CONTINENTAL MONTHLY.—We have received the March number of this excellent periodical. Its contents are, as usual, varied and interesting.—Terms, $3 per year. John F. Trow, publisher, 50 Greene St., New York.

Particular attention is called to the "Circular relative to the Income Tax," in another column.

The Department of the 17th O. V. I. This Regiment had a most beautiful day for their departure. Early in the morning the soldiers with their friends came pouring into town from different parts of the county, and the streets were full of people during the forenoon.

General quiet prevailed, and everything passed off harmoniously. A speech was made by Major Stinchcomb, on Main street, and by Wm. P. Creed at the depot. The boys left in fine spirits, though with saddened memories of the favorite of the Regiment, young Johnny Little.

EDITORS GAZETTE.—Allow me space to return thanks to those friends who so liberally manifested their kindness at our late donation.

We received $129 58 cash, and $50 worth of sundry articles. C. A. VAN ANDA.

Church Notice. The Rev. Mr. McMillin is expected to preach in St. John's (Episcopal) Church, on Sunday next, 28th inst.—Services Morning and Evening, at the usual hours.

The Ball given by GUST GEBELIN, for the benefit of the soldiers, at the City Hall, on Thursday evening last, proved to be a brilliant affair.—Gust deserves a good deal of credit for the manner in which all things were conducted.

For the Lancaster Gazette. Mr. Editor:—Would it not be appropriate, if not objectionable to the friends of the two soldiers recently murdered in our streets, to have their remains eventually placed side by side, and a monument, commemorative of their death, erected over them by popular contribution?

A CITIZEN. CONNECTIONS.—Mayor Ewing informs us that we were mistaken in saying in our issue of the 4th inst., that a man had been imported from Berne township to act as a special policeman—no such appointment having been made.

Mitchell Morris, Esq., also called upon us to say that in the paper of the same date, we erred in saying that he called the soldiers thieves and cutthroats. Mr. M. says he has a son in the army, and would not make such an assertion. He says he did make the remark of "citizens who were urging the soldiers on." If there is anything gained by transferring the remark from the soldiers to the citizens, we willingly give Mr. M. the benefit of it. That it was safer to say it of citizens than soldiers, no one will doubt.

ROMANTIC.—A soldier, after more than two years' absence, came home and found his wife gone. He called upon her father suddenly last week at Lockville, in this county, where she was living with another man, whom she had married some months before in Columbus, representing to him that she had never been married, and to those who knew better, that her husband was dead.

When her first husband called upon her, she feigned ignorance, and claimed she had never seen him before. The soldier said he was aware of her desertion of him before he returned, but had called to let her know he was not dead as she had asserted.

The first and second husbands did not "flower themselves by showing bad temper"—they calmly talked the matter over, went to a neighboring grocery and drank together, and both agreed to abandon the woman, which they accordingly did.

We acknowledge the receipt of $5 from T. W. Tallmadge, Esq., contributed to the fund for sending the Gazette to the soldiers.

The Danville Tribune understands that Brig. Gen. J. M. Shackelford has tendered his resignation.

FATAL AFFAIR.

Amid so many conflicting rumors and statements we confess that it is no easy matter to give a correct account of the exciting events which took place in this city on last Saturday afternoon. The Prosecuting Attorney has kindly permitted us to read the testimony taken before the Coroner, in both cases. Occupying some forty pages it is quite too long for publication this week. We shall endeavor to compile our statement from this testimony though somewhat conflicting, rather than from the random statements which have been made in regard to these melancholy events.

On Saturday afternoon John Little, John Homan and Thomas Clark, somewhat intoxicated, went into the Boom-crang Saloon of Steack & Monegan, and called for something to drink; after which they came into the front room, and Johnny Little began to talk to George See, whom he styled a Butterant Colonel of the Militia, and proposed that he should come out on the street. After this altercation, the three started out, when George See raised his hand in a menacing manner and told Little that he would mark him; whereupon Little returned immediately and advanced toward George See saying, "You had better mark me now." A soldier named Courtney seems at this point to have mixed in the quarrel, and to be engaged in a scuffle with George See. It is at this point that Mr. John See introduced himself into the quarrel by drawing a revolver from his side coat pocket and shooting at Courtney, missing him.

The second fire, the witnesses, Barnes and Courtney, think was aimed at Courtney, but at this juncture Courtney was knocked down with a chair by George See, and the ball took effect upon Little who was taken to the office of Dr. Wagenhals, where he died immediately. The ball entered the left breast, passed through the great artery, through the lungs, through the shoulder blade, and was found imbedded beneath the skin over it. A third shot was fired hitting W. H. Michaels in the abdomen, inflicting a wound from which he died the following day.

The testimony of several witnesses, and the dying statement of Michaels, agree that the shot which killed him was fired by John See. At this point the front doors of the saloon were closed by Marshal Lantz, and John and George See escaped out of the back door—one of them firing back a fourth shot as they passed through the door, between the front room and the bar room. Whatever may have been the intention in closing the saloon, it was most unfortunate. Many of the soldiers understood it as an effort to shield the murderer, and it also led to a confounding of the part taken in the affray by the two Sees. Soon it was noised about that both of the Sees shot—from this it grew that each had killed a man, and this diverted the pursuit from John See to George, and aided the escape of the former; and these mistakes consigned the latter, when taken, to the hands of an infuriated crowd of soldiers from whom he received such a merciless beating as no mortal ever lived through before.

This every one must regret, both for the wrong done to the innocent, and for the diversion it caused from the pursuit of the real offender.

Much inquiry has been made as to the motives which induced the soldier Dan Edwards, who, with others, went in search of John See, to return to town with the story that he had shot him. We have no definite information on this point but it is probable that under the supposition that others would be able to overtake See, Edwards was instructed to return with such a story, to allay the excited feelings on the street. If this be so, they selected a man whose skill and integrity might accomplish such a deed, and whose reputation for truth, among his fellow soldiers, would induce them to believe him. The effect of his story was as all upon the waves so far as the crowd was concerned; but it probably induced some who else would have joined in the pursuit of See, to desist.

The two Sees started for home, and when closely pursued, George See gave the horse he was riding to his father, and went into a corn-field where he was taken. John See made his escape, and up to this time, we have not learned that any reliable trace of him has been obtained. We learn that the horse he rode came back the next morning without saddle or bridle, leading to the supposition that he had changed horses during the night.

Much praise is due to Major Stinchcomb, W. P. Creed, Esq., and some others, who resolutely rushed into the crowd to rescue George See from the more energetic efforts saved his life, but they could not probably have got him out of the crowd if the soldiers had not supposed him dead or nearly so.

An impression has prevailed that Marshal Lantz struck Johnny Little after he had fallen mortally wounded, and much feeling has been manifested against him. It is proper to say that the witness before the Coroner testify positively that he did not, and only one states that he did; and he was not so near as the rest, and admits that he may be mistaken, which we think he is.

For our readers in this county we need hardly take the trouble to correct the accounts of this affair which first appeared in the Cincinnati papers, so erroneous as hardly to be suspected of referring to the same events.

The soldiers were not assembling to leave for Camp Dennison, but remained here until the expiration of their furloughs yesterday.

See was not the keeper of the saloon. Col. Ward did not entertain the fears of invasion from Berne township, still less from the mythical region of Boone county, and the occupation and barricade of the Court House, is news to everybody here.

We may say a few words on what we believe to be the intention of John See in this sad affair. It will be observed that he did not engage in the conversation, and that nothing had been said to him. He sits quietly in the window as if waiting for the quarrel to assume such proportions as that he might seem to have some excuse for interference. He walked deliberately out from the window toward the stove, and standing somewhat obscured behind George See, draws his revolver from his side coat pocket and delivers his murderous fire with deliberation and effect. He is a man of known coolness and skill as a marksmen. There seems to have been an intention to kill soldiers, and perhaps he was not particular which of them. No testimony shows that Michaels had in any way engaged in the quarrel. The testimony shows that some four shots were fired, one of them as he was making his escape. It is quite probable that he intended to discharge the entire contents of his revolver upon that crowd of soldiers. The ability with which he made his escape, and with which he has since eluded pursuit, all bear the impress of design.

A SAD OCCURRENCE.—On Friday evening, Feb. 5th, Richard Cruik, aged 39 years and 13 days, took his life by shooting himself. He was deranged at times, caused by the kick of a horse, which he received some time since, soon followed by two severe attacks of typhoid fever.

He was a young man of good morals, and endowed with much patience. When in this mood of melancholy, or at any time, he was never known to speak angrily to any one. He is much lamented by relatives and neighbors. The Sabbath before his death, he wrote to his brothers in the army "to do right, whether at home or abroad, and when they were done with this toilsome world, they would exchange it for a better one." We who know him best, have not the least doubt that he has gone to that best land, "where the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest."

Dear as thou wert, and justly dear, We will not weep for thee; Oub though shall cheer the rising tear— It is, that thou art free.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT. BALTIMORE LODGE NO. 22, I. O. O. F. At the regular meeting of the Baltimore Lodge No. 22 I. O. O. F., on Tuesday evening February 16th, 1864, A. T. Mason was appointed a committee and reported the following resolutions upon the death of our beloved Brother Major Valentine Cupp, who died from wounds received while bravely leading his men against the enemies of our country, Sept. 20, 1863:

WHEREAS, It has pleased an alwise Providence in his wisdom, to remove by death our esteemed brother Valentine Cupp, while nobly defending the flag of his country, from the ruthless grasp of its enemies.

AND WHEREAS, He filled his station here, both as a good citizen and true "Old Fellow," always practicing that charity and love professed by us in his daily life. Therefore,

Resolved, That in the death of Brother Cupp, our Lodge has lost one of its most useful members, his wife a kind and affectionate husband, his children a loving father, his country a brave and gallant officer, and the community a good and estimable citizen. We, as brothers, deeply mourn his departure, and feelingly sympathize with his bereaved widow and children in their irreparable loss, and tender them our condolence in their severe affliction.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to his widow, and also a copy to the Lancaster Gazette for publication. J. LAVER, N. G. A. T. Mason, Com.

The Cleveland Herald speaking of BULLARD'S PANORAMA of New York City, says:—"No one should visit this work unless they have a taste for getting into a crowd. It has and will draw full houses. It is not at all strange, that it draws such houses, for in visiting the work, you are conveyed through the principal streets of the city; every house, sign, hotel, church and public building is there. There is a well known beggar, the poor blind woman, the rag picker, and a representative of every class that daily crowd New York City. Ever and anon some noted character, such as Horace Greely, Wm. H. Seward, Dr. Holt, and a host of others, present themselves; and we are assured so truthful is the likeness that a New Yorker would recognize them at a glance. Ten thousand persons visited this work during the two weeks it was on exhibition in this city."

Tennessee has done nobly for the war since rescued from secession. The State has already given 35,360 men to the Federal service, of which 12,000 are cavalry, and 11,000 infantry. The colored troops raised number 5,960 infantry, and 2,000 artillery.

Governor Letcher said recently in an address at Danville, Virginia, that "Stonewall" Jackson was in favor of conducting the war under the black flag, and so expressed himself several days after the secession of Virginia, proposing to set the example by first carrying that flag in the face of the enemy. Jackson was a model "Christian."

A Washington letter says, a well-known Bostonian has invented a new variety of "Greek Fire," which will prove a valuable auxiliary if it stands the tests of the experiments now being made with it.
