Notice of Final Settlement.

Notice is hereby given to all creditors and others interested in the estate of Henry P. Russell, deceased, that we, Mary A. Russell and Mary E. W. Russell, administrators of said estate intend to make final settlement thereof at the next term of the Probate Court of Iron county, Mo., to be begun and held at the courthouse in Ironton, on the 1st day of November, 1880. MARY A. RUSSELL, MARY E. W. RUSSELL, Administrators.

Missouri is catching her share of immigrants; for example, on the 23d ult., seventeen wagon-loads of immigrants passed through Sedalia, to settle in Bates and adjoining counties. Most of them were from Southern Illinois.

Dr. Lou See On, a Chinese physician, has registered in Buffalo, New York, under the law. He says he was licensed to practice by Lou Com Chong, a duly authorized person in the province of Canton, China, Emperor Ton Kong ruling at the time.

Sir Henry Bessemer has taken out no less than one hundred and fourteen patents. The freedom of the city of London has just been conferred upon him. Before his steel process was introduced into Sheffield the entire make of steel was 51,000 tons a year; now it is 830,000 tons.

The Earl of Cawdor and party, numbering six guns, recently succeeded in bagging the extraordinary number of five hundred and ninety-six bares in one day. Gamekeepers and gillies were, of course, unable to carry them, and they were conveyed to the castle in carts.

The emigration from Canada to this country is probably greater than is generally supposed. The Banker's Magazine gives the number for several years as follows: In 1874 the arriving was 32,560; in 1875, 24,051; in 1877, 21,916; in 1878, 25,568, and in 1879, 31,288.

The excitement consequent on the discoveries of new diamonds in the free State of South Africa, according to latest intelligence, has not abated in intensity. Three new rushes have been reported. A gem of the first water, weighing fifty carats, and worth $30,000, had been unearthed at the Jagersfontein diggings.

The canned goods trade is said to be looking up. The canned goods trade at the present time the most comprehensive industry on the books. Everything is now potted from sardines to sweet corn, from sardines to piccalilly. In short the case may be stated in the words of the old saw—what man has done, that man cannot to.

A number of Eastern capitalists have formed a company called the Missouri Lumber and Mining Company. The stock invested amounts to $150,000, and they propose operating in the forests of Southeast Missouri. In Carter county 440 tracts of land are to be offered at the next term of court and it is presumed the firm will bid on several thousand acres.

Lemuel McGee, on his way to work in Vicksburg, said to his companions: "I'm dry, and ain't got a cent; but I'm going to have some whiskey if I die for it." He led them into Samuel Hawthorne's saloon, where they had the drinks, and McGee announced that he couldn't pay. Then he did "die for it." Hawthorne killed him at once with a pistol.

Eastern men visiting the Rocky Mountains generally underestimate the strength and ferocity of cinnamon bears of that region, and lives are frequently lost in consequence. A recent instance was that of three amateur hunters near Deadwood. They foolishly drove a big bear into a corner, and one of them was instantly torn to pieces.

A woman who has "noticed" on the New York ferry boats, says that for one lady who looks in the mirror as she passes to her seat, not less than five men do the same thing. The difference is, of course, that the women do it to see whether other people will be satisfied with the way they look, while the men want merely to satisfy themselves.

Jim Lyon, who was killed in a barroom fight at Millard, Nebraska, was found to be clad in a complete though penetrable armor. Shields for his back and front were made of heavy leather, padded with an inch of cotton batting, and suspended under his clothing by straps over his shoulder. This protection had long given him the courage to figure as a bully.

A company of burlesque performers, called the Merry-makers is going through the country with great financial success, but dares not visit New York city for fear of interference by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. The members are all under twelve years of age, and the star, Corinne Kimball, is only seven. The enterprise is of Boston origin.

The Kansas City Star states that the notorious outlaws, Frank and Jesse James, passed through that city on the 21st ult. Jesse had a through ticket from Boston to Denver, and had been met by Frank. It is said that Jesse had been to Boston for treatment, having been badly wounded at the Short Creek affair, and the wound had been aggravated by a country doctor.

In England you can't try and fall to commit suicide without being punished for it. And the other day a woman was fined for crossing the railroad track at a station and barely escaping with her life. In this land of liberty an American citizen has a right to "muss up" any track in the United States with his remains, if he takes a notion "to get on to the other side" just as a train is shooting into the station.

Although many oaths have been expended on the Mississippi river, it must be admitted that the Thompson river is at present one of the most dammed rivers in the world. The Thompson river is in British Columbia and a small mountain fell into it and dammed it the height of one hundred and twenty feet. As a commercial man would put it, real estate is moving lively up there, although it has a downward tendency.

Major Thomas L. Butler died at the age of ninety-one years, in Louisville, a few days ago. His father and four uncles distinguished themselves in the Revolution. Washington once gave this toast at a dinner: "The Butlers and their five sons," and Lafayette wrote in a letter: "When I wanted a thing well done I ordered a Butler to do it." Members of the family moved to Kentucky, and became of social consequence there.

An intelligent dog had for a long time been sent every morning to a butcher shop at Logan, Ohio, to buy meat for himself. He always brought a five-cent piece in his mouth, and laid it down on the block. One day he deposited a dollar instead, and wagged his tail with unwonted vigor, as though expecting a proportionately larger chunk of meat. An investigation proved that, his master having gone away, he had broken into their money drawer and helped himself to a coin.

The Cumberland Presbyterian church of Illinois and Missouri is now raising a fund with which to build a college. The managers of the enterprise have secured the passage of resolutions favoring the project by the four synods of the two States. They have decided to erect this college in the western part of Missouri, and will begin the work as soon as they have raised $100,000. As the fund being collected for the purpose is already very large they hope to be able to begin the work early next spring.

The woman who pretends to have been responsible for the Boston swindle, known as the Woman's Deposit Company, claims to have been only an agent for a dozen men, who paid her $100 a month for her services. She refuses to give the names of the persons, but says they are eminent lawyers, clergymen and the like. The latter half of the statement is not believed. Some of the cases of loss and calamity among the depositors are very pitiful, although it is hard to convince some of them, even now, that they have been robbed; they prefer thinking that their benefactors are slandered and persecuted.

The bride's father's check for $100,000 was one of the most prominently displayed gifts at a recent San Francisco wedding, and a great many people took the piece of paper reverently up and held it, and thought how that little slip of parchment represented more than the accumulations of the lifetime of thousands of toiling men. They wondered what the bride would do with it, and envied her all the enjoyment she would have out of it, when the cashier of the bank named on the check happened along and explained that the old gentleman didn't have more than $500 in his credit in the vaults. Then the enthusiasm over that piece of paper subsided to a remarkable degree.

There are different ways of eloping. A young girl in Kentucky went to school the other morning dressed in her best clothes and gave an excuse to her mother that after school she was going to the Exposition. The same morning in the same town, a youngster of eighteen left his father's shop, telling him that business would not keep him away, all day. The children met by appointment, crossed the Ohio into Indiana found a preacher, and came home to tell "their folks" all about it, who forgave them all; but in New Jersey the other day, or rather the other night, a young woman let herself out of the window to join her lover, and was shot at three or four times by her father.

An Indian thief was turned over to the chief of his tribe, at San Diego, Cal., and by him sentenced to receive a hundred lashes. The culprit was a big, powerful fellow; but he submitted quietly to being tied to the side of a high wagon, with his legs and arms extended, and his back bared. A stalwart Indian struck the blows with all his might, using a leather lariat, and making the blood flow at every stroke. The victim endured the dreadful torture in grim silence for a while, and then broke out into agonized screams. If he had remained silent to the end, the chief would have restored him to the tribe; but, as he "cried like a coward baby," he was afterward driven out of the neighborhood.

Frank Bury was robbed and hanged by some Chinamen, several years ago, near Gold Hill, Nevada. Soon afterward he met one of the rascals and killed him. A clever and plucky use of his own knife had severed the rope in time. A later exploit increased his reputation on the Pacific coast. He froze the fingers of one hand, and a physician told him they would have to be amputated, at a cost of $100. He decided to save the money by doing the job himself. He fastened one blade of a pair of sheep shears in a vise, stuck in his hand, and struck the other blade a hard blow with a sledge. It was a successful operation. These episodes in his history are called from his obituary, for he has just been killed in a barroom row.

Jacob Sieber, who lives at Greenville, New Jersey, has given an evidence of pluck and nerve that goes beyond anything developed this year. He slipped and fell on the streets, breaking his leg with a compound fracture. He had had trouble with the leg before, and it was stiff and partly un-serviceable; so he sat down upon the curbstone and, drawing his knife, deliberately began to hack off the offending limb. A crowd of people at once gathered about him, but he would not stop for any remonstrance, and the very determined manner in which he was slicing his own leg made the bystanders chary of interrupting him. When he had the limb severed he put it under his arm, hopped to a car and rode home. The case was mentioned to the authorities, and subsequent inquiry evinced the fact that the leg was of cork.

Travelling by stage coach in Nevada is enlivened frequently by incidents. For example, Fried and Moody sat in the same seat of a crowded coach on the Bodie line. Moody surlily said that Fried was taking more than a fair share of the space, and when Fried replied that he couldn't move any further, coolly shot him. "I never take any nonsense," he remarked, as Fried fell dead from the seat. The driver got down from the box and told the murderer to get out. A defiant refusal and a flourish of the weapon were the answer. The driver jumped up on the wheel, seized Moody by the collar, dragged him out through a window, and threw him to the ground so forcibly that his arm was broken. The passengers helped to tie him with a rope, and he was stowed away with the trunks behind along with the body of Fried, after which the journey was continued.

"The Illusion of a Constitution" is the way in which Gen. Melikoff refers to the Russian demand for liberty and law. With a singular liberality, which does himself and the Czar infinite credit, he permits the press to discuss almost every question freely but this and a few others. That is, the journals must not refer disrespectfully to anybody connected with Church or State, of course, and any inquiry into the mode of spending the public money is naturally an impertinence. But as far as abstract discussions go they may have their "druths." They can debate all the stock questions which have agitated the Lyceums of the country since the year one, and he thinks a lot of able articles on whether the pen is mightier than the sword, or resolved that Columbus was a greater man than Washington, would have a soothing and refining influence upon the Russian mind.

A gentleman in Louisville has recently furnished a very effective text on suicide, which those who are thinking of realizing upon their assets and passing away to that bourne of cetera would do well to ponder. This particular party was a married man and a pillar of the church, but things went wrong with him. His friends borrowed all his money; his business partner sharpened him out of his interest in the concern and his wife capped the climax by seeking pastures new in company with an oily-tongued lightning-rod agent. He viewed life judicially and concluded it was not worth living, and, being a logical man, he doctored himself with Paris green. As the drug began tying knots in his vitals and otherwise revolutionizing his interior, life became fairer and fairer; as it slipped away he noticed many points about it which had not been in strong relief before, and one further grip of the green convinced him that he had been plainly and simply a fool. Gathering his disbanding energies together, he hid him to a doctor and put in two hours playing a solo on a stomach pump. After he was finally restored he left to go straight to a notary and swear off on suicide for three years or the war.

Steel Imports Increasing.

The United States consul at Sheffield, England, points out that the trade of that city with this country is assuming enlarged proportions. The total exports of Sheffield goods to the United States during the present year are of the value of 1,008,511, against 559,733 in the previous year, showing an increase of nearly 50 per cent. The demand for steel, and especially for cutlery, in the states has been unusually heavy. The total amount of steel exported for the quarter ending September, 1880, is 101,424, compared with 65,550 in the corresponding period of last year, and the exports of cutlery in the present quarter 74,104, compared with 51,505 in the same quarter last year. The steel exports for the year to the states amount to $28,269, and cutlery to $28,000; whilst the total exports to America within the past 12 months are within 300,000 of the amount sent in the prosperous period of 1874.

Scriptural.

The Widow Bedott quotes scripture to a considerable extent and credits each text to Timothy, x, 16. As there is no such chapter she probably imagines that there is no profanation of holy writ by the numerous quotations.—Somebody sent a New Testament to the New York Herald the other day, and that enterprising sheet being misled by the word "new," and imagining the work to be one of the latest publications sent for review, made copious quotations on its editorial page from the volume. For instance, "A Barber's Text, I. Corinthians, xi, 14." The verse reads, "Doth not even nature itself teach you if a man have long hair it is a shame unto him?" This might be studied with profit by Buffino Bill and by certain classes of lachrymiferous musicians, who consider long hair a necessity in their profession. Next the Herald flings II. Peter, i, 10, at the politicians. This is the verse about making their calling and election sure. A young man committed suicide because he lost $3, and the world thinks he should have pondered on Matthew, xvi, 26: "For what is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" We are very pleased to see the Herald take up this branch of knowledge. If it intends to pursue it further it might purchase an Old Testament, for sale by all respectable book sellers. As it has mentioned the World in the above verse, it will no doubt be pleased to learn about the other New York papers. The Sun is mentioned over 150 times in the Bible, while the Tribune is not mentioned at all. The Herald is noticed once, Daniel, iii, 4: "Then a voice cried aloud, To you it is commanded, O People, Nations and languages," etc. This seems to foreshadow special dispatches and other enterprises which still enable the Herald to cry aloud.—Detroit Free Press.
