

The Bonanza man has reported 10,000 pennies, with which to change for his customers. At his store there are no longer obliged to buy more than you want, because of the lack of coppers.

Nicholas Caezzer, the Italian miner, who was precipitated down a hundred-foot embankment, and received serious injuries, the details of which were published last week, is in a fair way to recover.

Marion Johnson, of Reynolds county, was arrested in Ironton by Deputy United States Marshal Wheeler, on Wednesday of last week. He is charged with cutting Government timber and selling liquor without license.

From that now excellent newspaper, the Poplar Bluff Citizen, we learn that Judge Emerson has been there, looking after business interests, and that George Begley has erected a fine two-story portico in front of his residence.

A fellow tried hard to pass a counterfeit dollar at several places in town, the other day, and finally succeeded in palming it off on Mr. Hotson. Some one told Hotson about it, and he got restitution. The fellow should have been arrested.

Harry Ake has been an industrious student of the Dictionary for the past few weeks. A prize of an organ was offered to the one who obtained the greatest number of English words from the letters composing the phrase, "Handley's Temple of Music," and Harry succeeded in getting words, which number ought to win the prize.

After a vacation of six weeks the Clonlan met at the residence of Mrs. S. H. Delano on Friday, the 14th inst. This was understood to be only a social meeting, but as the members were so well prepared it was thought best to finish the topics under consideration. The presence of Miss Hattie Delano, who is spending her vacation at home, contributed greatly to the enjoyment of the evening. Having now reached the end of the Plantagenet line, it was decided to have a thorough review before taking up the next period and as this would require but little study, a review of United States History was proposed also. The subjects of next evening will therefore be: the First and Second Periods of English history as divided by the Chautauqua Course, and United States History from the first discovery to the settlement of Jamestown in A. D. 1607. Until the weather grows cooler the Clonlan will meet only twice a month.

A BEE STORY.—Mr. A. Begley, of this place, is the possessor of three or four hives of bees, which he keeps on the southern part of his lot, protected by the house from the cold mountain breezes. The other morning he removed from one of the hives several gallons of fine honey, and, after clearing it of most of the stray bees clinging to it, he placed it on a table in his cellar. Less than half a dozen bees were in the honey, and Mr. B. thought they would leave it through an open window on the north side of the cellar, these insects always seeking the light. Other duties attracted the attention of the household for several hours, when Mrs. Begley had occasion to visit the cellar, and she found that all the bees on the premises had come in at the window and settled down on the honey. The two or three bees that had been carried in with the honey undoubtedly went out and informed their comrades, and if they had been unmolested an hour or two longer there would have been nothing left but honeyless combs. He at once closed the window with a blanket, thus rendering the cellar perfectly dark, and left open an inner door leading to the woodshed. The bees of course sought the light, and in half an hour after the cellar was cleared of the intruders.

Another bee story is told by Mr. J. F. T. Edwards; One day last fall he went home, and found his wife with a broom frantically brushing at a swarm of bees which had entered the kitchen through an open window of et armis. Inquiry and closer scrutiny showed that the bees from his six hives had settled down on some eight glasses of grape jelly which had been set on the kitchen table to cool before being sealed. After consultation with his better-half, Mr. Edwards took some chips and starting a smoke closed the doors and all the windows but one. This drove the bees away, but the contents of the jelly glasses had entirely disappeared.

Pilot Knob Chippings.

Miss Anna Garvins, of St. Louis, is visiting Miss Cora Crane.

Mr. J. J. Tierney, operator at Poplar Bluff, who has been to Illinois on an extended visit to relatives, returned to Pilot Knob last week, and, after spending a day or two with his friends, left on No. 1 to take charge of his office.

A party of Italians, eight in number, arrived here a few days ago to labor in the mines. They carried their household furniture with them, and deposited in the Company's office. Desirous of seeing the mines, the party started up the hill and spent an hour or two in looking over the mines. Being satisfied, they descended the hill, came to the office, and opening their grip sacks, each removed a brand new pair of shoes. Having found comfortable seats on the neighboring rocks, armed with hammer, awl and tacks, they began to nail their understanding. Having completed the good work, the little party wended their way to a cheap boarding house, and at the present time are busily at work.

The Italian who was so unfortunate as to take a somersault from Pilot Knob Dump, is slowly convalescing.

Not many evenings since we noticed one of our most popular young ladies, walking up Main Street, head erect, and in an awful hurry. We busied our minds a great deal in what the hurry was, but was not at all surprised the next day on being informed that she was in search of a sewing girl.

Last week, the weather being warm, the colored boys who were harvesting on the Reager farm, west of Ironton, slept one or two nights with the doors open. About 12 o'clock on night a noise awakened one of the men. The ever-present cat was accredited with the disturbance at first, but the mysterious sounds continuing, despite several vigorous "shoo's," a lamp was lighted and a big rattlesnake discovered. His snake-ship was dispatched without delay, and the boys now sleep with closed doors.
