascent up the hill of progress.

mistake Great Britain arrogates to herself six votes in the League and leaves to the United States and other countries just one. The United States with its wonderful natural wealth would be left to the mercy of grasping, imperialistic nations extending from the Orient to the Occident and left helpless to be looted for and aft.

Harding along with other Republicans of the Senate did the country a very great service when they thwarted the efforts of the present executive to force this nation into an alliance where it would be bound hand and foot to the North America from the encroachments of the Nations of the old world. It has served to uphold the integrity of this country and of the smaller countries south of us, but the minute that we take it upon ourselves by an alliance such as the League of Nations contemplates, to mess into other people's quarrels and fights, the Monroe Doctrine will become a dead letter, because the European countries will not allow any wider scope than we are willing to allow them.

This position of the Republican candidate seems sound and unassailable.

who deserve vastly more reward than we have been willing to give to them. Anyway why should we wait to say kind things of our friends after they are dead?

Today we have in mind the constancy and devotion of a few earnest, resolute men and women whose noble works entitle them to a liberal consideration at the hands of the writer who without fear, or desire for favor can lavish a frankness of expression that may bring a smile to some one's cheek, or dismount a wrinkled brow.

For more than twenty years Mr. Julius F. Taylor, the dean of the newspaper realm, has published The Broad Ax in Chicago. The persistency and promptness as well as the regularity of getting his paper to his thousands of readers merits attention because it has upon the notice that Negroes have no fixed ideals. Besides it counteracts the idea of irregularity, and draws attention to the work in hand. Mr. Taylor has

DR. M. A. MAJORS WRITES WHAT YOU WILL LOVE TO READ.

The writer has been for several weeks taking an invoice of his many worth while acquaintances in this wonderful, and marvelous great city, and indeed it is a real pleasure to find stored in memory's casket so much of appreciation and genuine fellow feeling for men and women of the race. In earlier years we have spent laborious hours extolling the good and excellent, unassuming human nature, and it was a real joy to write of the noble deeds, and had the splendor of men and women who were doing things. Since the death of our great friend, Dr. Booker T. Washington, the lamented poet, Paul Lawrence Dunbar and Prof. H. T. Keating, are the only characters of renown whose names have remained from the writers pen.

The great are not all dead. There are men and women here in Chicago carried forward the stalwart notions of the progressive men and women of the race, and he has succeeded in carrying forward the noblest principles of which the race is capable in holding fast to the ideals of the national life. The Broad Ax has been of steady growth, and its good is reflected in the unreach spirit of the race for which it is an advocate.

Perhaps within the last decade the leaders have multiplied and shown their personal worth to a greater degree than all the former years of our social and educational development.

The spirit of determination and unselfishness are perhaps the noblest attributes of the individual. People love these qualities and are quick to perceive them. Doing things that help others, make them comfortable and to enjoy the purpose of truth which they make manifest.
