LOCAL BREVITIES.

And it won't be long until the candidate comes.

Have you forgotten all your New Year resolutions?

Collector O'Neal is after the delinquent tax-payers.

All the trains have been about on time the past week.

Attend the farmers' meetings at the courthouse to-morrow.

The offices in the courthouse and all the halls are being repainted.

Is it the province of Poplar Bluff to unload her plague-stricken upon Ironton?

The birds are beginning to whisper of prospective candidates in the spring time.

A pusher crew was "laid off" one day last week—leaving five now at work.

There are said to be numerous applicants for the positions of census enumerators.

The stove market is "off"—there being quite a drop in the price the first of the week.

We do hear of a wedding "in the spring time, gentle Annie," but rumors are so easily started.

Sunday was as balmy and fair as a day in early springtime, and numbers spent the afternoon driving.

The stockholders of the Leadington Lead Company held their annual meeting in Farmington next Wednesday.

The screen factory is running a full force of hands and has turned out more work than up to the present time last year.

The traveling troupes are giving this town the go-by. There hasn't been a good show here for a very long time.

Mr. Birch is a fearless preacher. He preaches with great power and his message goes straight home to his hearers.

P. W. Whitworth of Pilot Knob now drives about the Valley in a stylish and modern "spider." P. W. is strictly up-to-date.

Wm. H. Webb, formerly of this county, arrived in Ironton Monday. Mr. Webb expects to return to the Klondike in the spring.

Now some of the prophets are saying that there will be no more real cold weather. Our zero weather last winter came in February.

Joel Hines, quite a prominent attorney and former Prosecuting Attorney of Wayne county, died at a hospital in St. Louis Wednesday of last week.

The work of repairing the dam at Pilot Knob is not yet completed. It is thought a small force of men will be put to work washing ore early in the spring.

Very large congregations are attending the meetings at the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Birch is a very attractive speaker as well as a most excellent cornetist.

To Mr. A. Rieke the junior is indebted for an exceedingly handsome deck of Anheuser-Busch playing cards. They are lovely works of art. Mr. R. has our sincere thanks.

If a man's in love that's his business; if a girl's in love that's her business. Then why should every old gossip and busy body, in town and out of town, make it their business?

Most of the road commissioners appointed at the late term of County Court have refused to serve. It is likely there will be little work done on the roads under the present law.

Major Rainwater and a party of capitalists from St. Louis were here last week and drove to the Silver Mines. The object or intention of their visit has not been made public.

The announcement that the barber shops would open again on Sunday brought the following declaration at prayer meeting in one of the churches last week: "The devil still has a strong hold in Ironton."

"Coin on Money. Trusts and Impertinence" is a new book from the pen of W. H. Harvey. A copy of it should be in the hands of every voter. Enclose 25 cents to Coin Publishing Co., Chicago, and get a copy by return mail.

W. P. McCarver has a reduction sale now going on. Object I am going to commence a Wholesale Saddle and Harness Factory in the near future. I respectfully solicit your patronage at The New Union Market, Ironton, Mo.

Some people they pray
Some people they pay,
And others 'bout neither seem greatly to bother;

The right sort of man
Pays when he can,
And doesn't make one to answer for 't'other.

Among the REGISTER's callers the past week was Mr. James Cuthbert of Topeka, Kansas. Twenty-five years ago Mr. Cuthbert was employed as a stone cutter at the granite quarry, Graniteville. He is now in the stone business in Topeka, with Mr. Sargent, a former resident here. Their old friends will be glad to know that they are prospering.

The Republicans—about eight of them—held a meeting at the courthouse Saturday. It is said that one of the questions before the meeting was to agree as to who they should recommend as census enumerators in this county.

Arrangements have been made to have some music at the farmers' meeting at the courthouse Friday afternoon. Several of the ladies are taking an interest in the affair, which insures the public that the programme will be all that could be desired.

The REGISTER is in receipt of a card from Mr. James Buford announcing the marriage of his daughter, Anna, to Mr. Thos. Mount Williams in St. Louis, January 10th. Mr. and Mrs. Williams will be "at home" after February 1st, Cape Girardeau, Missouri.

R. L. Goode, of Springfield, Mo., candidate for the Democratic nomination for Judge of the St. Louis Court of Appeals, was a visitor to Ironton Tuesday. Mr. Goode is an agreeable and entertaining gentleman and we have no doubt would prove a model judge.

Rev. Chester Birch, the Musical Evangelist, inaugurated a series of meetings at the Presbyterian church Saturday night last. The reverend gentleman is a musician and a very good talker. The attendance is good. The meetings will continue a couple of weeks.

The local coons sure "went broke" on the recent prize-fight wherein the negro Dixon was knocked out by McGovern. In one instance we are told one of the sports, after putting up all his money, wagered a chicken—the last on the perch—that the negro would defeat the Irishman.

There was a "hot time" at a dance in the New Hall House, Pilot Knob, Monday night. Some fellow got enraged because another man started to dance with his girl. It is said he hit the offender with a pair of knuckles; then a shot or two was fired and the dance broke up. No one badly hurt.

Mr. D. E. King, traveling freight agent of the Missouri Pacific Railway Company, was in the Valley last week arranging for the farmers' meetings to be held here Friday. Mr. K. is an intelligent and affable gentleman and is very enthusiastic in his work. He thinks this is destined to become a great fruit growing country.

The contractors are having a time getting some one to carry the daily mail from here to the West End of the county. Since July 1st last, six different men have had the job, and the man now in charge has notified the contractors of his intention to quit. The price paid is about 85 cents a day—about one-third what the job is worth.

A new time-card will go into effect next Sunday, No. 51, it is claimed, will shorten her running time to Texarkana three hours. The train will leave St. Louis the same time as at present, but will probably reach here a few moments earlier than at present. The south-bound local will reach here as formerly in the morning. These are said to be the only changes contemplated.

The old maid stood on the steamboat deck, whence all but she had fled, and calmly faced a kissing bug, that circled overhead. The maidens shrieked, the matrons swooned and the men all swore amen, but the game old maid like a hero stayed and whispered "come again." There was a buzz—a thudding sound, the old maid, was she dead? Nay, still she stood and cried for more, but the kissing bug had fled.

Postmaster Bishop is arranging to put up three boxes in different parts of the town where mail can be deposited. One of the boxes will be stationed in the north end of town near Lopez's store; another in the south end near Whitworth's, and another on Russell street about two blocks west of the courthouse. The collections will be made by Bob Blanks, the mail carrier, who is paid by private subscription from the citizens.

STRAYED—Five head of calves were turned out in May—three heifers, two steers, one steer, red and white spotted, one horn partly broken off, wearing a small bell and marked different from the others; other steer is solid red and marked with two slits in right ear; the heifers are red with some white, and marked with two slits in right ears. A reasonable reward will be paid for information leading to the recovery of the animals. J. H. Haven, Warren's Store, Mo.

The lines that appeared in this column last week criticizing members of the fair sex with Chicago-sized feet for wearing rainy-day skirts were not original; they are not the views of the editor of this paper, but were reproduced from an exchange, and by an oversight were not credited. We trust this will be a balm to the wounded feelings of the dozen or more fair ones who have imagined the lines were of local origin and written "with bitterness and malice aforethought."

Geo. C. Jacobs, druggist, last Monday filed in the recorder's office, a chattel deed of trust on his stock of goods. The parties for whom judgments are confessed, and the amount are as follows: D. L. Dyas, $291.08; J. S. Merrill Candy Co., $422.08; Wenneker-Morris Drug Co., $22.75. The stock is a small one and will in no way be sufficient to pay these claims. A notice on the front door states that the stock is now in charge of John B. Carroll, trustee for the above named creditors. Mr. Dyas, who holds the largest claim, is a brother-in-law of Mr. Jacobs. Geo. is a clever fellow, and has made many friends in his three years' residence, who learn of his misfortune with sorrow.

Collector O'Neal recently addressed a letter to Auditor Seibert in regard to the law requiring the collection of a penalty of one per cent on all taxes not paid before January 1st. The following is Mr. Seibert's reply: "In regard to the penalty of one per cent on current taxes paid in the month of January 18, 1899, pp. 325 and 326 Laws 1899, requires the Collectors of the Revenue to collect the penalty. The State Auditor and the County Clerk must charge the Collectors with such penalty, and the Collector must pay it, whether he collects it or not. This is the plain requirement of the law and neither the State Auditor, County Court, County Clerk nor Collector can get around enforcing it." From this it will be seen that the Collector has no alternative but must collect the penalty. On all taxes not paid by February 1st another one per cent will be added.

Sylvan Lodge, No. 185, D. of R., installed the following officers last night: Mrs. J. T. Baldwin, N. G.; Mrs. A. W. Garrett, V. G.; Mrs. G. W. Marshall, Sec'y; and Mrs. J. Biemel, Treasurer. After the business of the evening had been transacted and the gavel had announced the closing of the Lodge, the members, with a few invited guests, sat down to an elegant lunch which the hands of the fair Sisters had provided.

There was music, too, to enliven the passing hour. Two hours were very pleasantly spent in this little social reunion, and the time might have been extended, but the approach of the train prevented us from bearing Sister J. S. Benson to Annapolis to put a limit to her stay. The editor acknowledges with pleasure the receipt of an invitation to attend this special session. It is unnecessary to say that, having accepted it, he had a good time. Here's a health to Sylvan Lodge, collectively and individually!

In view of the good work which is being done in the special meetings at the Presbyterian Church under the leadership of Mr. Birch by the evident presence and manifest power of God in our midst at this time, it is hoped that all the people will try to arrange their business and household cares so that they can attend the meetings and have a part in the blessings in which all who come may share. We are certainly fortunate in securing the services of a man whom God has so richly endowed with many talents all of which are dedicated to his Master's service. We believe that God has sent him and that his straightforward message to our community will result in much good which shall be seen in the lives of all who hear him. We rejoice because of the hearty co-operation of the pastors and Christian people. We trust that our work together may not be in vain. All the people are most cordially invited to attend these meetings.

THOS. F. MARSHALL.

For about fifteen minutes last Thursday night between nine and ten o'clock—the beauty of the heavens was transcendent in its fullness. The moon, well advanced toward the full power of her glory, shone down from mid-sky; a few fleecy clouds wafted here and there in minute particles; and everywhere round about the deep blue firmament was bright with twinkling stars. But the Queen of Night herself was the central scene of wonder. Enthroned she sat in the splendor of the court her magic had created, and blessed was the lowly mortal permitted to gaze upon it! The face of the orb was dazzling in its liquid light, and haloed in all the colors of the rainbow, from the brightest crimson to the softest purple. Not all the art of man ever produced so fine a spectacle, and the whole looked as if it felt in his heart the majesty and liteness of human effort. Change followed change in quick succession, each possessed of its peculiar charm, until all too soon the picture had dissolved, and the moon, the stars and the sky presented to the observer only their ordinary mystery.

The City Marshal Wednesday received word from Poplar Bluff that a negro by the name of Bartlett, who had been exposed to small-pox in that town, left that place the day before, saying he was coming here—his former home. The letter further stated that the negro at the time he left had a high fever, and had probably contracted the dread disease. A search was instituted and the darkey located in one of the cabins east of the flouring mill. Dr. Farrar made an investigation, found the negro with fever, but it will be a day or two before he can fully determine if he has small-pox. A guard was at once stationed about the house, and every precaution will be taken to prevent the spreading of the disease—should it prove smallpox.

There are said to be sixty cases in Poplar Bluff—as usual, confined mostly to the colored population. Three or four negro women at the depot here on the noon train yesterday. We suggest to the authorities that they immediately take steps to put a stop to the darkey immigration from Poplar Bluff to this place so-and-so present conditions continue—and, in fact, we'd have no objection, whatever, if the injunction were made permanent.

The following "fish" story appeared in the last issue of the Centreville Reformer: "The waters of Black River are clear as crystal and abound with a great many varieties of fish, the most noted of which is the trout. This is a very game fish in summer, but is sensitive to cold in winter, and will seek shelter under the banks of the stream, logs, rocks, or other places, to avoid the cold blasts. Near the town of Centreville, stands an old elm tree on the banks of the river, with long slim roots reaching back into the firm ground. Under this tree the water has washed out a hole in the bank about fifteen feet, leaving a crust of earth on top. During the last cold spell it was discovered this hole was full and running over with fine, large trout. F. C. Carty, F. M. Hunter, R. L. Parks, Joe A. Baker, J. F. Rayfield, James Hill and others, went to the place, cut holes through the dirt covering, revealing a solid army of large, fine speckled trout, lying on the top of the water, so close together that it was difficult to get a hand between them. The fish were as gentle as lambs led to the slaughter. The fishermen, after examining the fish, selected fifty-seven of the largest, with their hands, lifted them out of the water. Having all which they could carry, they left for home, leaving the balance to the trout, out of which they expect to keep the town fully supplied with the finny tribe during the remainder of the winter."

We are indebted to Mr. F. P. Graves, the general manager of the Doe Run Lead Company, for a copy of the "Souvenir Album of St. Francois county, Mo.," a handsome publication, containing pictures of many of the prominent citizens of the county and giving views of many business houses and residences, and reproducing photographs of a number of the smelters and lead mills in the mining district. One of the Valley's citizens, Mr. Louis Miller, comes in for some well merited praise in the little book. A splendid picture of Mr. Miller is printed with a couple of good views of his handsome residence in Arcadia. In reference to Mr. Miller is the following: "No gentleman in Southeast Missouri is better known or more highly appreciated for his merits than the subject of this sketch. Mr. Miller ranks among the leading architects and builders of the State and many handsome public institutions, business blocks and beautiful residences in this section testify to his high professional qualifications and original designs in architecture. Some of the most handsome structures in this county, notably the Bonne Terre Public School Building, the new Realty Building of Farmington, the Vail-Harker Building, the Old Fellows Hall and Opera House, the Dr. Kelch Residence were planned and built by Mr. Miller. The gentleman is one of the most successful members of his profession in this section and has always shown himself public spirited and progressive in all matters leading towards the advancement of the public weal."

The twenty-first annual report of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, compiled and published by State Labor Commissioner Thomas F. Rixey, is from press and the REGISTER acknowledges with thanks receipt of a copy of the same. It is one of the most complete, interesting and valuable reports issued by the Bureau, containing in "boiled-down" form a great amount of information of interest to all classes of citizens of our great State. Similar works are chiefly remarkable, are almost entirely eliminated by Commissioner Rixey and plain, unvarnished facts, as revealed by patent investigation, are given. This report contains chapters relating to Missouri manufactures, prison factories, proposed remedy for competition of prison labor, wage schedules of prominent industries, government lands in Missouri, production, resources and industrial conditions by counties; record of free employment department; factory inspection, strikes, accidents, digest of labor laws of Missouri, and recent judicial decisions affecting labor. During the past year the Bureau has answered many hundreds of inquiries and seekers of other states who desire to locate in Missouri. The following statistics are given in reference to Iron county: "Located in the southeastern part of State, about 75 miles southwest of St. Louis and 60 miles west of the Mississippi river. Its means of transportation is the St. L. I. M. & S. railroad. The chief productions of the county are live stock, grass, government land in Missouri, prairie, apples, small iron, lead and granite. Including 11,220 acres of government land, the county contains 331,925 acres, of which about 35 per cent is under cultivation, the remaining portion timber, principally oak and pine. Manufacturers: A flouring mill, screen factory and two hub factories are located at Ironton; a hub factory at Hogan; a saw mill and lathing mill at Bellevue; two saw mills at Annapolis; three saw mills at Des Arc; a planing and saw mill at Des Arc, and a saw mill at Arcadia, employing in the aggregate about 150 men. New enterprises desired: Wood working factories of all kinds and plants for the development of the iron and granite deposits. Average wages paid: Carpenters, $1.50 per day; plasterers, $2.00 per day; painters, $1.50 per day; brick and stone masons, $2.50 per day; blacksmiths, $1.75 per day; printers, $1.00 per day; farm hands, $1.40 per month; household help, $2.00 per week."

The following telling of a robbery in the St. Louis jewelry store of our friend and fellow citizen, August Winkler, is reproduced from Wednesday evening's Post-Dispatch. "Three men raided the jewelry store of August Winkler at the southeast corner of Jefferson and St. Louis avenues, Tuesday evening, about 8 o'clock, beat and gagged Henry Stellman, the clerk in charge, and stole four trays of jewelry valued at $800. Stellman was the only person in the store when the robbers entered. Fire engines were passing the store at the time, and there were a great many persons on the corner. Stellman, who is middle-aged, and small of stature, was about to close the store, when two well dressed men entered and asked the price of a banjo box displayed in the window. Stellman walked to the window, followed by the men. He opened the window and was reaching for the banjo box when one of the men grabbed him by the throat and the other struck him on the head with a 'billy.' He uttered one cry for help before the robber's grip choked him. The blow felled him, but did not render him unconscious. When he fell the robbers stooped over him and one of them shoved the 'billy' into his mouth. A third robber entered the store just when the assault was made. This man did the actual stealing, while the other two held Stellman down. He took four trays, containing watches, rings and other jewelry, out of the showcase inside the store. The robbers ran out of the store together. Stellman shouted as soon as he was released. Several persons saw the robbers running north on Jefferson avenue. The trays and nine rings were found by the police at a month of an alley at Jefferson avenue in the vicinity of St. Louis avenue."

The following is from Thursday's Globe-Democrat: "Harry Brant, of 2024 Dodder street, and Harry Kottman, of 2308 Sullivan avenue, have been arrested and positively identified by August Winkler, the jeweler at 2550 St. Louis avenue, as the men who held him up and robbed him in his store Tuesday night. Brant was wearing two plain gold band rings at the time of his arrest, which were identified by the jeweler as among those stolen from him. Other rings, fifteen in number, were found inside the jewelry store and on the pavement outside, evidently dropped by the thieves in their haste to escape. Neither of the men have police records. The men arrested fit the description of the two men suspected of the robbery, save that Brant does not have a mustache. Patrolman Donoghue saw the pair at Blair avenue and Wright street shortly before 9 o'clock and placed them under arrest. While waiting for the arrival of a patrol wagon the policeman noticed the rings on Brant's fingers. The latter claimed they had been presented to him by his sister. At the police station Capt. O'Malley sent for Winkler. On his arrival the suspects were lined up with other men. Winkler exhibited no hesitation in picking out Brant as the man who had choked him while his companion was robbing the showcases. He also selected Kottman as his accomplice. Later Kottman was identified by Martin Loftus, of 2508A University street, as the man he saw running away from the jewelry store, carrying a revolver in his hand. While this was going on another policeman found one of the trays in which were the rings when stolen lying in the front yard of the house at 2526 University street. Other trays were found in the alley in the rear of 2315 University street and in the yards of the houses at 2208 and 2202 University street. The four trays contained spaces for 136 rings in all, of which seventeen were recovered. Both men protest their innocence. They are both laborers. Brant is 21 years old and Kottman 18. They are typical 'raggers' and have borne fairly good reputations in the past. Neither would discuss their case yesterday afternoon, save to declare his innocence. Brant told several stories to the police concerning his acquirement of the two rings in his possession, though during the afternoon he stuck to a tale of finding them on University street. The pair will be sent to the Four Courts this morning, when an application for a warrant will be made."
