Five hundred tons of ore per day is being shipped from P. K. mines.

All kinds of plain and fancy job work done at this office cheap for cash.

Our advertisers are booming, as it is proper they should. See elsewhere.

The new air compressor at Pilot Knob Mines will be in full operation in about one week.

Eighteen new Rand drilling machines will start up in about one week at the Pilot Knob Mines.

Pay day at the Knob last Saturday. The workmen were happy over their good luck in contract work last month: all made good wages.

If you wish to see the business done at the Ore & Steel Company's Store, just pay a visit and be convinced that they keep all kind of goods and an able body of clerks.

Rev. Pecke, of De Soto, held services in St. Paul's Church, Ironton, last Sunday, morning and evening. His able discourses were heard by large and attentive congregations.

C. W. Tetwiler went hunting last Monday morning, and killed a deer within two miles of town. That was more than he accomplished in his month's hunt in remote regions. This is the boss section for every desirable thing, we do believe.

Last Friday night was a wet one. The rain came down in torrents the whole night long, and next day the creeks all put on the appearance of full-grown rivers. They ran down again as quickly, and travel was impeded for a short time only.

The wife of Sanford Russell, Esq., last Sunday morning, presented him with a nice little baby-girl, and he is correspondingly happy. Though neither party went to church that day, we are inclined to believe it was none the less a day of thanksgiving to them.

It is rumored that the railroad managers have about concluded to locate a hospital here for the care of sick and wounded employes. A better point could not be selected, for reasons which we have frequently given, if its health you're after, come to the Arcadia Valley.

Sheriff Fletcher says the man who was arrested last week for burglarizing the Ironton depot is a "crank" of the first water. There is something wrong in his cranium, for what profiteth it a man to steal railroad tickets without the agent's stamp duly impressed thereon?

The St. Louis Ore and Steel Company have commenced building a dam on the creek which runs by the furnace from the east. The conformation of the ground is favorable, and, when completed, the water will be close to the point needed. In dimensions the dam will about equal the big dam at Iron Mountain.

The Herdle will resume its regular trips between Ironton, Arcadia and Pilot Knob, commencing next Monday. It will, also, make occasional trips to the Granite Quarry. The conveyance, while running, proved a great convenience to the public, and we hope its patronage in the future will be such as to make it a permanent feature of the Valley.

To Judge Russell we are indebted for a half-dozen potatoes that filled a peck measure to overflowing; to Thos. A. Roberson, for a head of cabbage weighing twelve pounds; and to C. W. Russell, for four sample beets, the largest weighing fourteen pounds. All are very creditable specimens of garden-truck, and we don't believe they can be eclipsed in any section of the county.

Bro. McGuire, that "gives us 'clean away.'" But 'twas not so writ by us; neither did we know that the tortured captian had been taken from the Cash-Book. The exchange from which we copied the sentence, had it "What is our Teachers doing?" and we so rendered it, with a word or two in reference to the need of teachers in the vicinity of some newspaper offices. Do you ask a more complete amende?

Lodge No. 275, A. O. U. W., has been organized in Ghermanville, and the following officers duly installed: Dr. O. Haley, P. M. W.; J. Orrick, M. W.; P. M. Maberry, Foreman; P. A. Cox, Overseer, Wm. Schneider, Recorder; Samuel Timmerman, Financier; Jos. Ranft, Receiver; and Wm. C. Mayes, Guide. The Lodge meets every Tuesday evening in its hall at Ghermanville, and transient brethren are cordially invited to attend.

A guide-post which directed to Springfield in the west, and Patterson and Greenville on the south, being pulled down by some mover's hitched mules, lay in the road a few days, opposite the Hiney farm. What has become of the board? Has its temptation for kindling wood been too much for the honesty of the hunting party who passed next that way, or has the roadviewer carefully "gathered" it to be replaced for the benefit of those strangers who may be compelled to travel our roads this winter?

Sam. Rice, of Reynolds county, is again confined in our jail by reason of being dangerously insane. Several years ago he became unmanageable, and was sent to the asylum at Fulton, where he was treated, and, after the lapse of several months, pronounced cured and sent home. He got along very well for a short time, when he again became a little "off," getting worse until last week, when he drove his family from home at the point of a pistol. A warrant issued for Rice's arrest, and Sheriff Harrison apprehended him and brought him to the jail here for safe keeping. The unfortunate man will be tried next week, and will in all probability be re-manded to the asylum.

There was a young man from Foughkeepsie, who for his health took a trip o'er the deep sea. Smith's Bile Beans made him well, and we dislike to tell— But so good did he feel he got tipsy. For sale at the Pilot Knob Drug Store.

Ed. Register—Often as you have called attention to the bad condition of the toll-way bridge over our Valley's river, it is still left in so dangerous a state as to be a trap for unwary persons at all times, and even for the most cautious of a dark night. Now, will you please to tell us who shall have to foot the bill if some one should break a leg in it?

Shepherd Mountain Mine.

Ed. Register—The above mine is located about one and one-third miles west of Pilot Knob mines. Its base covers an area of 800 acres, and is about seventy feet higher than Pilot Knob. This mountain seems to be penetrated with veins of iron ore running in different directions, varying in size from four inches to fourteen feet thick. The ores are classed as the specular and magnetic oxides, and no doubt are of an igneous origin, with the veins extending downward to a great depth. The principal workings have been confined to the western and eastern sides of this mountain. On the east side, facing Pilot Knob, an open cut and tunnel has been run in on the course of the vein, (which is west of south), and a good deal of ore has been taken out. Here the vein is from four to ten feet wide, and vertical. The open cut is about two hundred feet in length, and at the end of the cut a tunnel is driven into the hill on the course of the vein one hundred feet or more. This vein, as it approaches the center of the hill, disappears almost entirely, and operations had to be suspended. The above vein is known as the north vein of Shepherd Mountain.

On the western slope of the hill, and about one quarter of a mile west of the north vein, is an open cut about two hundred feet in length, running east on the course of the vein when it gives out as it approaches the center of the hill. In the bottom of this cut there is a shaft sunk to the depth of two hundred feet, and the vein, it appears, will not pay for any further outlay of capital. This vein runs east and west, and vertical. In examining these two veins, I find the course of strike of the north vein to be west of south, while the western vein's course or strike is east and west. It will be easily seen that those two veins must cross each other at some point on the hill, unless there is some fault in the formation that has thrown one or both of those veins out of their position. Or it may be one and the same vein thrown or split by some upheaval, each part taking different courses at the surface to become situated at greater depths. In starting from a point on the north side of the mountain and taking the wagon road and following it up the hill, one will find that he is on a ridge that will lead him to the highest point on the mountain. This ridge undoubtedly crosses or divides the two above described veins and no doubt is the main cause of the disturbance in this vein or veins. It will be plainly seen that the shaft (in this western cut) was sunk in or too near the disturbance, and never ought to have been sunk vertically. The result is, the bottom of the shaft is no doubt in the ridge, dyke or fault. In examining the ore in these two veins it can be easily seen that the ore has been ejected, from below, and has come up lengthwise of the vein. Instead of tunneling on a level course, or sinking vertical shafts the ore must be followed by inclined shafts or the course of the ore shutes, and it will lead to great depths and in paying quantities. Any one who visits the above cuts and works of Shepherd Mountain can't avoid seeing that the location of this shaft was very unfortunate, and that those who selected it could not have had any practical experience in mining, when the dyke or fault was so plainly to be seen in the open cut. The dyke or ridge has thrown the north vein to the south, while it has thrown or cut off the east and west vein. The above mining operations and plans were laid out by the old administration, and it was almost impossible for the new administration to make any changes in this mine, as the shafts were down nearly to their present depth, and the incline plants, drums, ore pockets, tramways, pumps, etc., were all in their present position, before the general manager, J. C. Simpson, took charge of the mines. So it is plainly seen that there is really no blame attached to Mr. Simpson for closing down Shepherd Mountain Mine, when everything appeared to oppose the successful working of the mine. C. W. B.
