Alexander A. Lesueur.

In a few days Hon. A. A. Lesueur will retire from the office of Secretary of State of the State of Missouri, after having filled that position continuously for twelve years. It is but just and proper at this time to voice the unanimous sentiment of Missouri, regardless of politics, by saying that no State ever had a more competent, loyal and faithful public servant in any office. He is singularly fitted for the position. He had been a soldier and acquired habits of discipline. He had been a newspaper editor of many years standing, and in that fertile field had reaped the fruits of experience in public affairs and acquired facility and accuracy in detail work. He had been a legislator and was familiar with the forms as well as the substance of legislation. In all these occupations he had achieved honorable distinction. He therefore came well equipped for the discharge of the intricate and varied duties of Secretary of State. We are making no invidious comparison when we say that the Missouri Department of State has been administered in a manner that has made it a model for all other States. During Captain Lesueur's incumbency not a solitary duty has been neglected or delayed at any time, but promptness and correctness have characterized the performance of every requirement. The office has been conducted with absolute non-partisanship and impartiality, and, in a business way, it has challenged the admiration of everybody.

The public will probably never know how ineffaceably Captain Lesueur has left his impress upon the legislation of the State. He was the author, while a member of the Legislature, of the present law governing the Missouri penitentiary. His wisdom is illustrated in the fact that ours is not only the model institution of this character in United States for discipline, sanitation and comfort, but is absolutely self-sustaining and now has to the credit of its earnings over expenditures more than fifty thousand dollars. Not a cent of the ordinary legislative appropriations has been necessary for its maintenance.

Lesueur was also largely the author of the anti-trust laws of Missouri, as well as many of the most salutary laws regulating corporate powers. He was likewise the author of the present banking law of Missouri, incomparably the best in the United States. The administration of this law devolved upon himself. His work speaks for itself. All insolvent banks have been closed; all weak ones have been strengthened and nursed into vigorous life. It is not too much to say that Missouri has, with the fewest exceptions, the best, cleanest and most solvent banks in the Union. Captain Lesueur could rest his official reputation on this alone, if there were not scores of other important contributory acts of his entitling him to the commendation of an appreciative people.

He goes out of office as poor in purse as when he came into it, but rich in the confidence, respect and affection of the people he has served so well. All will join in the acclaim, "Well done, good and faithful servant."—Jefferson City Press.

Loyalty and Reorganization.

Mr. Bryan's declaration in his Jackson day speech at Chicago that reorganization should be an internal remedy and can not be applied from without is a logical and irrefutable proposition.

The Democratic party, if it needs reorganization—which we emphatically deny—should not be reorganized by party aliens, party seceders and party malcontents.

In the two last national battles which the democracy fought against its traditional political enemy it encountered a fire in the rear from former members of the organization which had much to do with its disasters.

Men prominent among the element that followed these tactics have come forward since the election with declarations that the Democratic party should be reorganized along the lines laid down by those who separated themselves from its standard and fought on the side of its enemies, either actively or by remaining away from the polls.

Mr. Bryan puts the absurdity and impropriety of their advice in a strong light by using the comparison in which he says: "If a man allows his wife to obtain a divorce from him on the ground of failure to support, desertion, or infidelity, he must remarry her before the public will pay any attention to his expressions of solicitude for her welfare; and so those who have lost their party standing because of their desertion of the party candidates and unfaithfulness to Democratic doctrines, as defined by legitimate authority, must reunite with the party before any attention will be paid to their pretensions of interest."

These dissidents ought to be welcomed under certain conditions to Democratic membership and affiliation, but it is clearly improper and in fact a piece of presumption in them to demand to be permitted to direct the party after they have twice contributed to its discomfiture.

Governor Stone accurately defined the sentiment the organized democracy feels toward this element in his great Jackson day address at Kansas City, when he said: "I believe I voice the real and best sentiment of the party when I say we would welcome the return of those who abandoned us on the very field of battle, if they should return in good faith to aid the party with honest counsel and with an honest purpose to support its conclusions; but I do not believe that the party, as a whole, will or ought, either to welcome or receive those who come mouthing condemnation of others who have been always steadfast and true, who trumpet laudatory justifications of their own apostasy and who defiantly proclaim a purpose to seize the party organization and direct its future destiny."—Kansas City Times.

Pogonip.

In the Monthly Weather Review for 1894, page 76, the Editor has given some account of that mist or fog of frozen vapor that is called by the Indian name pogonip. It is there spoken of as recurring frequently in the southeastern part of White Pine County, Nev.; but the following item from Ainsley's Magazine, as reprinted in the Washington Evening Star of October 27, 1900, gives further interesting information:

This phenomenon occurs most frequently in the northern part of Colorado, in Wyoming, and occasionally in Montana.

About two years ago a party of three women and two men were crossing North Park in a wagon in the month of February. The air was bitterly cold, but dry as a bone and motionless. The sun shone with almost startling brilliancy. As the five people drove along over the crisp snow they did not experience the least cold, but really felt most comfortable, and rather enjoyed the trip. Mountain peaks 50 miles away could be seen as distinctly as the pine trees by the roadside.

Suddenly one of the women put her hand up to her face and remarked that something had stung her. The other members of the party did the same thing, although not a sign of an insect could be seen. All marveled greatly at this. A moment later they noticed that the distant mountains were disappearing behind a cloud of mist. Mist in Colorado in January! Surely there must be some mistake. But there was no mistake, because within ten minutes a gentle wind began to blow, and the air became filled with fine particles of something that settled like diamond dust in the sunshine. Still the people drove on until they came to a cabin where a man signaled to them to stop. With his head tied in a bundle of mufflers, he rushed out and handed the driver a piece of paper, on which was written: "Come into the house quick, or this storm will kill all of you. Don't talk outside here."

Of course no time was lost in getting under cover and putting the horses in the stables. But they were a little late, for in less than an hour the whole party was sick with violent coughs and fever. Before the next morning one of the women died with all the symptoms of pneumonia. The others were violently ill of it, but managed to pull through after long sickness.

"I saw you people driving along the road long before you got to my house, and I knew you did not know what you were driving through," said the man, as soon as the surviving members of the party were able to talk. "That stuff you saw in the air was small particles of ice, frozen so cold that it goes clear down into the lungs without melting. If one were to stay out a few hours without covering his head he would surely die. One winter about eight years ago a whole Indian tribe across the Wyoming line died from its effects. The Indians are more afraid of it than they are of rattlesnakes, and call it the 'white death.'"

Many an innocent little darling is suffering unfeeling agony and cannot explain its troubles. Mark your child's symptoms, you may find it troubled with worms; give it WHITE'S CREAM VERMIFUGE and restore it to quietness and health. Price 25 cents. For sale by G. W. Marshall.

Our Leper "Subjects."

The official admission that "no less than 30,000" cases of leprosy are on record in the Philippine Islands will be, as the War Department anticipated, a startling piece of information to the people of the United States. It is doubtless the most pitiable and loathsome affliction that is visited upon the human race, and still worse is the fact that to date medical science has discovered no remedy either to alleviate materially its accompanying distress or to actually prevent its spread. The situation, therefore, is much graver than that which the Americans were forced to face in Cuba when yellow fever made its appearance in the ranks of the army. Dread as is this scourge, it is still subject to cure and ultimate control. But the curse of leprosy remains an unrestrained agency of death, by slow but sure stages.

The admission that "at least" 30,000 cases are on record is accompanied by the statement that many of the victims have isolated themselves, so that it is impossible to secure an absolutely accurate census of the cases in the archipelago. Introduced in 1683, when the Japanese emperor foisted a cargo of these plague-bearing people upon the Filipinos, it has been left to thrive, its victims mingling with the ignorant people and communicating its contagion through both open and insidious means.

How small a part of the actual number of lepers has been discovered can be but conjectured, but it is probable that a systematic search will reveal a most serious condition of affairs. The establishment of an island colony for the afflicted is the most natural, and, indeed, the only, course open. But that will not be the light and simple expedition that it seems to be. A colony of 30,000 victims in varying stages of dissolution will present a tremendous problem to the government. The care of these people will call for nurses who practically surrender their lives when they devote themselves to this work. A corps of physicians will be necessary also, and altogether such a settlement would mean actually the establishment of some special mode of government for the infected islands. The question is one which will tax the ingenuity of the medical bureau of the government, and no one can now attempt to predict the result. Many cases of the disease will doubtless be brought to this country by returning soldiers, who have benevolently but unconsciously assimilated it.—Baltimore Sun.

Persons who lead a life of exposure are subject to rheumatism, neuralgia and lumbago, will find a valuable remedy in BALLARD'S SNOW LINIMENT; it will banish pains and subdue inflammation. Price 25 and 50 cents. For sale by G. W. Marshall.

Religion in Politics.

A Colorado paper, published in Gunnison, prints the following under the heading, "An Inconceivable Scramble." It illustrates how religion is brought into disrepute by being mixed with politics:

"Wire-pulling for the chaplaincy of the next house of representatives of Colorado has already begun. Various ministers are mustering their forces for the scramble for a position that pays three dollars per day for giving the Lord some valuable pointers each morning at the opening of the day's session. To the mind of the writer the whole thing is an unmitigated farce and should be abolished. We believe in prayer and praying, but there are proper places for presenting our pleas to the Creator, and the legislature is not one of them. One needs but to witness the event to see the hollow mockery of it all. Members smoke, write, and even hold whispered conferences during the offering of this three-dollar 'prayer.'"

"Politics and religion never were calculated to mix, and when an attempt is made to force them into the same channel religion is besmirched and politics never elevated."—Protonia Gazette.

The writer of the above is a preacher, but religion not being a cash proposition with him, he sees the hypocrisy and avarice that lurk under its cloak. If those preachers infested with the itching palm and the scabies of notoriety would retire to their closets, the public would be relieved of a great part of that tired feeling and the cause of religion would be correspondingly advanced.—Sentinel of Liberty.

That Philippine Memorial.

Senator Hawley, administrationist, who has charge of the bill to increase the standing army to 100,000 men for the purpose of crushing out the aspirations for an independent government among the people of the Philippines, has tried to put a parliamentary extinguisher on the truth by objecting to the printing in the Congressional Record of a memorial from 2,000 of the leading citizens of Manila, asking Congress to allow the Filipinos the same just treatment that has been accorded to Cuba.

In presenting the memorial Senator Teller, who possesses the highest order of mental acumen united to an acute sense of justice, stated that the document bears the signatures of "the leading people of Manila—lawyers, bankers and professional men generally, representing the best element of that community."

The memorialists declare that autonomy by the United States in the measure granted to Canada and Australia by Great Britain would not be acceptable to the Filipinos, but they want complete independence and the immediate evacuation of the islands by the United States.

The pretense is made by a St. Louis Republican newspaper which defends Hawley's efforts to suppress the truth, that Senator Teller has been imposed upon. It says: "To suppose that any considerable number of the leading people of Manila—lawyers, bankers and professional men—representing the best elements of that community," would favor any such folly as this is to assume that they are destitute of common sense. These elements are far in the minority in the islands and would, if the United States withdrew, come under the control of Aguinaldo and the Tagals."

According to the theory of the imperialist organ quoted, patriotism among the Filipinos is confined to the classes who do not represent the highest intelligence of those people. Ignorance and poverty, according to this method of reasoning, would make their possessors desire independence and freedom, while wealth and intelligence would cause them to desire allegiance to foreign rule.—Kansas City Times.
